PREFACE.

IN preparing this edition of the Odes and Epodes I have borne in mind the fact that the reading of these poems presents, at least to the American student, the first, as well as the best, opportunity for the discriminating study of Latin poetic usage in syntax and diction. Vergil and Ovid regularly precede Horace in our Latin course, but they come at a stage at which the pupil's faculties are so fully occupied in following the verses intelligently, that although these poets are undoubtedly read with pleasure by many pupils, anything beyond a rather dim appreciation of the quality and flavor of their poetry is hardly to be expected. With Horace the case is quite different. Horace is reserved for the college course, often for the second year of the course; and at that stage the student should have acquired by practice in reading and writing such mastery of Latin prose idiom that the peculiarities of poetic language ought to arouse attention and interest. It has been usual for editors of Horace to notice the more striking of these peculiarities in the places where they occur. It has seemed to me better to treat the whole subject together in the Introduction, so that the various usages may be seen in their relations to one another, while their exemplification in any particular passage can be pointed out by a simple reference in the notes. I have desired, in presenting the matter in this form, to leave the teacher free to use it in whatever way he deems best, and according to his estimate of its importance. In my own judgment it is of vital importance ; for although the appreciation of poetry must in the last resort be a matter of taste and feeling, beyond the reach of categorical statement, yet an intelligent study of the poet's language and literary method is the only adequate basis for such appreciation.

In preparing this exposition I have had the benefit of a number of monographs in which certain parts of the subject are treated in a more or less thorough manner, but no previous work dealing with the whole subject is known to me. I am sensible of the imperfections which are inevitable in a first attempt of this kind, and shall welcome friendly suggestions from any quarter for its improvement. Two things ought perhaps to be said : While much, if not most, of my statement applies to other poets of the Augustan and subsequent periods, I have made it with sole reference to Horace ; and in the absence of any sharp line of division between the usage of prose and of poetry I have in some cases purposely included a recognized prose construction in order to set the poetic usage in a clearer light. For constructions not explained in the Introduction occasional reference is made in the notes to grammars in current use, chiefly to Madvig's, Roby's, and Allen and Greenough's. For the last named the abbreviation 'Gr.' is used.

The text of Horace is open in a number of places to the grave suspicion, which sometimes approaches certainty, of interpolation. In the absence, however, of any general agreement among scholars in condemning definite passages, I have not thought it desirable, in an edition of this kind, to bracket verses or strophes which appear to me suspicious or spurious, or to vex college students with critical discussions where they could be avoided. The text has been constituted in accordance with the principles stated in § 39 of the Introduction. A list of the most important variants has been given in an appendix, where I have adopted, with some modifications, the convenient method of indicating the comparative weight of MS. authority used by Professor Arthur Palmer in his edition of the Satires.

In printing the poems I have adhered to the traditional arrangement, which (not without some reason) has relegated the Epodes to the position of a sort of appendix to the Odes; but I cannot do so without advising every one who wishes to become acquainted with Horace, as well as with his poetry, to follow the chronological order and read the Epodes first.

For the interpretation and illustration of the poems I have availed myself freely of the resources which have been accumulated by many generations of Horatian scholars and are accessible in the larger editions and elsewhere. This general acknowledgment covers a great number of suggestions adopted from various sources, for which particular credit could not well be given, even when the author could be determined, in a book of this kind. Especial mention ought to be made, however, of the editions of Orelli (ed.⁴ by Hirschfelder) and Wickham, and particularly of the stimulating and suggestive commentary of Kiessling, from all of which I have derived much assistance. In preparing the life of the poet, I have found, next to the material collected in the Prolegomena of the Orelli edition, Sellar's Horace and the Elegiac Poets the most useful of the works I have consulted.

I take this opportunity also to express my obligations to my friends and colleagues: to Professors Lane, Greenough, and Morgan, from each of whom I have received useful advice and criticism in preparing the Introduction; and especially to Professor Allen, who has kindly read a large part of both Introduction and Commentary, as they were passing through the press, and aided me with many valuable suggestions.

SINCE the first edition was issued, such errors as have come to my notice have been corrected in the plates. In preparing a second edition I have carefully weighed the criticisms with which I have been favored by personal friends and friendly reviewers, with the result that a number of notes have been rewritten. The distinctive feature of this edition, however, is the series of indexes, by which I trust the usefulness of the book will be materially enhanced.

INTRODUCTION.

I. LIFE AND WRITINGS.

SOURCES.

1. Our knowledge of the facts of Horace's life is derived in part from a biography, appended to certain manuscripts of his poems, which has been shown by conclusive evidence to be, in substance, the life of the poet which Suetonius wrote in his encyclopedic work, De Viris Illustribus. There are briefer lives in some of the other manuscripts, and scattered notices in the scholia. But all these sources afford—beyond a few dates and facts—little information that we do not already possess, in fuller and more authentic form, in the poet's own writings. To these we must go for an adequate understanding of his mind and character. In the Satires and Epistles, and to a less degree in the Epodes, Horace takes the reader into his confidence and speaks of his circumstances and feelings with singular frankness. The Odes, too, contain much biographical material, but it is of a kind that must be used with caution. As a poet Horace claims the freedom of his craft and frequently puts himself, for poetical effect, in situations which may perhaps reflect his mode of thought and feeling and even shadow forth his personal experiences, but must not be taken literally as autobiography.

BIRTH AND EARLY TRAINING.

2. Quintus Horatius Flaccus was born on the 8th of December, B.C. 65, and died on the 27th of November, B.C. 8

It is important to observe the significance of these dates. Horace's life began when the Romans were still living under the forms of the Republic; when it closed, the Empire was fully established. When our poet first saw the light, Cicero was planning his canvass for the consulship. His boyhood fell in the stormy decade of the 'First Triumvirate' (B.C. 60-50), which formed the prelude of the Civil War. Horace was old enough to be interested in the later victories of Caesar in Gaul, and the destruction of Crassus with his army at Carrhae in 53 may well have made a deep impression on a lad of twelve. The two decades of civil strife which followed were experiences of his youth and early manhood, and when peace came with the deaths of Antony and Cleopatra in B.C. 30, Horace was thirty-five years old. The remaining twenty-two years of his life belong to the first half of the principate of Augustus, the period of the growth and consolidation of his power under the guidance of his two great ministers, Agrippa and Maecenas, whose deaths, B.C. 12 and 8, were closely followed by that of Horace.

3. Horace's birthplace was Venusia, a colony planted for military purposes in the Samnite wars, high up on the northern slope of the Apennine range, in Apulia, near the Lucanian border. It stood on a branch of the Aufidus, in that region a swift mountain stream, among the wooded hills which culminate in the lofty peak of Mt. Voltur. There the poet's father by shrewdness and thrift had not only secured his own freedom—for he was born a slave—but had acquired a modest farm and an income which enabled him to educate his son. His occupation was that of a coactor, that is, a collector of money—whether of money due for taxes or for goods sold at auction, the corrupt text of the Suetonian biography leaves us in doubt. It is supposed by some that he had acted in this capacity as a public slave, and on his manumission took the name of Horatius because Venusia belonged to the Horatian tribe. But we do not know that freedmen were ever so named ; from the ordinary practice in such cases we should assume that he had belonged to a master named Horatius.

4. Horace himself was born free, that is, he was born after his father's manumission. His mother is nowhere mentioned. It may well be that he inherited from her his poetic nature ; but whether because she died in his infancy — which is probable — or from lack of personal force, she appears to have had little or no influence in moulding his character. His father's influence, on the other hand, was of the utmost importance and value, as the poet himself acknowledges with warm gratitude. The elder Flaccus was a shrewd observer of men and manners. Horace was, it seems, his only son, and the child of his later years, when he had accumulated a fund of experience and practical wisdom, and when he was, moreover, in possession of a competence which enabled him to lay aside his business and give his whole attention to the training of his boy. He naturally knew nothing of ethical theories, and he relied little on precept alone. He sought to awaken his son's moral perception by teaching him to observe good and bad in the world about him, to note the consequences of virtue and of vice in the actual lives of men, and to take to heart these examples and warnings in guiding his own life and guarding his reputation. The ethical code of the Venustian freedman was of a rough-hewn sort. It was a coarse sieve, and allowed some things to pass which do not meet the test of our finer standards. He claimed, in fact, no more for his moral teaching than that it would keep his son from falling into ruinous courses during that critical period when he was not yet able to 'swim without cork.' But so far as it went it was sound and wholesome. And it was effective :

Horace's habitual self-control during the period of his life when we know him best, his dislike of passionate excess either of desire or fear, his temperance in conduct and language, his aversion to the grosser forms of vice, — these were the fruit of inherited traits, fostered and strengthened by wise training. To the same training Horace attributes his habit of critical observation of social phenomena, which led him to write satire.

SCHOOL DAYS AT ROME.

5. Horace's mental development received no less careful attention. There was a school at Venusia, kept by one Flavius and resorted to by the sons of the local aristocracy, — 'great lads, from great centurions sprung.' But Horace's father had higher views for his son, who had already, we may suppose, given promise of exceptional ability. Anxious to provide him with the best advantages, he determined to send him to Rome, 'to receive the education which a knight or a senator gives to his sons.' But unlike a knight or a senator, the obscure freedman had no social connections which would enable him to place his son under the charge of some family or friend; and rather than entrust him to strangers or slaves, he determined to leave his farm and accompany the boy in person to the city. Here, too, he was unremitting in his watchful care. Horace has left us a pleasing picture of the devoted father, going round to all the lessons with his boy, whom he had fitted out with suitable dress and attendant slaves, so that he might hold up his head with the best of his school-fellows.

6. Horace was taken to Rome perhaps in his ninth or tenth year, and remained there possibly until he was twenty; the precise dates are not recorded. Of his teachers only one is known to us, Orbilius Pupillus, of Beneventum, an old cavalry soldier who had resumed his books when his campaigns were over, and at the age of fifty had set up a school in the capital in the year when Cicero was consul. He was a gruff old fellow, with a caustic tongue, and his ready resort to the rod Horace remembered many years after. The course of study which Horace pursued was presumably the ordinary course of the 'grammatical' and 'rhetorical' schools of the day, which aimed, first, at a mastery of the Latin tongue, and, secondly, at the cultivation of eloquence. With these ends in view the training, — after the elements of reading, writing, and reckoning were acquired, — was largely literary, and consisted mainly in a thorough study of Latin and Greek literature. Horace read Livius Andronicus — probably his version of the Odyssey — under the rod of Orbilius, and became familiar with the other old Roman poets, for whom he did not conceive, or did not retain, a very high admiration. He also read the Iliad, as he informs us, and no doubt other Greek classics in prose and verse; and these kindled in him a genuine enthusiasm, which kept him a devoted student of Greek letters, particularly of Greek poetry, all his life.

ATHENS.

7. With this taste developed by his studies in Rome, it was natural that Horace should be drawn into the current which at that day carried the more ambitious students to Athens, in quest of what we may call their university training in the schools of philosophy there. Horace attended the lectures of the Academic school, and the acquaintance which he shows with the doctrines of the other sects must have been acquired at this time. For speculative philosophy and the subtleties of dialectics he had little taste. The Roman, as a rule, felt the strongest attraction to philosophy on its ethical side, where it came nearest to the practical problems of life ; and in Horace this ethical tendency was ingrained and was peculiarly strong. It was fostered by his father's training ; it no doubt added zest, at this time, to his study of the various ethical systems of the Greeks ; it was confirmed as his mind and character matured, and impressed itself strongly on all his writings, even his lyrics. In his later years he protested that his chief desire was to put aside poetry and devote the rest of his days to the study of the philosophy of life.

8. In his philosophical views Horace was, like most of his countrymen who interested themselves in the subject at all, eclectic ; he found something to his taste in this creed and in that, but declined to enroll himself as the disciple of any school. Of his religious belief it is not possible to speak definitely,—probably it never crystallized into definite shape in his own mind. For a time he was a convert to the doctrine of Epicurus,—probably from reading Lucretius, whose poem was published in his boyhood,—and believed that there were gods, but that their serene existence was never troubled by any concern for the affairs of men. In one of his odes he professes to have been startled out of this ‘crazy’ creed by the actual occurrence of what the Epicureans averred to be a physical impossibility,—a clap of thunder in a clear sky. It is not likely that this experience had the importance in actual fact which it appears to have in its lyrical setting ; Horace's change of view was a matter of growth. But it was real. Otherwise he would surely not have published this poem ; and there is, besides, plenty of evidence elsewhere in his works that in his maturer years he recognized a divine providence and control in human affairs. Horace's ethical views, too, were strongly tinged with Epicureanism, but here, as everywhere, he went to no extreme ; and, although he combats the Stoic theory and mocks at their ideal sage, he was at heart in sympathy with Stoic principles in their substance and practical application to life, and he more than once holds up their ideal of virtue for its own sake, — though even virtue itself he will not exempt from his maxim 'nil admirari'.

9. How far Horace pursued his study of the Greek poets along with his philosophy at Athens, we are not informed; we may be sure that he gave them a large share of his attention. The broad and intimate acquaintance with Greek poetry, which is the very life-blood of his own poetic achievement, was not the acquisition of a few years; but his sojourn was long enough for the influences of the place to give a permanent bent to his literary taste. One of Horace's marked characteristics as a poet is his freedom from Alexandrinism, which dominated Roman education and Roman poetry in his youth. Alexandrine learning, filtered through his Roman teachers, furnished him with his technical outfit as a poet, with a knowledge of the forms and categories and of the history of his art, and with the common stock of illustrative material, mythological, astrological, and other. There is evidence also of his diligent study of some of the Alexandrine poets: he is indebted to them for many phrases and figures and turns of thought. This is especially apparent in his love poetry. But the same evidence shows that the Alexandrine poets who exerted this influence on his style were precisely those who, like Callimachus and Theocritus, were freest from the peculiar weakness of their school, — the sacrifice of freshness and good taste to formality and erudition. In the spirit and form of his verse Horace took as his models the older Greek poets; and his loving study of these masters we may confidently date from his residence at Athens, where the older traditions still maintained themselves.

10. The fashion of sending young men to get the finishing touches of their education at Athens had grown up with the generation into which Horace was born. Cicero, who in his youth was eager to grasp every opportunity for the best training, did not visit Greece at all until after he had entered on the practice of his profession : Cicero's son, who was just of Horace's age, was now at Athens studying rhetoric and philosophy. There, too, Horace found a number of other young men of distinguished families, among them Valerius Messala, who traced his descent from the Valerius Poplicola who held with Brutus the first consulship of the Republic. On what terms Horace stood with these fellow-students we are left to conjecture ; but his genial nature and conversational gifts, combined with tact and good sense, must have drawn many to him. His friendship with Messala and many closer intimacies, to which his poems bear witness, date no doubt from this period. There was nothing out of the way in this association of the freedman's son with the young nobles in common studies and literary interests. Aristocracy of birth has never aspired to monopolize the brain-work of the world, and youth and good fellowship are not strenuous about social distinctions. In the next stage of Horace's career he found his position very different.

IN THE ARMY OF BRUTUS.

II. In September, 44 B.C., six months after the assassination of Julius Caesar, Marcus Brutus came to Athens, and for some months, while waiting for the turn of political events, devoted himself to the schools of philosophy. His appearance created no little sensation. The Athenians, who lived largely in the traditions of their past, welcomed 'the liberator' with enthusiasm, and voted to set up his statue beside those of their own tyrannicides, Harmodius and Aristogeiton. The young Romans were flattered by the accession of so illustrious a fellow-student, whose real interest in philosophy was well known ; and before the winter was over Brutus had enlisted a number of them in his service for the coming struggle with the triumvirs. Among these recruits was the young Cicero, who had already seen some service under Pompey. The most distinguished adherent was Messala, and the least distinguished, certainly, was Horace. It argues a high estimate on Brutus' part of Horace's intelligence and capacity, that he appointed this youth of one and twenty, with neither military experience nor family influence to recommend him, to a place among his officers, and eventually gave him, as tribune, the command of a Roman legion. It was high promotion for the freed-man's son, and envious tongues were not slow to direct attention to the fact.

12. Horace was in Brutus' army the greater part of two years (B.C. 43 and 42). He is almost entirely silent about this experience, but from our knowledge of the movements of Brutus in those two campaigns we may gather that it gave him the opportunity to visit various places in Thessaly, Macedonia, and Thrace, and many famous cities of Asia Minor, which he mentions in his poems in a way that implies personal acquaintance. He remained with Brutus to the end, and shared the victory and subsequent rout at Philippi. The suicide of his chief at once absolved him from further allegiance and was a confession that the cause for which they had fought was irretrievably lost. Horace was fain to accept the result, and while some of his friends held out and joined the standard of Sextus Pompeius, he followed the example and advice of Messala and made his submission to the victors, who pardoned, or at least did not molest him.

RETURN TO ROME.

13. It was not improbably on his homeward voyage from Greece after Philippi that Horace came near being shipwrecked on the dangerous promontory of Palinurus, on the Lucanian coast; the critical condition of the times may have been his motive for preferring that roundabout way to the ordinary route. He returned to Rome in a depressed and bitter mood. His father was dead. His estate had been swept away in the confiscation of the territory of Venusia. The outlook was gloomy. He seems, however, to have saved some money from his two campaigns, and with this he purchased a clerkship in the Quaestors' office, which yielded him a small income and, apparently, a good deal of leisure. Under these circumstances, poor in purse and still poorer in favor, Horace began life again at the age of twenty-three. He was thoroughly cured of his aspirations for a public career. His short, but severe experience had taught him that, however strong his interest in his country's welfare, he had no taste for the practical business of war and politics; and he had had enough of running counter to the popular prejudice against humble birth in high station. On the other hand his training and his knowledge of his own powers alike pointed to literature as the career most suitable and promising for him.

CHOICE OF A CAREER.

14. That Horace had practiced verse-writing in the course of his literary studies might be taken for granted. He confesses that at one time, — it was probably while he was at Athens, — he undertook to write poetry in Greek; and these essays were not, it should seem, in the nature of school exercises, but serious efforts. This was by no means a new thing in Roman literature. The earliest Roman annals were written in Greek, and the same phenomenon had reappeared in the highly Hellenized culture of the Ciceronian period, when Roman writers occasionally used Greek for prose or verse, partly for the pleasure of handling a language of so much richer capacity than their own, partly to reach a wider circle of appreciative readers. But Horace did not persist in an undertaking which his good sense presently convinced him was as futile as it was unpatriotic.

15. At the time when Horace began his literary career, Vergil, who was five years his senior, had published some youthful verses and was beginning to be known as a sweet singer of pastoral scenes by the publication of his earliest Eclogues. The epic poet of the day was Varius Rufus, who won credit and favor by his poem on the death of Julius Caesar. He was a few years older than Vergil, who lived to rival him in epos ; but that was many years later. Asinius Pollio, who as governor of Cisalpine Gaul had recently won Vergil's gratitude by timely assistance, and who was afterwards eminent as an orator and a critic and patron of literature, had at this time attained some distinction as a writer of tragedy. Various other fields were diligently cultivated by writers of less note, or less known to us. Looking over the ground Horace thought he saw a field suited to his powers in Lucilian satire, which Varro Atacinus and some others had undertaken to revive, but in Horace's opinion without success.

THE SATIRES.

16. The word satura appears to have meant originally a medley. It was used as the name of a variety performance on the rude stage of early times, consisting of comic songs and stories, with dance and gesticulation, to the accompaniment of the pipe. It found its way into literature as the title of a collection of what we should call 'miscellanies in verse.' Ennius (B.C. 239-169) employed it for this purpose, and his example was followed by Lucilius. The Saturae of Lucilius, who had been dead about sixty years when Horace began to write satire, were a series of tracts on every topic that it came into his head to discuss,—personal, social, political, philosophical, literary, philological. In form they were equally varied,—sometimes didactic, sometimes narrative, or dramatic, or epistolary; and they were written in a variety of metres. More than two thirds, however, of the thirty books were in dactylic hexameters, which Lucilius appears to have finally settled upon as most suitable for his purpose; and this metre was used exclusively by his successors. And in spite of its heterogeneous variety of subjects, there were two features which gave distinctive character to Lucilius' work. One of these was the footing of personal and familiar intercourse on which he placed himself with his reader; his tone was the tone of conversation and his words the utterance of his own mind and heart, as if on the impulse of the moment. The other was that he entered on a field which Roman literature had not yet ventured to tread, but which thenceforth became the peculiar province of satura, as it had been of the Old Comedy of the Greeks,—the criticism of contemporary manners and men.

17. By inheritance and training a critical observer of the life about him, Horace justly deemed himself fitted to take up the task of Lucilius, whom he greatly admired in everything but the roughness of his literary workmanship. The unreserved personalities in which Lucilius indulged were no longer permissible in Horace's day, and he avoided them except in a few of his earlier satires. Politics, too, were forbidden ground. In other respects he adopted the method of his master, but in a kindlier spirit and rarely with any exhibition of personal feeling. His manner is that of the accomplished man of the world in familiar conversation, easy and self-possessed, witty but never flippanant, discussing with keen insight and a quick sense of humor, but with the abundant charity of a man who knows his own shortcomings, and with a ground-tone of moral earnestness, the various phases of every-day life. He laughs at vice and folly; but satire is essentially didactic, and ridicule is the weapon of a serious purpose. Horace never speaks from the platform, or with any assumption of superior virtue; he talks as one of the crowd who has stopped to reflect on their common weaknesses, and he disarms resentment by sometimes turning the laugh against himself. There are some who esteem these 'talks' (sermones), as he himself preferred to call them, the greatest of Horace's achievements. Certainly there are few works of classical antiquity in which literary art has brought us so near to ancient life. The satires were written from time to time in the decade following Horace's return to Rome (B.C. 41-31), and became more or less widely known before they were issued in collected form. The collection consisted of two books, of which the first was published about 35 or 34, and the second about 30, B.C.

THE EPODES.

18. Horace constructed the hexameter of his satires with some care, and succeeded in reconciling with the easy conversational tone a smoothness of rhythm which marked a great advance on the strong but rugged verses of his model Lucilius. But he hardly cared to claim for his satires the dignity of poetry. They are in their nature, he protests, and except for a certain recurrence of rhythm, mere prose discourse. And meanwhile he was trying his hand at poetry based on Greek models, and was in fact touched with the ambition to strike out a new path for Latin literature in this field. His first effort was to reproduce in Latin the iambic rhythm which tradition said had been forged, as a weapon of wrath, by Archilochus of Paros,—the fact being that Archilochus, who lived in the seventh century B.C., had developed and perfected the rhythm which had existed long before him. The form which Horace adopted was a couplet, the second verse of which, as a sort of refrain, was called by metrical writers epōdus (ἐπωδός, adjective ; cf. ἐπώδειν). This term was later extended in meaning, so that Horace's collection of seventeen poems, all but one composed of epodic couplets, has come down to us under the title of Epodes (Epodon liber). Horace himself called them only Iambi, which expresses their prevailing character and is sufficiently accurate, although other metres are combined with the iambic in some instances.

19. The composition of the Epodes probably began as early as that of the Satires, possibly earlier, and was continued through the same period. The sixteenth of the series, which displays at once remarkable mastery of form and immaturity of thought, was written in the first years after the poet's return from Philippi ; the ninth celebrates the victory at Actium. The book was published about the same time as the second book of the Satires, B.C. 30.

20. Horace says truly that he reproduced the spirit as well as the rhythms of Archilochus ; in some of his epodes he has certainly used the iambus as 'a weapon of wrath.' In others again he has descended to a depth of coarseness from which his later lyrics are, for the most part, happily free. These, the survivors perhaps of a larger number of their kind, belong, we must suppose, to his earliest efforts, and tell of a dark period in his mental history, — the first years after his return from Philippi, — when life went hard with him, and he was embittered and demoralized by associations which later, under more congenial influences, he was able to throw off. The most fortunate of these influences was his acquaintance with Varius and Vergil, who inspired him with warm admiration and regard ; and it was these friends who performed for him the inestimable service of introducing him to Maecenas.

MAECENAS.

21. Gaius Maecenas came of noble Etruscan stock. The Cilnii, once a powerful family of Arretium, were the most distinguished of his ancestors, and Tacitus (Ann. VI. 11) calls him Cilnius Maecenas; but there is reason to believe that this was not his gentile name. He was born on the 13th of April in some year not far from 70 B.C., so that he was Horace's senior by a few years. From our earliest knowledge of him he appears as the trusted friend and confidential minister of the triumvir Octavian, who sent him on several occasions to negotiate with Antony, — at Brundisium in B.C. 40, at Athens in 38, at Tarentum in 37. In B.C. 36, during his absence in the war with Sextus Pompeius, and again in 31, on setting out for the final struggle with Antony, Octavian left Maecenas behind to watch over Rome and Italy with the power, if not the name, of the city prefect of regal times. This was as near as Maecenas ever came to holding public office. He studiously refrained from seeking or accepting political preferment, which would have raised him to the senatorial order, and remained all his life an untitled 'knight.' He was a man in whom the most opposite qualities appeared to be reconciled. His capacity was unquestioned, and on occasion he could display all necessary industry and vigor; but ordinarily he lived a life of almost ostentatious indolence, and was self-indulgent to the point of effeminacy. Devoid of personal ambition and apparently indifferent to politics, he was yet public-spirited and patriotic, and by sheer force of sagacity and tact he exercised for many years a powerful and a wholesome influence in shaping the policy of the government. His self-indulgence appears to have been due to his health, which was always delicate. He was subject to fever and sleeplessness, which increased as he grew older; we have the elder Pliny's word for it that in the last three years of his life he did not sleep at all. Maecenas married Terentia, a sister (by adoption) of Licinius Murena, who was executed for conspiracy against the emperor in B.C. 23. She was a beautiful woman, who counted, the gossips said, Augustus himself among her lovers; and her husband oscillated between furious jealousy and complete subjection to her fascination. He incurred the emperor's displeasure, when her brother's conspiracy was detected, by letting her draw the secret from him. These jars produced no permanent estrangement between Augustus and his minister, but there were other circumstances which inevitably caused Maecenas' influence to wane. When the rule of Augustus had become firmly established and began to take on the character of an hereditary monarchy, the members of his own family naturally came into greater prominence in his councils. Among these was Agrippa, who had married his daughter Julia. Maecenas was outside the circle and his relation with his chief could not be the same as before.

22. Maecenas was a man of cultivated mind and taste, with a genuine appreciation of literature and enjoyment of the conversation of men of letters. He even wrote indifferent verses himself. But he showed his love of literature in a much better way by bestowing upon it a liberal, and what was more to the purpose, a discriminating patronage. He did this in part as a measure of policy; he saw that literature might serve a useful purpose in reconciling the nation to the new order of things. It was rare good fortune for Octavian to have a minister who not only saw the wisdom of this policy, but had the taste and the tact to carry it out with success; it was something more than good fortune for Maecenas that he won the gratitude and admiration of the two greatest poets of the age, and that his name from that day to this has been a synonym for patron of letters.

23. Horace was introduced to Maecenas apparently in B.C. 39 ; but it was not till nine months after the first meeting that he was definitely admitted to his circle. It was probably in B.C. 37 that Maecenas invited him, with Vergil and Varius, to accompany him on the journey to Brundisium, which he has humorously described in the fifth Satire. The acquaintance between the two men ripened gradually into a warm attachment. Maecenas found in Horace a man after his own heart, whose society gave him great content, and whose good sense and sound moral fibre were proof alike against servility and presumption. He won Horace's gratitude by very substantial favors ; he won his affection by the tact and sincerity which made it plain that these favors were the gifts of a friend and not of a mere patron, and that only friendship was exacted in return. Others were quick enough to point out the social inequality of the two men, and Horace was once more forced to hear ill-natured remarks about 'the freedman's son'; but he comforted himself with the knowledge that however it might have been on the former occasion, when he was tribune in the army of Brutus, humble birth was not a matter to be considered against personal qualities in the choice of a friend, and that the distinguished favor which he enjoyed was not purchased by any unworthy compliances on his part. The balance of obligation, in a material point of view, was enormously against him ; but he was ready, and frankly avowed his readiness, to resign all these advantages rather than surrender his own independence. And Maecenas accepted him on these terms.

THE SABINE FARM.

24. Chief of all the benefits that came to Horace from this friendship was the gift of a farm in the Sabine hills, which he received from Maecenas about 33 B.C., not long after the publication of the first book of Satires. The precise situation of this estate has not been determined; but it lay on the banks of the Digentia (now Licenza), a cold mountain stream that flows directly south and joins the Anio about eight miles above Tibur (Tivoli). Near by was a shrine of the Sabine divinity Vacuna, which archeologists have located with considerable probability at the village of Roccagiovane, about three miles up the valley on its western slope. Behind this point, within a distance of two or three miles, there are mountain peaks rising to a height of more than 3000 feet above the sea, one of which may have been Lucretilis; though that name is more commonly supposed to have designated the whole mountain mass lying between the Digentia and the more westerly tributaries of the Anio, the highest point of which, Monte Gennaro (or Zappi) rises above 4000 feet. At the junction of the valleys, on the Anio, was the market town of Varia (Vicovaro) where Horace's five tenant-farmers carried their produce to sell. In the country-house, which Horace himself appears to have built or remodeled for his own use, he maintained an establishment of eight slaves, including presumably the vilicus, who had charge of the whole estate. The environment of beautiful scenery, with abundance of shade, cool streams, and pure air,—it was about 2000 feet above the sea-level—made the place exceedingly attractive to a man like Horace, who was strongly susceptible to the impressions of Nature in her various aspects. He came into possession of his Sabine villa when he was a little over thirty years old, and from that time on he spent much of his life there, glad to escape from the feverish bustle of the city to his mountain retreat, not thirty miles away, but completely secluded and restful to both mind and body. To Maecenas' generous gift he was indebted for a good deal more than the mere provision of an income which secured him against want for the rest of his days, though that too was all-important for a man of letters in that age.

POLITICAL VIEWS.

25. Through his intimacy with Maecenas Horace came to the acquaintance and notice of Octavian, towards whom his feelings, in the course of this decade, underwent a complete change. Like many of the followers of Brutus and Cassius, who had remained quiescent or hostile during the harmonious supremacy of the triumvirs, Horace saw that when it became necessary to choose between Octavian and Antony, the best hopes of the country were bound up with the success of the former. His change of heart was no doubt hastened by the influence of Maecenas, and in fact the prevailing influences at Rome set in that direction. When the contest reached its crisis at Actium, Horace's conversion was complete. He celebrated the victory and the death of Cleopatra, — with true Roman spirit he was silent about Antony, — with odes of triumph, and cordially accepted the result which placed the sole supremacy in the hands of the one man who could command peace. Towards Augustus personally, however, Horace was not inspired at this time, and probably not any time, with any warmer feeling than patriotic admiration and gratitude.

THE ODES.

26. When Octavian returned to Rome and celebrated his triple triumph in 29 B.C., — the year after Vergil completed his seven years' labor on the Georgics, — Horace had published his two books of Satires and the Epodes. In each of these the opening poem was addressed to Maecenas, which was equivalent to a dedication. Horace's work in satire was not pursued further, at least in the same form. He had become deeply interested in lyrical composition, and his success in the Epodes had encouraged him to try his hand at more complicated lyrical metres. He made careful studies in early Greek lyric, taking as his especial models and guides the two great poets of Lesbos, Alcaeus and Sappho (about 600 B.C.) Just when Horace began to write what we call the Odes, but which he called simply poems (carmina), it is not possible to say. In fact, the line of division between the Epodes and the Odes is a somewhat arbitrary one, and a few poems are found under each head that might equally well have been placed under the other. The earliest of the odes to which a date can be assigned with certainty is I. 37, written on receiving the news of the death of Cleopatra in B.C. 30. Possibly some were written before this, but probably not many. From this time on, for about seven years, Horace devoted himself with great zeal and industry, and almost to the exclusion of every other kind of literary work, to lyrical composition. His mastery of form and fine rhythmical sense had here their highest opportunity, and the result was a body of lyric which in volume and variety and in perfection of finish was never equaled in Latin literature before or after. Catullus, a generation earlier, had written lyrics which in freshness and spontaneity, and as direct and unaffected expressions of the poet's personality, Horace himself could not equal. But Catullus had written chiefly in the easier lyrical metres, — iambics, Glyconics, and particularly the Phalaecean, his favorite rhythm. He tried the Sapphic strophe in only two poems, — one of these a translation, — and the Alcaic not at all. These two, with three Asclepiad strophes which Catullus did not touch, were the rhythms that Horace developed most successfully, and, after many experiments with other forms, came to use almost exclusively. He also worked in accordance with strict metrical theories, formulated probably by the Roman philologians of the time, and not by Horace himself, whereas Catullus had allowed himself the full liberty of his Greek models as he found them, so that his verses sometimes, to the ears of later critics, had a touch of harshness. It was not unnatural that Horace should regard his own achievement, wrought out with much study and labor, as the first adequate and successful adaptation of the Lesbian rhythms to the Latin language, in comparison with which the slighter efforts of Catullus might be deemed to have gone, in point of artistic workmanship, little beyond the point he had himself reached in his Epodes. And his claim, in this limited sense, must be allowed. But it is to be wished that he had accorded to the genius of his predecessor in lyric the same generous recognition which he gave to that of Lucilius in satire.

27. Horace's Odes, many of which are addressed to one or another of his friends, were privately read and circulated long before they were published in collected form. The first publication, which embraced three books, dedicated in a fitting introductory ode to Maecenas, took place, according to almost conclusive internal evidence, in B.C. 23, when Horace had reached the age of forty-two. It was the gathered fruits of the best years of his life, when his mind had attained its full maturity and his spirit had not yet lost its freshness. The collection is arranged with some reference to the chronological order of composition, but with more to variety of subject and pleasing sequence of rhythms. The odes range in quality from mere studies or versions from the Greek to products of the poet's matured skill and poems in which motive and thought are wholly Roman. Horace gave his work to the world with the undisguised assurance of its immortality and his own. It did not immediately silence his detractors; but it won its way surely, and he did not have to wait many years for a general verdict of approval from the reading public.

THE FIRST BOOK OF EPISTLES.

28. With this achievement Horace's ambition to make for himself a unique place in Roman literature was satisfied, or his lyric impulse was spent; at any rate he wrote no more odes for some years. His old propensity for the study of life reasserted itself and found expression in a new series of sermones, as he calls them, indicating their close resemblance in subject and method, as they were identical in metre, with the Satires. In form they were Epistles, and this is the title under which they have come down to us. Some are letters in fact as well as in form, relating to personal matters, — one is a letter of introduction. Others contain some admixture of personal communication, while in many the insertion of a name is no more than a compliment or serves only to lend a certain personal interest to the discourse. It was a practice to which he had become habituated in the Odes, the influence of which on the Epistles is further apparent in a more finished rhythm and a more compact and sententious style than he had attained in the Satires. The first series of Epistles was written in the years immediately following the publication of the Odes, and was published in B.C. 20 or 19. The book, like its predecessors, was dedicated to Maecenas.

PERSONAL TRAITS.

29. In the epilogue of this first book of Epistles Horace has left a brief sketch of his own person and temper at the age of forty-four: 'short of stature, prematurely gray, quick to take offense, but quickly appeased.' He was stout as well as short; but in his younger days, with black hair and the low forehead which the Romans admired, and an agreeable voice and smile, he was personally far from unattractive. He enjoyed good health in his youth except that he was troubled with an affection of the eyes. But as he grew older his health began to fail, and he found it necessary to guard it carefully. In spite of the friendly reproaches of Maecenas, he spent a good part of the year away from the city, among the hills at his villa or at Tibur or Praeneste, or on the seashore at Baiae or Tarentum.

30. Horace never married, nor was he ever taken possession of by an overmastering passion, like his friend Tibullus and the other elegiac poets. Among all the feminine names that occur in his lighter odes only one appears to be real, — that of Cinara, of whom he speaks only after her early death. The Lydias and Lalages, and all the rest of the Greek ladies who figure in his love poems are creatures of his fancy, or of the fancy of some Greek poet before him; and if, as is no doubt to some extent true, the poems reflect the poet's own experiences, they also show how lightly these experiences touched him. Horace was not of a temperament to make a serious business of love; and his artistic delineations of it are pretty, but they have not the ring of genuineness and true passion. Something of the same sort must be said of his convivial odes. They must be taken as artistic productions, not as self-portraiture. Horace enjoyed good wine and was very sociable by disposition, and he no doubt often found himself, especially in his younger days, in boisterous company; but by his whole nature and training excess of all kinds was distasteful to him, and it is impossible not to believe that his strong self-control rarely failed to assert itself here. The odes in which he enjoins moderation in the use of wine reflect not only his rule but, we may confidently believe, his habitual practice.

THE CARMEN SAECULARE AND THE FOURTH BOOK OF ODES.

31. In the year 17 B.C. Horace's eminence as a poet received the stamp of official recognition in his appointment to write a hymn to be sung at the Secular Games which Augustus celebrated in that year. His services as poet laureate were further called upon a few years later to celebrate in two odes the exploits of the Emperor's stepsons, Tiberius and Drusus Nero, who had gained important successes against some of the Alpine tribes. In the meantime his reawakened lyrical activity had produced other odes, and in B.C. 13, or perhaps a little later, he gathered these together and added a fourth book to the three already published. This was done, Suetonius tells us, to gratify the emperor, who wished the odes in honor of his stepsons to have a permanent place in Horace's works. The Carmen Saeculare was not included in this book, but has been preserved separately.

RELATIONS WITH THE COURT.

32. The fourth book of the Odes, unlike all of the poet's previous publications, was not dedicated to Maecenas, and this circumstance has given rise to the suspicion that Horace was guilty of neglecting his old friend, now that he had himself come into the sunshine of court favor, while his benefactor had withdrawn into the background, or was even under a cloud. But there is no sufficient ground for such an aspersion, and it is contradicted by what we know of Horace's character and his ideals of life. Horace had long before this time come into entire sympathy, politically, with the government of Augustus. The emperor was fully alive to the value of such an ally, and was ready to bestow upon him social favors and rewards of a more substantial sort. Both the one and the other were no doubt agreeable enough to the poet, and Horace was not the man to withhold the one favor he could bestow in return,—the service of his muse. There is nothing to show that his relations with the court went beyond this interchange of civilities. Horace had already won the prizes of life that he most valued, and court favor could add nothing that he really cared for. Nor is there any evidence of a close friendship between the poet and the emperor. The warmest expression of Horace's feeling towards Augustus is in the fifth ode of the fourth book ; but it is the warmth of loyal gratitude to the author of his country's peace, and not at all of personal affection. On the other hand we are told that the emperor's advances towards a closer relation, in inviting the poet to become his private secretary, were coldly received and the appointment was declined. As to the new book of lyrics, Horace's unerring tact would forbid him to dedicate to Maecenas a work that he had published at the request of the emperor ; the significant fact is that it is not dedicated to Augustus. Of his loyalty to Maecenas, which we should otherwise have no right to question, he reminds us in the eleventh ode ; and of Maecenas' undiminished affection for the poet we have striking evidence in his dying message to the emperor, recorded by Suetonius : ' Horati Flacci ut mei esto memor.'

THE LITERARY EPISTLES.

33. Suetonius further tells us that Augustus reproached Horace not only for slighting his friendly advances, but for having left him, among so many friends addressed in his 'sermones,' conspicuous by his absence ; and that Horace absolved himself from this reproach by composing the poem which now stands at the head of the second book of Epistles. It is, in form, an epistle to the emperor ; in substance, a review of Latin poetry, with a defense of the modern school, of which Varius and Vergil and Horace himself were the foremost representatives, and with which the name of Augustus was destined to be permanently associated, against the disparagement of conservative critics and their indiscriminate veneration of the old Roman poets. The second poem of this collection, an epistle to a young friend and man of letters, Julius Florus, is also mainly devoted to literary matters, and is especially interesting for its many allusions to Horace's own literary career. Its general purport is that he has now come to a time of life when he must put aside poetry with other amusements of youth, and address himself to the 'rhythms and harmonies of real life.' For this reason its composition is assigned with great probability to the period immediately following the publication of the first book of the Epistles, when Horace's lyrical muse was still silent, — say B.C. 19 or 18. The epistle to Augustus, on the other hand, was probably written at least as late as B.C. 14.

34. These two epistles are followed in modern editions by the longest of Horace's poems (476 hexameters) and the one that approaches nearest to the character of a formal treatise. It is largely didactic, setting forth with much detail of precept and illustration, the correct principles of poetry as an art ; and as early as the first century it was known under the title of Ars Poetica (or De Arte Poetica liber). It is, nevertheless, written in the form, and to a considerable extent preserves the character and tone, of an epistle, being addressed to three friends, a father and two sons, of the Piso family, and ostensibly designed for the special benefit of the elder of the two young men, who had literary aspirations. It is, moreover, for a formal treatise, very incomplete ; it deals with only one branch of poetry, — the drama, — with any degree of thoroughness, touching on the rest lightly or not at all. It seems probable, therefore, that the somewhat pretentious title Ars Poetica did not originate with Horace himself, but was given to the poem later, when it was issued separately, either for educational purposes or as material for learned commentary. The date of its composition is in dispute. Some place it as early as the first book of the Epistles, but the better view appears to be that it was written in the last years of the poet's life.

DEATH AND PERMANENT FAME.

35. Of Horace's personal history in these last years we have no record. His health, as we have seen, had long been precarious, and he had not yet completed his fifty-seventh year when he died, in the latter part of November, B.C. 8. He was buried on the Esquiline, not far from the tomb of Maecenas, who had passed away only a few months before him.

36. The favor which Horace had won from the best minds of his own time has been confirmed by the permanent verdict of posterity. His works at once took their place among the classics of Latin literature. By the beginning of the second century, as we know definitely from Juvenal, and undoubtedly long before (see Quint. I. 8. 6), they were used as school-books, and thus became a part of the literary outfit of the educated Roman. They continued to be read to some extent through the middle ages, and since the revival of letters their popularity has been steadily maintained. Perhaps no ancient writer has won a warmer place in the personal regard of modern men,—and not only men of books, but men of affairs; for the secret of his power is not merely, or perhaps so much, in the unrivaled mastery of language and rhythm which lends such charm to his lyric poems,—still less in the force of poetical genius, in which his greatness does not pass unchallenged, but rather in the character which shines through his verses, of the keen but kindly, urbane, wise, genial observer of life.

SCHOLIA AND MANUSCRIPTS.

37. Horace's poems became early the subject of learned criticism and interpretation. The oldest commentary that has come down to us is that of Pomponius PORPHYRIO who is supposed to have written in the fourth century, perhaps earlier. At any rate he lived at a time when the old Roman pagan customs had not yet died out, and he had access to still older authorities which are now lost ; so that his work is of great value to us. We also have a collection of scholia under the name of Helenius ACRO, a distinguished grammarian who lived perhaps a century before Porphyrio ; but although Acro unquestionably wrote a commentary on Horace, the one which now bears his name is a composite production, made up at a much later date by one or more unknown writers, who quote liberally from Porphyrio.

38. If we may take the word of Jacques de Crusque (better known by his Latinized name, Cruquius), professor at Bruges in the latter part of the sixteenth century, the oldest manuscript of Horace known to exist in modern times was preserved in the monastery of St. Peter at Blankenberg (Mons Blandinius), near Ghent, and presumably perished in the fire which consumed that institution in 1566. It was one of four codices which Cruquius had borrowed from the monastery and collated for his edition of Horace, which he first published in complete form in 1578. Although, therefore, these Blandinian manuscripts are themselves lost, we have in the edition of Cruquius a considerable number of readings from them ; and some of these are of a very striking character. Cruquius regarded the manuscripts as of great value ; three of them he assigned to the ninth century while the other, which he called 'vetustissimus' he thought might possibly date from the seventh. We have no means of revising this estimate. Keller and Holder, to whom we are indebted for the fullest existing critical apparatus of Horace, question the accuracy and even the good faith of Cruquius, and set little value on his manuscripts. The majority of Horatian scholars, however, dissent from this view and acquit Cruquius of any worse offense than carelessness, while the 'Blandinius Vetustissimus' is justly held to be of exceptional importance both on account of the excellence of some of its peculiar readings and because it represents a tradition in large measure independent of the great mass of Horatian manuscripts. Cruquius also published in his edition a collection of scholia from his Blandinian manuscripts, the unknown writer or writers of which are commonly quoted as 'Commentator Cruquianus.' They are of no great value, being evidently derived, for the most part, from Acro and Porphyrio.

39. The extant manuscripts of Horace, about two hundred and fifty in number, range in date from the eighth or ninth to the fifteenth century. The oldest is one now in the public library at Berne, written by a Scotch or Irish monk in the latter part of the eighth or early in the ninth century. We have nearly twenty in all which appear to have been written before the end of the tenth century. All of the manuscripts (except one at Gotha, which appears to be derived from the Blandinian recension) come from a common archetype, which Keller thinks may have been written as early as the first or second century. No satisfactory classification has yet been discovered, which shall enable us to decide on disputed readings by the weight of manuscript testimony; nor is it probable that the relations of the manuscripts to one another can ever be sufficiently made out to establish such a classification. Owing to the practice in which copyists and revisers often indulged, of comparing their codex with one or more others, and borrowing readings from these at their discretion, the lines of tradition have become so confused that it is probably no longer possible to separate them. This appears in Keller's attempted classification, in which an important manuscript will be found now in one class, now in another. Keller sets up three classes, and in general accepts the united testimony of two against the remaining one. His Classes II. and III. may be said to be fairly made out, though their value is much impaired by the vacillation of individual manuscripts. The case for his Class I. is by no means so clear. The serious problems of Horatian textual criticism involve, as a rule, the choice between two (seldom three) variants, each resting on good, but not conclusive, manuscript support; and the decision cannot be reached by any balancing of authorities, but calls for the exercise of sound judgment, trained by careful study of the poet's mode of thought and habit of expression.

II. LANGUAGE AND STYLE.

40. Saturated as Horace was with Greek literature, it was inevitable that his language and style should bear the impress of a strong Greek influence. But to this influence he by no means surrendered himself unreservedly. His sturdy Roman character stamped itself upon his writings as upon his life, and he was no more spoiled as a literary artist by Greek culture than he was as a man by aristocratic society. He was strong enough to absorb the spirit of Greek art, and make it his own. The task he set himself was not to imitate the Greek poets, but to achieve with his own language what they had achieved with theirs. He understood well the genius of his native tongue, its capacities and its limitations; and his good sense and good taste saved him from attempting to do with it some of the things which the older poets had tried,—such as the formation of unwieldy compounds,—just as he refrained from their sonorous rhetoric and extravagant use of assonance and alliteration, and from the studied prettiness of Catullus and his school. While his syntax often has a strong Greek flavor, he rarely uses a construction of which we cannot find at least the germ in the Latin idiom. If we bear in mind that Latin was a spoken language, in process of growth and decay, not hardened into the forms in which the grammarians have systematized it for us, we may well hesitate to assert that Latin idiom was ever consciously violated by Horace. His language is, in the main, the every-day language of cultivated Romans, but free from the sprinkling of Greek words and phrases with which polite conversation covered up its own poverty, and which he expressly condemns in Lucilius. Horace uses Greek words sparingly, and as a rule only of Greek things. His diction betrays no striving to avoid the commonplace. His power and charm lie rather in the skill with which he moulds common materials into exquisite forms, and in that perfect adaptation of word to thought which invests his carefully wrought phrase with all the appearance and the freshness of a happy inspiration. This 'Horati curiosa felicitas,' as Petronius has so aptly characterized it, is his supreme merit; and it is all his own.

The exposition which follows is designed to help the student to a better understanding of the poet by pointing out the most salient characteristics of his syntax, — chiefly those in which he goes beyond the limits of literary prose usage, — and to set forth some of the more striking features of his use and arrangement of words. This will serve, it is hoped, to show the student what to look for, but the largest part must still be done by himself. There are innumerable subtleties of form and setting which are beyond the reach of description. To grasp the full beauty and charm of Horace's style, we must read and read over again, read many times and learn by heart, till the poet's thought and his verse are inseparably blended in our memory.

(A) SYNTAX.

The Accusative.

41. The passive voice is sometimes used with its original middle force and takes an object accusative ; as

S. II. 7. 38 nasum supinor, I lay back my nose ; Ep. II. 3. 302 purgor bilem ; Ep. I. 1. 50 coronari Olympia (after the Greek στεφανοῦσθαι, to win a crown for oneself) ; Ep. I. 17. 28 quidlibet indutus.

42. In descriptions of dress or personal adornment the perfect participle, with an instrumental ablative, is frequently used in the middle sense, and takes an accusative of the part of the body affected ; as

C. I. 2. 31 nube candentis umeros amictus, having thy bright shoulders wrapt in cloud ; C. II. 11. 15 rosa odorati capillos ; Ep. II. 1. 110 fronde comas vincti.

43. The accusative of the 'part affected' is sometimes used with the passive voice in its proper sense, thus becoming practically an accusative of specification ; as

S. I. 8. 37 caput inquiner, I get my head befouled ; S. I. 1. 5 iam fractus membra labore, with his frame all shattered by toil and hardship ; S. II. 3. 295 mentem concussa.

44. The accusative specifying the 'part affected' occurs once in Horace with an active verb : S. II. 7. 57 tremis ossa pavore (cf. C. I. 23. 8 et corde et genibus tremit). Its occurrence with an adjective is doubtful, the MSS. in C. III. 10. 18 being divided between animum mitior and animo mitior. Cetera with an adjective occurs thrice : C. IV. 2. 60 cetera fulvus ; Ep. I. 10. 3, 50. Cf. § 45 b.

45. (a) The character of the action may be expressed by an adjective with a cognate accusative ; as

C. III. 29. 50 ludum insolentem ludere ; C. II. 17. 26 laetum crepuit sonum.

(b) The neuter plural of an adjective in this construction is equivalent to an adverb ; as

S. I. 8. 40 alterna loquentes (alternately) ; S. I. 4. 44 os magna sonaturum (in lofty strain) ; Ep. I. 1. 101 insanire sollemnia (in the ordinary way) ; S. I. 10. 37 haec ego ludo.

46. The action of a verb may be characterized by an adjective or participle in apposition with the verb itself, or with the whole predicate ; as S. I. 4. 10 in hora saepe ducentos, ut magnum, versus dictabat (as a great feat) ; S. II. 1. 53 dente lupus, cornu taurus petit, — unde nisi intus monstratum? S. II. 2. 19 cum sale panis lattrantem stomachum bene leniet, — unde putas aut qui partum?

47. The accusative singular neuter of pronouns and of nihil is freely used as a cognate object with adverbial force ; as

C. I. 32. 1 si quid lusimus ; S. II. 1. 78 nisi quid tu dissentis ; Ep. II. 3. 354 si peccat idem ; C. I. 14. 14 nil pictis puppibus fidit ; S. II. 8. 41 nihilum nocuere lagenis. In one instance nihil is modified by an adjective : Ep. I. 12. 15 nil parvum sapias (in no small way).

48. The accusative singular neuter of many adjectives is attached to verbs, both transitive and intransitive, with adverbial force ; as

C. I. 22. 23 dulce ridentem ; S. I. 3. 26 cernis acutum ; Ep. II. 2. 9 canet indoctum sed dulce bibenti ; C. II. 12. 14 lucidum fulgentis ; S. I. 8. 41 resonarint triste et acutum.

49. The accusative singular neuter of adjectives of quantity is used adverbially with adjectives and participles ; as

C. I. 25. 5 multum facilis ; Epod. 15. 11 dolitura multum ; Epod. 17. 20 amata multum ; S. II. 5. 80 nec tantum Veneris quantum studiosa culinae. So nihilum : S. II. 3. 54 nihilum metuenda.

50. Horace uses insuesco with two accusatives (on the analogy of doceo) in S. I. 4. 105 insuevit pater hoc me. The use of decipior with an accusative in C. II. 13. 38 dulci laborem decipitur sono is to be explained on the analogy of celor (cf. the use of fallo with an accusative of the thing disguised, e. g. S. II. 2. 12 studio fallente laborem, from which fallor laborem would be a natural development) ; but see § 67. In the expression, Ep. II. 3. 383 census equestrem summam, borrowed from legal phraseology (cf. Cic. Flacc. 80), censeo is likewise treated as a verb that takes two accusatives.

51. The tendency of verbs originally intransitive to acquire a transitive use appears at a more advanced stage in poetry than in prose. The following verbs, used transitively by Horace, had a very restricted transitive use, or were not so used at all, in prose before his day :

(a) Verbs denoting emotion or the expression of emotion: erubesco, fleo, gemo, ploro, pallesco, expallesco, paveo, expavesco, tremo, contremisco, horresco, fastidio, gravor; as, Epod. 14. 11 cava testudine flevit amorem; C. IV. 12. 5 Ityn flebiliter gemens; C. III. 27. 27 pontum palluit (turned pale at the sight of); C. IV. 11. 27 Pegasus terrenum equitem gravatus.

(b) Verbs expressing haste, strife: propero, depropero, festino, certo, pugno, milito; as Ep. I. 2. 61 poenas festinat; S. II. 5. 27 foro si res certabitur; Epod. 1. 23 libenter hoc et omne militabitur bellum.

(c) Verbs of vocal expression: (1) with object denoting the form or content of the expression: sono, crepo, balbutio, elatro; as C. II. 13. 26 sonantem plectro dura navis, dura fugae mala; Ep. I. 7. 84 sulcos et vineta crepat; (2) with external object: iurgo, sibilo, latro; as S. II. 2. 100 Trausius iurgatur; S. I. 1. 66 populus me sibilat; Epod. 5. 57 senem latrent canes.

(d) Verbs expressing some physical act or state: (1) in a literal sense: ceno, stillo; Ep. II. 2. 168 emptum cenat holus; Ep. II. 3. 429 stillabit ex oculis rorem; (2) in a figurative sense: mano, spiro; Ep. I. 19. 44 fidis manare poetica mella te solum; C. IV. 13. 19 spirabat amores; (3) of dramatic action, the accusative denoting the character represented: salto, moveor, edormio; S. I. 5. 63 pastorem saltaret uti Cyclopa rogabat; Ep. II. 2. 125 nunc Satyrum, nunc agrestem Cyclopa movetur (i. e. saltat; cf. Ep. II. 3. 232); S. II. 3. 61 Fufius ebrius Ilionam edormit, 'slept off' Iliona, i. e. actually went to sleep in his part, instead of simulating it (with the additional idea, however, that he was sleeping off a debauch, from the phrase edormire crapulam, which occurs in prose).

(e) invideo, impero, regno (see also § 68), triumpho, and iuro are used in the passive with a subject-nominative; as Ep. II. 3. 56 ego cur invideor? Ep. I. 5. 21 haec ego procurare imperor; C. III. 29. 27 regnata Cyro Bactra; C. III. 3. 43 triumphatis Medis; Ep. II. 1. 16 iurandas aras. In C. IV. 6. 14 mentior is used for simulo.

(f) Many intransitive verbs acquire a transitive use in composition. Such are: adnuo (= concedo), as S. I. 10. 45 molle atque facetum Vergilio adnuerunt Camenae; adsuesco, S. II. 2. 109 pluribus adsuerit mentem (adsuetus is common in prose); circumgemo, circumtono, circumvolvo, circumvolito; exsudo, S. I. 10. 28 cum Pedius causas exsudet (= sudans peragat); evagor, insisto, intono, perambulo, pererro, prae fluo, remeo, subrepto, supervenio.

52. There are a few instances in the Satires and Epistles of a colloquial form of expression in which an object accusative depends on a verbal idea vaguely implied in the phrase itself; as S. II. 7. 116 unde mihi lapidem? unde sagittas, where shall I get, etc.? Ep. I. 5. 12 quo mihi fortunam, si non conceditur uti? Here mihi is added to quo (= quorsum) to mean 'What object can it be to me?' (as in S. I. 6. 24; see § 94 p), and fortunam depends on the vaguely implied idea of having or obtaining.

The Dative.

53. The person towards whom motion is directed is sometimes expressed, as 'the person for whom' action is performed, by the dative; and this usage is extended, by a more or less conscious personification, to places and things; as

C. I. 28. 10 habentque Tartara Panthoiden, iterum Orco demissum (i. e. to Orcus as a person, the place being already expressed by Tartara; cf. Il. I. 3 ψυχὰς "Αἰδὶ προΐαψεν); C. IV. 4. 69 Carthaginiam non ego nuntios mittam superbos; C. I. 24. 15 num vanae redeat sanguis imagini, would the blood return (i. e. be restored) to the empty form? C. III. 23. 1. caelo si tuleris manus (cf. Verg. Aen. V. 451 it clamor caelo).

54. The dative is used with verbs (chiefly in the perfect participle) of perception and emotion; as

C. II. 1. 31 auditum Medis sonitum (i. e. audible to them; cf. the usual construction with videor); C. I. 1. 24 bella matribus detestata (hateful to); I. 21. 4 Latonam dilectam Iovi (= dear to); Ep. II. 1. 256 formidatam Parthis Romam; C. III. 25. 3 quibus antris audiar?

55. The dative of the agent, which had its origin perhaps in these and similar uses (notably its use in the gerundive construction), is also found; as

C. I. 32. 5 (barbite) Lesbio modulate civi; Ep. II. 3. 427 versus tibi factos.

56. The dative is used with verbs signifying to unite, mix, compare; such are iungo, figo, socio, continuo, gemino, coeo; misceo, confundo; confero, comparo, contendo; as Ep. II. 3. 1 humano capiti cervicem equinam iungere; Ep. II. 3. 13 ut serpentes avibus gementur, tigribus agni; C. I. 1. 30 me dis miscent superis (i. e. set me among them; cf. stellis inserere, C. III. 25. 6); S. I. 10. 20 verbis Graeca Latinis miscuit (Latin being his vernacular); S. I. 1. 111 neque se maiori turbae comparet.

57. The dative is used with verbs signifying difference, disagreement, contention; such are differo, disto, discrepo, dissentio, dissideo, disconvenio, discordo, pugno, certo, decerto, luctor, altercor; as C. IV. 9. 29 distat inertiae virtus; S. I. 4. 48 differt sermoni; C. II. 2. 18 dissidens plebi; S. I. 2. 73 pugnancia istis.

58. The dative is used with adjectives, —

(a) Depending on a verbal idea contained in the adjective; as C. I. 11. 8 credula postero; C. III. 26. 8 foribus minacis; C. II. 15. 8 fertilibus domino pricri (i. e. quae ferebant; cf. C. III. 24. 12); S. II. 2. 6 acclinis falsis animus; S. II. 7. 83 sibi imperiosus.

(b) With adjectives conveying the notion of fitness or likeness, or the reverse; as C. I. 23. 12 tempestiva viro (of fit age for); C. III. 11. 12 cruda marito; S. II. 2. 101 divitias tribus amplas regibus; Ep. I. 18. 5 huic diversum vitio. So with idem: Ep. II. 3. 467 invitum qui servat, idem facit occidenti.

(c) To express purpose or use after adjectives of capacity, skill, incapacity; as C. I. 12. 42 utilem bello; Ep. II. 3. 82 natum rebus agendis; Ep. II. 2. 21 talibus officiis prope mancum; C. III. 27. 61 acuta leto saxa (i. e. sharp enough to kill).

59. The dative is rarely appended to a substantive to denote purpose, service, or destiny; as Epod. 2. 33 tendit retia, turdis dolos; S. II. 5. 16 ne illi comes exterior ire recuses; C. II. 1. 13 insigne maestis praesidium reis et consulenti, Pollio, curiae; S. II. 2. 107 o magnus posthac inimicis risus!

60. In the predicate after licet esse and the like, Horace always uses the dative; as Ep. I. 16. 61 da mihi fallere, da iusto sanctoque videri; Ep. II. 3. 372 mediocribus esse poetis non homines, non di, non concessere columnae.

The Genitive.

61. The genitive of quality may be attached directly to the name of a definite individual or class; as

S. I. 1. 33 magni formica laboris (for 'formica, animal magni laboris'); C. I. 36. 13 multi Damalis meri. Similarly, where the omitted appellative would be in the predicate; as S. I. 4. 17 di bene fecerunt, inopis me quodque pusilli finxerunt animi; S. II. 8. 84 Nasidiene, redis mutatae frontis. Sometimes coupled with an adjective; as S. II. 7. 52 ditior aut formae melioris.

62. The possessive genitive in the predicate is used with greater freedom than in prose, often differing little from a partitive genitive ; as

S. I. 7. 35 operum hoc tuorum est ; C. III. 13. 13 fies nobilium tu quoque fontium ; Ep. I. 9. 13 scribe tui gregis hunc.

63. The partitive genitive is often used with adjectives where in prose the substantive and adjective would stand in agreement ; as

C. IV. 6. 31 virginum primæ ; C. I. 10. 19 superis deorum et imis ; S. II. 2. 60 natalis aliosve dierum festos ; C. I. 9. 14 quem fors dierum cumque dabit. Sometimes with an adjective and pronoun ; as C. I. 29. 5 quæ tibi virginum barbara serviet ? Or a pronoun and substantive, as S. II. 1. 61 maiorum ne quis amicus frigore te feriat. With unus (= solus) : S. I. 10. 42 unus vivorum (cf. S. II. 6. 57 unum mortalem). The genitive is also used with unus, one, S. I. 9. 72 unus multorum ; elsewhere the ablative with de or ex.

64. The genitive (partitive or possessive), used in this way with the neuter plural of an adjective in an abstract sense, gives the latter greater prominence than if it were merely expressed as an attribute of the substantive ; thus in

C. IV. 12. 20 amara curarum, there is more stress on the bitterness than there would be in 'amaras curas' ; C. II. 1. 23 cuncta terrarum ; C. IV. 4. 76 acuta belli ; S. II. 2. 125 contractæ seria frontis. The colorless genitive rerum especially is used in the Satires and Epistles to round out a phrase ; as Ep. I. 17. 21 vilia rerum ; S. II. 2. 25 vanis rerum ; S. II. 8. 83 fictis rerum. In one instance rerum is used in the same way with a masculine superlative : S. I. 9. 4 dulcissime rerum.

65. A geographical proper name is occasionally put in the genitive (instead of in apposition) with its generic noun ; as C. II. 6. 10 Galaesi flumen, the river Galaesus ; C. IV. 14. 50 tellus Hiberiæ. Sometimes it is treated as an adjective : C. IV. 4. 38 Metaurum flumen ; Ep. II. 3. 18 flumen Rhenum. This adjective use of substantives is sometimes extended to personal names ; as C. I. 15. 10 Dardanae genti, the race of Dardanus ; C. IV. 5. 1 Romulæ gentis ; and even to an appellative ; as C. III. 12. 1 patruæ linguæ. In the same way Horace is fond of using the shorter forms of adjectives of nationality, which are commonly used as substantives in prose ; as Marsus, Afer, Medus, Colchus, for Marsicus, Africanus, etc.

66. The wide development and vague limits of the use of the objective genitive with adjectives (and participles with adjective meaning) gave the poets freer scope in this than in most other constructions. The examples in Horace comprise —

(a) The objective genitive proper, depending on adjectives implying the action of a transitive verb, or their opposites; such are tenax, ferax, fertilis, fecundus, prosperus, prodigus, benignus, parvus, fastidiosus, bibulus, avarus, metuens, timidus, securus, incautus; as Epod. 5. 22 Hiberia venenorum ferax; C. S. 29 fertilis frugum pecorisque tellus; Ep. II. 3. 164 iuvenis prodigus aeris; S. II. 3. 3 vini somnique benignus (cf. our expression, 'a generous liver'); S. II. 5. 79 donandi parca iuventus; Ep. II. 3. 28 timidus procellae; Ep. II. 2. 17 poenae securus.

(b) The genitive of reference, with adjectives denoting mastery, knowledge, skill, and their opposites; such are potens, prudens, sciens, sollers, consultus, divinus (prophetic), sagax, docilis, indoctus, nescius, inscius; as C. I. 3. 1 diva potens Cypri; Ep. II. 3. 407 musa lyrae sollers; C. I. 34. 2 insanientis sapientiae consultus (after the analogy of iuris consultus); C. III. 27. 10 imbrium divina avis; Ep. II. 3. 218 utilium sagax rerum; C. IV. 6. 43 docilis modorum; Ep. II. 3. 380 indoctus pilae discive trochive.

(c) The genitive of reference, with adjectives of plenty and want; such are dives, opulentus, satur, lassus, inanis, egens (cf. § 67), pauper, exsors, liber, vacuus, purus, abstinens; as Ep. II. 2. 31 multarum divite rerum; Ep. I. 7. 35 satur altitium; C. II. 6. 7 lasso maris et viarum militiaeque (cf. Verg. Aen. I. 178 fessi rerum); C. III. 11. 26 inane lymphae dolium; Ep. I. 17. 22 nullius egentem; C. III. 30. 11 pauper aquae; Ep. II. 3. 212 liber laborum rusticus; S. II. 2. 119 operum vacuo; C. I. 22. 1 sceleris purus.

NOTE. — Of these adjectives, dives, vacuus, and purus are also used by Horace with the ablative; as Ep. II. 3. 421 dives agris, dives positus in faenore nummis; C. IV. 15. 8 vacuum duellis Ianum; S. II. 3. 213 purum est vitio tibi cor? With nudus, orbis, and viduus Horace uses the ablative only; C. I. 14. 4 nudum remigio latus; C. IV. 2. 44 forum litibus orbis; C. I. 10. 11 viduus pharetra Apollo.

(d) The genitive of reference (specification), with other adjectives :

S. II. 3. 65 integer mentis (cf. Plaut. Trin. 454 satin tu sanu's mentis aut animi tui?) ; S. I. 9. 11 cerebri felicem ; C. II. 2. 6 notus animi paterni ; S. I. 10. 21 seri studiorum ; S. II. 2. 66 cultus miser ; C. III. 5. 42 capitis minor (for the technical capite deminutus).

67. The analogy of adjectives of plenty and want is extended in a few cases to verbs. Horace has the genitive with egeo, solvo, purgo, abstineo, desino, invideo ; as S. I. 4. 118 dum custodis eges (cf. egens § 66 c) ; C. III. 17. 16 famulis operum solutis (cf. operum vacuo § 66 c) ; S. II. 3. 27 miror morbi purgatum te (cf. liber, purus § 66 c) ; C. III. 27. 69 abstinet irarum (cf. abstinens § 66 c) ; C. II. 9. 18 desine querellarum ; S. II. 6. 84 neque ille sepositi ciceris nec longae invidit avenae (cited by Quintilian IX. 3. 17 to illustrate Horace's fondness for Greek idioms). Here also belongs C. II. 13. 38 laborum decipitur, if that reading, given in some good MSS., be correct ; but see § 50. Horace also uses the more common prose constructions, — the ablative with egeo, solvo, abstineo, and the accusative and dative with invideo.

68. For a supposed instance of the genitive with regno see note on C. III. 30. 12.

The Ablative.

69. The ablative is often used without a preposition to denote the 'place where' ; as

C. I. 9. 10 ventos aequore fervido deproeliantis ; C. II. 9. 24 exiguis equitare campis. Often without an adjective, as S. I. 5. 87 mansuri oppidulo.

70. With verbs denoting separation or motion from a place, the ablative is often used without a preposition ; as

C. I. 1. 32 me secernunt populo ; S. II. 3. 203 abstinuit vim uxore ; Ep. II. 3. 379 abstinet armis ; ib. 370 actor causarum mediocris abest virtute disertis Messalae ; C. II. 20. 21 absint funere neniae ; C. III. 1. 39 decedit aerata triremi ; Ep. II. 3. 53 si Graeco fonte cadent.

71. The ablative is used with haereo, religo, suspendo ; as C. I. 2. 9 summa haesit ulmo ; C. I. 32. 8 religarat litore navim ; S. I. 6. 74 suspensi loculos tabulamque lacerto. The ablative may be that of 'place where' (cf. S. I. 3. 32 in pede calceus haeret), but with relo and suspendo, at least, the feeling is probably that of (prevented) separation, as in Verg. Aen. VII. 106 gramineo ripae religavit ab aggere classem, Lucan, VII. 860 nullus ab Emathio religasset litore funem navita. With haereo Horace also uses the dative; as C. I. 32. 9 illi semper haerentem. (Cf. the opposite points of view that find expression in proximus alicui and proximus ab aliquo.)

72. The ablative of cause is used with certain verbs denoting passion or mental disturbance; such are ardeo, caleo, uro, pecco; furo, insanio; langueo, stupeo, torpeo; as C. II. 4. 8 arsit virgine rapta; C. I. 27. 16 ingenuo semper amore peccas; S. I. 4. 28 stupet Albius aere. Horace has the ablative with in, once each, with uro, laboro, and stupeo: Epod. 11. 4; C. I. 17. 19; S. I. 6. 17; and ardeo once, perhaps, with the accusative: C. IV. 9. 13 comptos arsit adulteri crinis (cf. Verg. Ecl. 2. 1 Corydon ardebat Alexin); but see note on the passage.

73. An instrumental ablative with a verbal substantive in -tor occurs C. III. 4. 55 truncis iaculator; with a verbal adjective, C. IV. 6. 8.

74. The ablative of price, added to the accusative after muto may denote either the thing given or the thing received in exchange; as Ep. I. 7. 36 nec otia divitiis muto, i. e. give up my leisure (acc.) for wealth (abl.); C. I. 17. 2 Lucretilem mutat Lycaeο Faunus, i. e. gives up Lycaeus (abl.) for Lucretilis (acc.). (Cf. the double use of ἀλλάσσω τί τινος.) Similarly with verto the ablative is twice used to denote that into which the object is transformed: C. I. 35. 4 vertere funeribus triumphos; Ep. II. 3. 226 vertere seria ludo; (cf. Ovid M. X. 157 nulla alite verti dignatur). The accusative with in is commonly used.

75. The ablative after comparatives is frequent, instead of the more logical expression with quam; as

C. I. 8. 9 olivum sanguine viperino cautius vitat (for quam sanguinem); C. III. 1. 9 viro vir latius ordinet (for quam vir). So with alius: Ep. II. 1. 240 alius Lysippo (for quam Lysippus). The ablative is rarely used when the first member of the comparison is not in the nominative or the accusative; as Ep. I. 10. 11 pane egeo, iam melitis potiore placentis.

The Construction ἀπὸ κοινοῦ.

76. An inflected word is sometimes placed in such relation to two other words that it may be governed by either of them, and is, in some cases, necessary to both to complete their meaning. By this arrangement, called by grammarians the $\sigma\chi\eta\mu\alpha$ ἀπὸ κοινοῦ, a repetition of the idea, by means of a pronoun or otherwise, is avoided ; as

C. II. 11. 11 quid aeternis minorem consiliis animum fatigas? (= quid aeternis consiliis animum, illis minorem, fatigas?) ; C. II. 14. 15 frustra per autumnos nocentem corporibus metuemus austrum (where both nocentem corporibus and corporibus metuemus can hardly fail to convey to the reader the usual significance of such juxtaposition) ; Epod. 9. 9 vincla quae detraxerat servis amicus perfidis.

Number and Tense of the Verb.

77. Horace is noticeably fond of using a singular verb where there are two or more subjects ; as

C. II. 13. 38 quin et Prometheus et Pelopis parens dulci laborem decipitur sono ; C. II. 18. 26 pellitur paternos in sinu ferens deos et uxor et vir sordidosque natos ; C. III. 16. 32 rivus aquae silvae . . . et segetis certa fides . . . fallit sorte beatior.

78. The colloquial present with future meaning, common in old Latin, is occasionally used by Horace ; as

C. III. 9. 17 quid si prisca ređit Venus, diductosque iugo cogit aeneo, si flava excutitur Chloe, reiectaeque patet ianua Lydiae? Ep. I. 7. 34 hac ego si compellor imagine, cuncta resigno, . . . nec otia divitiis Arabum liberrima muto.

79. The future indicative is sometimes used with a concessive force, expressing, with indifference or acquiescence, the action of some other person or persons, with which that of the speaker, or of some one in whom he is more nearly interested, is brought into contrast ; as

C. I. 7. 1 laudabunt alii claram Rhodon aut Mytilenen, . . . me nec tam, etc. ; C. II. 12. 10 tuque pedestribus dices historiis proelia Caesaris, . . . me dulcis dominae musa Licymniae cantus, me voluit dicere (Cf. Verg. Aen. VI. 847 excudent alii spirantia mollius aera, | credo equidem, vivos ducent de marmore vultus, | orabunt causas melius, . . . | tu regere imperio populos, Romane, memento.)

80. The perfect indicative is used by the Augustan poets, like the Greek 'gnomic' aorist, to express a general truth or a customary action, — the statement that such and such a thing has proved true in the past conveying the implication that it is always true (cf. invictus, 'unconquered,' hence by implication, unconquerable); as

Ep. I. 17. 37 sedit qui timuit ne non succederet, he sits still who fears he may fail; C. I. 28. 20 nullum saeva caput Proserpina fūgit; Ep. I. 7. 21 haec seges ingratos tulit et feret omnibus annis (i. e. produces and always will produce).

81. (a) The archaic use of the perfect infinitive with volo, nolo, etc. (see § 94) was adopted by the poets, partly for metrical convenience, often merely to give variety to their diction. Horace in particular uses this construction with great freedom, the tense being often quite without significance; as

S. I. 2. 28 sunt qui nolint tetigisse; S. II. 3. 187 ne quis humasse velit Aiacem vetas (an intentional imitation of the archaic legal form); Ep. II. 3. 455 tetigisse timent fugiuntque poetam.

(b) It may be doubted, however, whether the consciousness of the tense was ever entirely lost, and in many cases the idea to be expressed is distinctly that of completed action; as

C. III. 4. 51 tendentes Pelion imposuisse Olympo (i. e. aiming at the achievement of that feat); S. II. 8. 79 nullos his mallem ludos spectasse (prefer to have seen); Ep. I. 17. 5 si quid et nos quod cures proprium fecisse loquamur; Ep. II. 3. 168 commisisse cavet quod mox mutare laboret.

Conditional and Concessive Clauses.

82. By a rhetorical exaggeration the pluperfect indicative is occasionally used in apodosis, instead of the pluperfect subjunctive, to indicate that the result of a condition contrary to fact was partly accomplished, or to give a vivid impression of the imminence of its accomplishment; as

C. III. 16. 3 inclusam Danaen turris aenea robustaeque fores et vigilum canum tristes excubiae munierant satis, si non Acrisium Iuppiter et Venus risissent (they had proved sufficient up to that point); C. II. 17. 28 me truncus inlapsus cerebro sustulerat, nisi Faunus ictum levasset.

83. In concessive clauses with quamvis, Horace, like the early Latin writers, uses both the indicative and the subjunctive, more commonly the former. The indicative usually expresses a conceded fact, the subjunctive an assumption; but there are some exceptions; as

C. III. 11. 18 cessit . . . Cerberus, quamvis furiale centum muniant angues caput . . . saniesque manet ore (fact); C. IV. 6. 7 tibi miles impar, filius quamvis Thetidis marinae Dardanas turris quateret (fact); S. II. 5. 15 qui quamvis periurus erit (assumption), . . . ne tamen illi tu comes exterior . . . ire recuses.

Relative Clauses.

84. In relative clauses of characteristic after sunt qui and the like, Horace frequently uses the indicative (a construction familiar in comedy), but also the subjunctive, with no apparent distinction of meaning; as

C. I. 7. 5 sunt quibus unum opus est; Ep. II. 1. 63 interdum volgus rectum videt, est ubi peccat; Ep. I. 1. 78 sunt qui viduas venentur avaras excipiantque senes; Ep. II. 2. 182 sunt qui non habeant, est qui non curat habere (where the more definite implication of the second relative clause is due to the number, not to the mood).

85. In a relative clause of characteristic with causal or concessive implication, Horace commonly uses the subjunctive, but sometimes the indicative; as

Ep. II. 3. 302 o ego laevus, qui purgor bilem sub verni temporis horam! C. II. 13. 34 quid mirum, ubi illis carminibus stupens demittit atras belua centiceps auris et intorti capillis Eumenidum recreantur angues?

86. In temporal clauses of repeated action after a past tense, Horace has the subjunctive once (two verbs):

S. I. 4. 107 cum me hortaretur parce frugaliter atque viverem uti contentus eo quod mi ipse parasset, . . . a turpi meretricis amore cum deterreret, . . . aiebat.

Elsewhere he uses the pluperfect indicative; as

S. II. 1. 71 quin ubi se a volgo et scaena in secreta remorant, . . . nugari et ludere soliti (sc. sunt); Ep. I. 15. 34 hic ubi fautoribus nil aut paulum abstulerat, patinas cenabat omasi; ib. 39 ubi omne verterat in fumum et cinerem, . . . aiebat; Epod. 11. 13 sqq.

Commands and Prohibitions.

87. In commands and prohibitions, Horace uses the hortatory subjunctive in the second person singular as well as in the third, and whether the injunction is addressed to a definite person or to the general reader; as

C. I. II. 6 (to Leuconoe) sapias, vina liques, et spatio brevi spem longam reseces; C. II. II. 3 quid bellicosus Cantaber et Scythes, Hirpine Quincti, cogitet, . . . remittas quaerere, nec trepides; S. I. I. 93 cum habeas plus, pauperiem metuas minus, et finire laborem incipias; S. II. 3. 88 ne sis patruus mihi.

88. In prohibition, besides the customary forms, — ne feceris, cave (or cave ne) facias, and noli facere with its various equivalents (see § 94β) — Horace uses very rarely the imperative itself; as

C. I. 28. 23 ne parce; C. II. 7. 20 nec parce cadis; C. III. 7. 30 neque in vias despice.

89. An emphatic non, standing at the head of a sentence and belonging rather to the whole sentence than to the verb, — as C. II. 10. 17 non, si male nunc, et olim sic erit; Ep. I. 3. 21 non tibi parvum ingenium, non incultum est, — is sometimes used even with a hortatory subjunctive in prohibition; as

Ep. I. 18. 72 non ancilla tuum iecur ulceret ulla puerve; S. II. 5. 91 cautus adito, neu desis operae neve immoderatus abundes. . . non etiam sileas; Davus sis comicus, etc.

NOTE. — Nec (neque), for neve (neu), is very common.

90. A command or prohibition is often expressed by the future indicative; as

Ep. I. 1. 87 cras ferramenta Teanum tolletis, fabri; Ep. I. 13. 2 ut docui te saepe diuque, Augusto reddes signata volumina, Vini; Ep. I. 18. 37 arcanum neque tu scrutaberis illius umquam, commissumque teges . . .; nec tua laudabis studia aut aliena reprehendes. (Cf. the form of modern military orders: 'You will proceed with your command to such and such a place, etc.')

The Infinitive.

91. The so-called 'Historical Infinitive' occurs nowhere in the Odes and only once in the Epodes (5. 84 lenire). In the Satires it is not infrequent, and three instances of its use are found in the Epistles.

92. The Infinitive in Exclamation is used twice in the Epodes (8. 1 rogare ; 11. 11 valere), and four times in the Satires (I. 9. 73 surrexe ; II. 4. 83 sq. radere, dare ; II. 8. 67 torquerier). In all these examples except the first it is introduced by -ne. It does not occur in the Odes or Epistles.

93. The Infinitive of Purpose was an old colloquial construction, used especially after verbs of movement ; as Ter. Hec. 345 intro iit videre, he has gone in to see. It is frequent in comedy, but except in the phrase do (or, once, ministro) bibere is not found in classical prose writers ; nor did it, like most poetical constructions, obtain a footing in later prose. The Augustan poets took it up, under Greek influence, but used it sparingly. The examples in Horace are as follows :

After verbs of movement : C. I. 2. 8 pecus egit altos visere montis ; C. I. 23. 10 non te frangere persequor ; C. III. 8. 11 amphorae fumum bibere institutae. With trado : C. I. 26. 3 tristitiam et metus tradam protervis in mare Creticum portare ventis. With sumo, to take or choose (as a subject) : C. I. 12. 2 quem sumis celebrare ? Ep. I. 3. 7 quis sibi res gestas Augusti scribere sumit ? With other verbs ; Ep. I. 2. 27 fruges consumere nati ; Epod. 16. 16 (see note).

94. The Complementary Infinitive. For the colorless expression of will, desire, intention, effort, power, capacity, and the like, by such verbs as volo, nolo, cupio, possum, cogito, conor, which take a simple infinitive to denote the action (of the same subject) to which they point, it is natural in animated discourse to substitute words more vividly expressive of the feeling or power to be indicated. Some of these found their way into classical prose. Thus Cicero, to express desire, frequently uses studeo, aveo, concupisco, gestio, and (once each) praegestio and expeto, with a complementary infinitive; for unwillingness through indifference he has non curo, non laboro, non induco animum; for unwillingness due to fear, vercor and timeo (not metuo); for anxious effort quaero, laboro. The poets, as was to be expected, carried this process much further, and permitted themselves great freedom, especially to give livelier expression to the feeling which prompts or accompanies an action. The verbs used by Horace in this construction (with the exception of those very common in prose) are as follows:

(I.) Expressions of will, desire, intention, effort.

(a) POSITIVE.

(a) Mere willingness or approval: patior, dignor, probo; as C. III. 9. 15 bis patiar mori; Ep. I. 19. 40 non ego grammaticas ambire tribus et pulpita dignor; C. S. 15 Lucina probas vocari.

(b) Concern, interest: curo, laboro; as C. II. 7. 25 quis deproperare coronas curat? (but curo is more commonly negative or with negative implication; see (i), below); Ep. I. 3. 2 scire laboro (see also under (h), below).

(c) Preference, desire, passion: praefero, amo, studeo, quaero, iuvat, aveo, gestio, praegestio, furo; as Ep. II. 2. 184 cessare et ludere et ungui praeferat; C. I. 2. 50 hic ames dici pater atque princeps; C. I. 16. 26 mitibus mutare quaero tristia; Epod. 9. 37 capaciores adfer huc, puer scyphos, . . . curam metumque iuvat dulci Lyaco solvere (i.e. I feel a desire to); C. I. 15. 27 furit te reperire.

(d) Delight: gaudeo, delector, glorior, renideo; as C. III. 6. 21 motus doceri gaudet Ionicos; Ep. I. 16. 32 vir bonus et prudens dici delector; Epod. 11. 23 gloriantis vincere; C. III. 6. 12 adiecisse praedam torquibus exiguis renidet.

(e) Demand, claim: posco, flagito; as Ep. II. 3. 339 ne poscat sibi fabula credi; S. II. 4. 61 flagitat refici.

(f) Purpose, resolve: meditor, coniuro; as C. III. 8. 23 meditantur cedere campis; C. I. 15. 7 coniurata tuas rumpere nuptias.

(g) Eagerness, haste: propero, festino, occupo, urgeo, trepido; as C. II. 12. 28 (oscula) rapere occupet; C. II. 18. 20 urges submovere litora; C. II. 4. 23 octavum trepidavit aetas claudere lustrum.

(h) Effort, struggle: peto, expeto, tendo, laboro, enitor, certo; as Ep. I. II. 29 navibus atque quadrigis petimus bene vivere; Epod. II. 3 me expetit urere; Ep. I. 10. 20 aqua tendit rumpere plumbum; Ep. I. 20. 16 quis invitum servare laboret? (No clear line can be drawn between this use of laboro, 'anxiously try,' and that under (h) above, 'anxiously wish.');

Ep. II. 3. 236 nec sic enitar tragico differre colori; C. I. I. 8 certat tollere honoribus.

(β) NEGATIVE.

(i) Unconcern, reluctance: non curo, non magni pendo, contemno, sperno, non induco animum, indignor, invideo; as C. II. 13. 39 nec curat Orion leones agitare; S. II. 4. 92 quem tu vidisse non magni pendes; Ep. I. I. 50 quis coronari contemnat Olympia? S. I. 3. 2 ut numquam inducant animum cantare; Ep. II. 3. 90 indignatur privatis ac prope socco dignis carminibus narrari cena Thyestae; C. I. 37. 30 saevis Liburnis invidens deduci triumpho.

(j) Neglect, inaction: mitto, omitto, remitto, cesso, moror, differo; as Epod. 13. 7 cetera mitte loqui; C. II. II. 3 remittas quaerere; C. IV. 4. 21 quaerere distuli.

(k) Refusal, avoidance: recuso, denego, vito, fugio, refugio, aufero, caveo, parco; as Ep. II. 3. 39 quid ferre recusent, quid valeant umeri; C. III. 16. 38 nec si plura velim tu dare deneges; Ep. I. 3. 16 ut tangere vitet; C. I. 9. 13 fuge quaerere; S. II. 7. 43 aufer me voltu terrere (= noli terrere); Ep. II. 3. 168 commisisse cavet quod mox mutare laboret.

(l) Fear, hatred: vereor, timeo, metuo, formido, perhorresco, odi; as C. III. 9. 11 non metuam mori; Ep. I. 19. 46 naribus uti formido; C. III. 16. 18 iure perhorruī late conspicuum tollere verticem; Ep. I. 16. 52 oderunt peccare boni.

(m) Pain, regret: doleo, ploro; C. IV. 4. 62 non Hydra secto corpore firmior vinci dolentem crevit in Herculem; C. III. 10. 4 me obicere plorares Aquilonibus.

(n) Power: valeo, evalesco, habeo, est (= εἶναι, it is possible); as C. I. 31. 12 valet ima summis mutare; Ep. II. 1. 201 quae pervincere voces evaluere sonum, referunt quem nostra theatra? Epod. 16. 23 sic placet, an melius quis habet suadere? S. II. 5. 103 est gaudia prodentem voltum celare.

(o) Capacity, skill, incapacity: scio, calleo, novi, nescio, ignoro; as Ep. I. 17. 14 si sciret regibus uti (knew how); C. IV. 9. 49 callet pauperiem pati; S. II. 3. 24 hortos egregiasque domos mercarier

unus cum lucro noram; Ep. II. 3. 87 descriptas servare vices operumque colores cur ego si nequeo ignoroque poeta salutor?

(III.) Expressions of propriety or necessity.

(p) Propriety, fitness, obligation: vincit (= praestat), quo tibi?, restat; as S. II. 5. 73 sed vincit longe prius ipsum expugnare caput; S. I. 6. 24 quo tibi, Tilli, sumere depositum clavum fierique tribuno? (cf. § 52); Ep. I. 6. 27 ire tamen restat Numa quo devenit (i. e. that destiny is in store for you).

95. The complementary infinitive is often hardly distinguishable from a substantive object of the verb; but in some cases the distinction is important; as

C. I. 28. 31 negligis fraudem committere? do you treat lightly the commission of a wrong? C. III. 14. 15 nec mori per vim metuam, nor shall I be in fear of a violent death (in contrast with C. III. 9. 11 non metuam mori, = 'I shall be willing to die'); Ep. I. 7. 4 quam mihi das aegro, dabis aegrotare timenti (fear I am going to be ill); Ep. I. 16. 60 labra movet, metuens audiri.

96. In one instance Horace uses the infinitive after a preposition: S. II. 5. 69 inveniet nil sibi legatum praeter plorare. But here the infinitive really depends on legatum; cf. the example with dam-natus, § 97 b.

97. The infinitive is used by Horace with the following verbs (after the analogy of iubeo, cogo, docco, sino, prohibeo), denoting influence of the subject on the action of other persons:

(a) Verbs signifying to ask, encourage, advise, bid: rogo, voco, hortor, moneo, admoneo, censeo, refero; as S. I. 3. 2 cantare rogati; C. II. 18. 40 levare pauperem vocatus; Ep. I. 1. 69 Fortunae te respondere superbae . . . hortatur et aptat; S. I. 6. 126 me fessum sol acrior ire lavatum admonuit; Ep. I. 2. 9 Antenor censet belli praecidere causam; Ep. I. 8. 1 Celso gaudere et bene rem gerere, Musa, rogata refer (i. e. 'tell him to' or 'tell him I bid him').

(b) Verbs signifying to urge, command, require (mostly passive): impello, impero, damno, auctor, addico; as C. III. 7. 14 ut Proetum mulier perfida impulerit Bellerophontae maturare necem; Ep. I. 5. 21 haec ego procurare imperor; S. II. 3. 86 gladiatorum dare centum damnati paria (by the terms of a will); S. II. 7. 59 uri virgis ferroque necari auctoratus (bound by the terms of enlistment as a gladiator); Ep. I. 1. 14 nullius addictus iurare in verba magistri.

(c) Verbs signifying to show, teach: monstro, fingo, apto; as S. II. 8. 52 inulas ego primus monstravi incoquere; Ep. I. 2. 64 fingit equum magister ire viam; see also third example under (a), above.

(d) Verbs signifying to permit: do, dono, reddo, permitto, concedo, relinquo, fero; as S. II. 3. 191 di tibi dent classem reducere; S. II. 5. 60 divinare mihi donat Apollo; Ep. I. 7. 27 reddes forte latus, . . . reddes dulce loqui, reddes ridere decorum, et inter vina fugam Cinaræ maerere protervæ; S. II. 3. 190 dicere permitto (with dative); Ep. I. 5. 12 quo mihi fortunam, si non conceditur uti? S. I. 1. 52 dum nobis tantundem haurire relinquo; Epod. 15. 13 non feret potiori te dare noctes.

(e) Verbs signifying to prevent: invideo, adimo, interpello; S. I. 2. 100 quæ invideant apparere tibi rem; Ep. I. 19. 9 adimam cantare severis; S. I. 6. 127 pransus non avide, quantum interpellat inani ventre diem durare (prevent me from passing).

98. The infinitive of indirect discourse, with or without a subject accusative, is used after the following verbs :

induco (of dramatic representation), vinco and evinco (maintain, triumphantly prove), contendo (assert), fido, do (admit, grant); as S. I. 2. 21 pater ille Terenti fabula quem miserum vixisse inducit; S. II. 3. 225 vincet enim stultos ratio insanire nepotes; ib. 250 puerilius his ratio esse evincet amare; Ep. I. 16. 37 si clamet furem, neget esse pudicum, contendat laqueo collum pressisse paternum; Ep. I. 19. 44 fidis manare poetica mella te solum; S. I. 4. 39 dederim quibus esse poetas.

99. (a) In indirect discourse the subject of the infinitive is sometimes omitted if it is the same as the subject of the leading verb or is readily understood from the context; as

Ep. I. 2. 11 quid Paris? . . . cogi posse negat; Ep. I. 9. 5 cum rogat et prece cogit, scilicet ut tibi se laudare et tradere coner, . . . munere cum fungi propioris censeat amici, quid possim videt ac novit me valdius ipso. Sometimes both subject and verb (esse) are omitted; as Ep. I. 18. 2 metues scurrantis speciem præbere, professus amicum.

(b) In two instances, where the subject is identical with that of the leading verb, the predicate is attracted, after the Greek manner, into the nominative :

C. III. 27. 73 uxor invicti Iovis esse nescis; Ep. I. 7. 22 vir bonus et sapiens dignis ait esse paratus.

100. The infinitive of indirect discourse is used with the following, as verbs of feeling :

gestio, gemo, ploro, lamentor, indignor ; as S. I. 4. 37 quodcumque chartis inleverit omnis gestiet scire ; Ep. I. 20. 4 paucis ostendi gemis (see § 99 a) ; Ep. II. 1. 9 ploravere suis non respondere favorem speratum meritis ; ib. 76 indignor quicquam reprehendi ; ib. 224 lamentamur non apparere labores.

101. The Infinitive with Adjectives. This construction is confined in classical prose to a few adjectives of verbal origin, like paratus, and is rare in poetry before the Augustan age. In the hands of Vergil and Horace it received a rich development and was thenceforth an established feature of poetic diction. The infinitive is usually complementary in character. It is attached to participles (used adjectively) of verbs which take an infinitive, as sciens (cf. § 94 o), doctus and doctior, meritus ; to adjectives of similar origin, as nescius, indoctus, indocilis, audax, callidus, timidus ; finally, to a great number of adjectives expressing in various phases the power, will, capacity, fitness (or the reverse) to do something. The adjectives so used in Horace are as follows :

(a) Expressing disposition : praesens (of a goddess, implying power and readiness), lenis (also of a divinity, indulgent, gracious), saevus (ruthless), impotens (wild, undisciplined) ; audax, fortis, contentus, cautus, timidus ; as C. I. 35. 2 o diva . . . , praesens vel imo tollere de gradu mortale corpus ; C. I. 24. 17 (Mercurius) non lenis precibus fata recludere ; Ep. I. 15. 30 opprobria fingere saevus ; C. I. 37. 10 quidlibet impotens sperare ; C. I. 3. 25 audax omnia perpeti ; C. I. 37. 26 fortis et asperas tractare serpentes ; S. I. 10. 59 pedibus quid claudere senis, hoc tantum contentus ; S. I. 6. 51 cautum dignos (amicos) adsumere ; C. III. 19. 2 non timidus mori.

(b) Expressing capacity, energy, or their opposites : efficax, pertinax, celer, pernix, largus (liberal, generous), firmus (to be depended upon), impiger ; piger, segnis (slow, reluctant), dolosus (not to be trusted, too fickle) ; as C. IV. 12. 20 (cadus) spes donare novas largus amaraeque curarum eluere efficax ; C. III. 29. 50 (Fortuna) ludum insolemem ludere pertinax ; C. I. 15. 18 celerem sequi ; Ep. II. 3. 165 amata relinquere pernix ; Ep. I. 17. 47 fundus nec vendibilis nec pascere firmus ; C. IV. 14. 22 impiger hostium vexare turmas ;

S. I. 4. 12 piger scribendi ferre laborem; C. III. 21. 22 segnes nodum solvere Gratiae; C. I. 35. 28 amici ferre iugum pariter dolosi.

(c) Expressing knowledge, skill, or the reverse: sciens, doctus, doctior, callidus, catus, sollers, prudens, blandus (with charm), nobilis; nescius, indoctus, indocilis, durus, minor; as C. III. 7. 25 flectere equum sciens; C. III. 24. 56 ludere doctior; C. I. 10. 7 callidum quicquid placuit iocoso condere furto; C. III. 12. 4 catus cervos iaculari; C. IV. 8. 9 hic saxo, ille coloribus sollers nunc hominem ponere, nunc deum; Epod. 17. 47 in sepulcris prudens anus dissipare pulveres; C. I. 12. 11 (Orpheus) blandum et auritas fidibus canoris ducere quercus; ib. 26 [Pollucem] superare pugnis nobilem (the infinitive here may possibly be attributed to the idea of nosco contained in the adjective, like that of docco in indocilis; cf. Sil. Ital. XII. 331 Troianos notus semper minuisse labores; but it is much more probable that nobilem is intended to express preëminent skill, and that the infinitive is complementary; cf. Verg. Ecl. 5. 2. boni calamos inflare; Lucan III. 697 eximius animam servare; and the use of minor, below; see also § 102); C. IV. 6. 18 nescios fari (= infantes) pueros; C. I. 1. 18 indocilis pauperiem pati; S. I. 4. 8 durus componere versus (implying lack of capacity; but see § 102); S. II. 3. 313 certare minorem (cf. Verg. Ecl. 7. 5 cantare pares.)

(d) Expressing fitness, merit, or the opposite: idoneus, utilis, dignus, meritus, indignus, immeritus: as Ep. I. 16. 12 fons rivo dare nomen idoneus; Ep. II. 3. 204 (tibia) adspirare et adesse choris erat utilis; Ep. I. 10. 48 tortum digna sequi potius quam ducere funem (see also (e), below); Ep. I. 3. 35 indigni fratrum rumpere foedus (i. e. men for whom such conduct is unbecoming); C. III. 2. 21 immeritis mori. Cf. the dative with adjectives of this class, § 58 b and c.

(e) With dignus the passive infinitive is more frequent; as S. I. 3. 24 dignus notari; and it is also found with levis and cereus; C. II. 4. 11 leviora tolli Pergama (easier); Ep. II. 3. 163 (iuvenis) cereus in vitium flecti (like wax, as easy as wax).

102. As the quality which fits one for an action is likely to be displayed in the action itself, — e.g. ‘swift to pursue’ passes into ‘swift in pursuit,’ — the infinitive with an adjective readily acquires the force of an ablative of respect. This is manifest in many of the examples given above, such as those with saevus, cautus, pertinax, celer, impiger, nobilis, durus. In the following examples it is the prevailing signification, the infinitive, if it is passive, being equivalent to a verbal noun in -u.

C. S. 25 veraces cecinisse, where the perfect (found only here in this construction) has its proper force; S. II. 8. 24 ridiculus totas simul absorbere placentas; C. I. 19. 8 voltus nimium lubricus adspici (= adspectu); C. IV. 2. 59 niveus videri (= visu).

The Participle.

103. The participle is used, more freely than in prose, as a substantive or adjective, often retaining its verbal force; as

Ep. I. 17. 43 coram rege sua de paupertate tacentes plus poscente ferent; C. II. 16. 1 otium divos rogat in patenti prensus Aegaeo; C. III. 7. 19 peccare docentis historias.

104. The future participle often fulfils the function of a clause appended to its subject, with various shades of meaning:—

(a) Simple future fact or intention; as C. I. 35. 29 serves iturum Caesarem in ultimos orbis Britannos (i. e. qui iturus est).

(b) With prophetic force,—‘sure to,’ ‘doomed to’; as Epod. 15. 11 o dolitura multum Neaera; C. II. 3. 27 versatur urna serius ocus sors exitura et nos in aeternum exsilium impositura cumbae.

(c) Equivalent to a relative clause of characteristic; as Epod. 6. 4 quin me remorsurum petis? (a dog that will bite back); S. II. 8. 85 Nasidienne, redis mutatae frontis, ut arte emendaturus fortunam (as one resolved, etc.); Epod. 15. 3 cum tu, magnorum numen laesura deorum, in verba iurabas mea (with concessive implication).

(d) Conditional statement: S. II. 8. 44 haec gravida capta est, deterior post partum carne futura (i. e. quae quidem carne deterior esset, si post partum capta esset); Epod. I. 22 non, ut adsit, auxiliatura plus (i. e. etsi non plus auxilii ferat, si adsit); S. I. 10. 89 doliturus si placeant spe deterius (and I should be sorry if, etc.).—Hence

(e) With a vague condition, like si libeat, si opus sit, expressed or understood, giving it the force of ‘ready to,’ ‘able to’; as C. IV. 3. 20 o mutis quoque piscibus donatura cyni, si libeat, sonum (= ‘able to give’); C. II. 6. 1 Septimi, Gadis aditure mecum (ready to go).

105. (a) The combination of a substantive with a participle, an adjective, or another substantive to express an abstract idea, — familiar in prose in the gerundive construction, in the ablative absolute, and in the similar use, to a limited extent; of the accusative (as ante me consulem = ante meum consulatum) — was given a much wider range by the poets; as

C. II. 4. 10 postquam ademptus Hector tradidit leviora tolli Pergama Grais (the taking-off of Hector); C. III. 6. 29 non sine conscio marito (with the connivance of her husband); Epod. 9. 2 victore laetus Caesare (glad of Caesar's victory).

(b) The ablative of this construction is sometimes equivalent to an ablative of manner or means; as

S. II. 1. 84 iudice laudatus Caesare, commended by the verdict of Caesar; Ep. I. 1. 94 curatus inaequali tonsore capillos, my hair trimmed with a lopsided cut; Ep. I. 16. 42 quo multae magnaeque secantur iudice lites, quo res sponsore, et quo causae teste tenentur (by whose verdict, credit, testimony).

(B) ORDER AND USE OF WORDS.

106. In reading Latin prose the feature of the language which is at once the most difficult and the most important for us to master, is the freedom which inflexion gives of separating in expression ideas closely connected in sense, and the consequent demand that is made upon us to hold in suspense, as we proceed, a partially expressed thought, and to grasp at once the meaning of a whole group of words. For us, who speak an uninflected language, this must be an acquired habit; but it is quite indispensable: he who has not cultivated it cannot read Latin, though he may be able to translate it. For reading Latin poetry we have to carry this cultivation still farther; but it is only a higher degree of the same capacity that is required, not a new kind of capacity.

107. There is, in fact, no clear line of distinction between prose and verse, in respect to the order of words, although their general characteristics are plainly marked. In prose the greatest freedom of movement is accorded to the verb, which may be placed, with little reference to the position of its subject or object, wherever emphasis or the order of thought or rhetorical form may suggest. On the other hand a modifier of any kind must keep reasonably near its noun or verb, and the least liberty of all is allowed to an attribute and its substantive. These as a rule are not separated except by unemphatic words, — pronouns, particles, and the like, — as ‘magna ex parte,’ ‘angustos se fines (habere),’ ‘quanto id cum periculo (fieret).’ Yet Roman prose writers permit themselves occasionally a compact group like ‘eodem usi consilio,’ ‘(de) ea quam habeat gratia’; or even a longer group, especially where the inserted words themselves constitute a modifier, as ‘tua in me vel nota omnibus vel ipsa novitate meorum temporum clarissima et maxima beneficia,’ ‘meam tuorum erga me meritorum memoriam.’ But such combinations have a rhetorical flavor in prose, and are in fact sparingly used. In verse, on the other hand, they are rather the rule than the exception; the poets have studiously wrought out artistic groupings and sequences which the reader must train himself to grasp and follow, if he would appreciate the beauty of poetical expression. The forms are too varied and complex to be set forth fully, but the following examples, chiefly from Horace’s lyric poems, may serve to indicate their character and point out the way to study them.

Grouping of Connected Words.

108. The following are examples of simple groups :

(a) Groups of three words (very common) :

C. I. 3. 8	animae dimidium meae
C. I. 27. 11	quo beatus vulnere
C. II. 13. 29	sacro digna silentio

C. I. 35. 12	purpurei metuunt tyranni
C. I. 5. 4	flavam religas comam
C. III. 17. 5	↙ auctore ab illo

(b) Groups of four words :

C. S. 29	fertilis frugum pecorisque tellus
C. III. 16. 17	crescentem sequitur cura pecuniam
C. I. 7. 23	populea fertur vinxisse corona
C. IV. 2. 3	vitreo daturus nomina ponto

(c) Groups of five words :

C. I. 27. 1	natis in usum laetitiae scyphis
C. I. 3. 30	nova febrium terris incubuit cohors
C. III. 1. 10	generosior descendat in campum petitor
C. I. 4. 15	spem nos vetat incohare longam
C. I. 4. 9	viridi nitidum caput impedire myrto

(d) Longer groups :

C. III. 29. 11	beatae fumum et opes strepitumque Romae
Ep. I. 10. 48	tortum digna sequi potius quam ducere funem
C. I. 27. 9	(voltis) severi me quoque sumere partem Falerni?

109. The arrangement within these groups presents great variety. (The arrow-head in the following examples indicates the governing word.)

C. I. 1. 22	aquae lene caput sacrae
C. IV. 1. 4	dulcium mater saeva Cupidinum
C. III. 13. 9	flagrantis atrox hora Caniculae
C. III. 8. 13 (a rare form)	cyathos amici sospitis centum
C. III. 1. 16	omne capax movit urna nomen
C. III. 13. 6	gelidos inficiet tibi rubro sanguine rivos
C. II. 3. 11	obliquo laborat lympa fugax trepidare rivo

110. When a word within a group is closely connected in sense with a word preceding or following the group, there results an alternating or interlocked order, which occurs in great variety ; as,

A remarkable example is C. I. 9. 21 :

where the three ideas shadowed forth in the first verse, — some one hiding, a betrayer, a hiding-place — are filled out one after another to complete a charming picture.

111. Two groups are sometimes linked together by the connection of their interior words ; as

112. The reader who has trained himself to recognize coherent groups of words, will be able to keep his hold on the connection even when their continuity is interrupted ; as

- C. III. 20. 3 dura post paulo fugies inaudax
 proelia raptor
- C. IV. 7. 27 nec Lethaea valet Theseus abrumpere caro
 vincula Pirithoo
- C. I. 2. 39 acer et Marsi peditis cruentum
 vultus in hostem
- C. III. 4. 9 me fabulosae Vulture in Apulo nutricis extra limen Apuliae ludo fatigatumque somno fronde nova puerum palumbes
 texere

where puerum, reviving the idea of me, supplies the necessary link between fabulosae and palumbes. Similarly in

- C. I. 22. 9 namque me silva lupus in Sabina, dum meam canto Lalagen et ultra terminum curis vagor expeditis, fugit inermem

fugit recalls me through its subject lupus.

III. The poet often uses the metre to suggest the connection of separated words, by placing them at the beginning and end of a verse or other definite portion of the rhythm; as

- C. I. 1. 14 Myrtoum pavidus nauta secet mare
- C. II. 3. 1 aequam memento rebus in arduis servare mentem ||
- C. II. 6. 15 || viridique certat
 baca Venafro
- C. III. 18. 11 festus in pratis vacat otioso cum bove pagus

or one at the end of each half of a verse (especially in the Sapphic verse, and in the Asclepiad, where a rhyme is often produced); as

- C. I. 22. 17 pone me pigris || ubi nulla campis
 arbor aestiva || recreatur aura
- C. I. 1. 9 illum si proprio || condidit horreo
 quicquid de Libycis || verritur areis or by giving them corresponding positions in different verses or hemistichs ; as

- C. II. 6. 13* ille terrarum mihi praeter omnis angulus ridet
- C. I. 26. 2* tradam protervis || in mare Creticum
 portare ventis ||
- C. I. 20. 6* simul et iocosa redderet laudes tibi Vaticani montis imago
- C. II. 2. 23* quisquis ingentis || oculo inretorto spectat acervos
- C. IV. 4. 69* Carthagini iam non ego nuntios
 mittam superbos ||

This is especially common at the close of an Alcaic or Sapphic strophe ; as

- C. I. 16. 11* nec tremendo
 Iuppiter ipse ruens tumultu
- C. I. 12. 7* unde vocalem temere insecutae
 Orphea silvae

114. A relative or interrogative pronoun or a particle which regularly stands at the head of a clause or phrase is often taken within the group, giving place to a more important word ; as

- C. I. 25. 17* laeta quod pubes hedera virenti gaudeat ; C. I. 2. 7 omne cum Proteus pecus egit ; C. I. 2. 18 vagus et sinistra labitur ripa ;
C. I. 37. 20 daret ut catenis fatale monstrum.

Sometimes two or more words precede ; as

- C. I. 18. 3* siccis omnia nam dura deus proposuit ; C. III. 1. 17 de-strictus ensis cui super impia cervice pendet ; Epod. 16. 40 Etrusca praeter et volate litora ; C. IV. 4. 42 dirus per urbis Afer ut Italas . . .
equitavit.

Prepositions.

115. (a) A preposition placed between a substantive and its modifier, often follows the substantive ; as

- mensis per omnis ; tempus in ultimum ; collibus in suis.

(b) Dissyllabic prepositions still in use as adverbs, — circa, circum, citra, supra, prope, — with inter, praeter, sine, are used with great freedom of position, often separated from their object, whether preceding or following it ; as haec inter ; quos inter ; aequalis inter ; C. III. 27. 31 nihil astra praeter vidit et undas ; S. I. 10. 31 natus mare citra ; S. I. 3. 60 genus hoc inter vitae : S. II. 3. 40 insanos qui inter vereare insanus haberi ; C. III. 19. 15 tris prohibet supra ; S. I. 10. 91 discipularum inter iubeo plorare cathedras.

(c) In such cases Horace is fond of placing the preposition before the verb of the sentence, as if it were an unattached prefix ; as

C. II. 16. 33 te greges centum Siculaeque circum
 mugiunt vaccae

C. III. 3. 37 dum longus inter || saeviat Ilion
 Romamque pontus

C. III. 27. 51 utinam inter errem | nuda leones

Ep. I. 3. 4 freta vicinas inter currentia turris

Ep. II. 1. 43 veteres inter ponetur

(d) Conversely the prefix of a compound verb is treated as detachable in some cases :

S. I. 1. 86 cum tu argento post omnia ponas

Ep. II. 2. 93 quanto molimine circum
 spectemus

Ep. II. 3. 424 si sciet inter noscere mendacem verumque beatus amicum

(e) The caesura of the verse is sometimes allowed to fall between a monosyllabic prepositional prefix and the following syllable of a compound word ; as

C. I. 37. 5 antehac nefas de||promere Caecubum

C. II. 12. 25 cum flagrantia de||torquet ad oscula

C. I. 16. 21 hostile aratrum ex||ercitus insolens

Emphasis.

116. Emphasis is secured (besides the methods usual in prose) —

(a) By placing in juxtaposition the two words of a group which express contrasted ideas ; as

C. I. 3. 10 qui fragilem truci | commisit pelago ratem

C. IV. 4. 31 neque imbellem feroces | progenerant aquilae columbam

(b) By rhythmical position. The places best adapted for this purpose are the beginning of a strophe or verse (especially when the word is held in reserve and stands at the end of its sentence in this position) and the end of a verse or hemistich ; as

C. III. 18. 2 per meos finis et aprica rura lenis incedas, abeasque parvis aequus alumnis

C. IV. 9. 25 vixere fortes ante Agamemnona multi

C. II. 10. 9 saepius ventis agitur ingens pinus, et celsae || *gravio*re casu decidunt turres, feriuntque summos
 fulgura montis

In C. II. 9 observe the emphasis on non semper, tu semper, at non, vss. 1, 9, 13 (under the first ictus), usque 4, omnis 6, omnis 14, semper 17, minores 22.

(c) By giving related or contrasted words prominent rhythmical positions ; as

C. III. 2. 17 virtus repulsae || nescia sordidae

C. III. 11. 31 impiae sponso potuere duro perdere ferro

C. II. 10. 13 sperat infestis, || metuit secundis

(See also the examples under § 113.)

(d) By repetition, — either immediately, in the same clause (Epizeuxis, especially common in the Epodes) ; as Epod. 4. 20 hoc hoc tribuno militum ; ib. 14. 6 deus deus nam me vetat ; C. II. 17. 10 ibimus ibimus, utcumque praecedes ;

(e) or immediately, at the beginning of a new clause, sometimes with some variation of form (Anadiplosis) ; as

C. III. 5. 21

'arma
 militibus sine caede' dixit
 'derepta vidi; vidi ego civium retorta tergo brachia libero'

C. III. 16. 15

subruit aemulos
 reges muneribus; munera navium saevos inlaqueant duces

(f) or, after intervening words, at the beginning of a new clause or of successive clauses (Anaphora); as

C. III. 3. 65

ter si resurgat murus aeneus auctore Phoebo, ter pereat meis excisus Argivis, ter uxor capta virum puerosque ploret

(g) The emphasis of Anaphora is usually enhanced by rhythmical position; as

C. II. 4. 4

serva Briseis niveo colore movit Achillem movit Aiacem . . .

C. II. 8. 13

ridet hoc, inquam, Venus ipsa, rident
 simplices Nymphae

(h) Anaphora, however, is sometimes used without special emphasis, merely serving the purpose of a connective; as

Epod. 5. 17

iubet sepulcris caprificos erutas, iubet cupressos funebris . . .
 flammis aduri Colchicis

117. (a) The poet, whose appeal is to the imagination rather than to the intellect, seeks to make a more vivid impression by presenting a picture in preference to an abstract conception, and by putting forward a particular person, object, or action to represent a whole class; as

C. I. 1. 9 proprio condidit horreo (for amassing wealth in general);
 11 findere sarculo (i. e. to till). Cf., further, 3 pulverem Olympicum;
 10 Libycis areis; 13 trabe Cypria; 14 Myrtoum mare; 15 Icariis fluctibus Africum; C. II. 18. 3 non trabes Hymettiae premunt columnas ultima recisas Africa, neque Attali ignotus heres regiam occupavi, nec Laconicas mihi trahunt honestae purpuras clientae. So the wind is Eurus, Notus, Aquilo; wine is Falernum, Caecubum, Sabinum; the Roman legionary Marsus et Apulus; the outside barbarian Dacus et Aethiops; and so on in endless variety.

(b) In the same way a part may produce a more distinct impression than the whole (Synecdoche); as

C. I. 1. 13 trabe Cypria (i. e. ship); I. 8. 7 Gallica ora (i. e. horse); C. III. 2. 16 nec parcit (mors) imbellis iuventae poplitibus timidove tergo; Epod. 16. 59 Sidonii (i. e. Phoenicians).

Ellipsis.

118. The common substantive of the antecedent and relative clauses is sometimes expressed only in the clause that comes second; as Epod. 2. 37 malarum quas amor habet curas (in prose, malarum curarum quas amor habet); S. I. 4. 2 alii quorum comoedia prisca virorum est; S. II. 2. 59 vinum et cuius odorem olei nequeas perferre (i. e. et oleum cuius odorem nequeas perferre).

119. (a) A word or phrase belonging to two words, phrases, or clauses in common is sometimes expressed with the second only; as Epod. 7. 13 furorne caecus an rapit vis acrior? C. III. 25. 2 quae nemora aut quos agor in specus.

(b) It is a favorite device of Horace to indicate this ellipsis by attaching an enclitic -que or -ve to the word, which then, as nothing precedes to which the conjunction can join it, suggests itself as the word to fill the omission; as

C. III. 1. 12 moribus hic meliorque fama (= melior moribus meliorque fama); S. II. 3. 139 non Pyladen ferro violare aususve sororem (= non Pyladen violare ausus aususve sororem); C. I. 30. 6 solutis Gratiae zonis properentque Nymphae (= properent Gratiae properentque Nymphae);

(c) So sive (seu) often implies a preceding si or sive; as

S. II. 5. 11 turdus sive aliud privum (= si(ve) turdus sive aliud); C. I. 3. 16 quo non arbiter Hadriae maior, tollere seu ponere volt freta (= sive tollere seu ponere).

(d) But sive (seu) in such a position more frequently follows an absolute statement or injunction or a description, to which it adds an alternative with a condition attached, — to be translated or, if; as

C. I. 15. 25 Sthenelus sciens pugnae, sive (= vel, si) opus est imperitare equis, non auriga piger; S. II. 6. 20 Matutine pater, seu Iane libentius audis (= vel Iane, si 'Iane' libentius audis).

120. A group of words which belongs to two or more members of a sentence in common is sometimes distributed among them, each part serving to suggest the rest; as

Ep. I. 3. 29 si patriae volumus, si nobis vivere cari; C. III. 21. 2 seu tu querellas sive geris iocos; C. II. 13. 39 nec curat Orion leones aut timidos agitare lyncas. C. I. 27. 11 quo beatus volnere, qua pereat sagitta.

121. Suggestion by similarity. Where two or more qualities belong to a series of objects, the poet is sometimes content to express one with each, leaving the rest to suggestion; as

Ep. I. 16. 50 cautus enim metuit foveam lupus, accipiterque suspectos laqueos, et opertum miluus hamum, — where the cautiousness of the animal (cautus) and his distrust (suspectos) of a masked danger (opertum) are to be understood of all three instances; Epod. 5. 37 exsecta uti medulla et aridum iecur (the dry marrow and liver, cut out).

122. Suggestion by contrast. Where a twofold contrast exists between two objects, it may be indicated by attributing to them single qualities which do not match. Each quality expressed will then suggest its opposite in the other object; as

C. III. 13. 6 gelidos inficiet tibi rubro sanguine rivos, — where the clear, cold water is contrasted with the warm, red blood; C. II. 3. 9 quo pinus ingens albaque populus umbram hospitalem consociare amant, — i. e. the tall, dark pine and the shorter, white poplar.

123. In illustrative comparisons Horace is fond of giving greater vividness to the figure by identifying the subject with it completely (with or without omission of the particle of comparison); as

Ep. II. 2. 97 caedimur et totidem plagis consumimus hostem, lento Samnites ad lumina prima duello (i. e. velut Samnites, etc.); Ep. II. 3. 475 quem vero arripuit [poeta] tenet occiditque legendo, non missura cutem nisi plena cruoris hirudo ; C. I. 15. 29 quem tu, cervus uti vallis in altera visum parte lupum graminis immemor, sublimi fugies mollis anhelitu ; Ep. I. 2. 42 rusticus ; Ep. I. 10. 5 columbi.

Attributes.

124. In poetical language a quality of a person or thing is often attributed to some part of it, or to some object which from close association is felt to partake of the quality, or to some action which manifests it ; as

C. III. 1. 17 dstrictus ensis cui super impia cervice pendet ; C. I. 3. 40 neque patimur iracunda Iovem ponere fulmina ; Epod. 10. 14 impiam Aiakis ratem ; C. I. 37. 6 dum Capitolio regina dementis ruinas . . . parabat ; C. III. 1. 42 purpurarum sidere clarior usus. In this way a quality is often suggested without being expressly attributed ; as C. IV. 4. 57 ut ilex tonsa bipennibus nigrae feraci frondis in Alcido, — where the dark foliage is that of the ilex itself.

125. A quality is often attributed to an object which it does not itself possess, but which is reflected upon it, as it were, from the effect it produces in others ; as

C. I. 5. 7 nigris ventis (i. e. those that darken the sky) ; so I. 7. 15 albus Notus ; C. II. 7. 21, oblivioso Massico (that induces forgetfulness) ; C. II. 10. 15 informis hiemes (marring the face of nature).

126. An attribute may be brought into greater prominence — (a) By Hendiadys ; as Epod. 5. 54 iram atque numen, all-powerful wrath ;

(b) By means of an abstract substantive, with the person who possesses the quality and is the logical subject of the sentence appended in the form of a limiting genitive or an adjective (a Homeric device) ; as

S. II. 1. 72 ubi se a volgo et scaena in secreta remorant virtus Scipiadæ et mitis sapientia Laeli ; C. III. 21. 11 narratur et prisci Catonis saepe mero caluisse virtus ; Ep. II. 1. 191 trahitur regum fortuna ; C. I. 3. 36 perripit Acheronta Herculeus labor ;

(c) By a substantive in apposition ; as

C. I. 1. 1 atavis edite regibus (= regiis) ; C. I. 4. 16 iam te premet nox fabulaeque manes. The appositive may itself have a modifier ; as C. I. 3. 20 infamis scopulos Acrocerania.

Enallage.

127. The singular is occasionally used for the plural, either collectively (especially with an adjective of number or quantity) or putting one object to represent its class ; as

Epod. 2. 31 multa cane ; Ep. II. 3. 203 (tibia) foramine paucō ; Epod. 3. 14 (Medea) serpente fugit alite ; C. I. 37. 3 ornare pulvinar deorum.

128. The poets use the plural not only of abstracts and of names of things reckoned in bulk (amores, irae, calores, acumina ; cruores, vina, Caecuba, and the like), expressing occurrences of a quality, kinds of a substance, etc., as in prose, but even of substantives which designate only a single object or action ; as

C. I. 2. 15 monumenta regis templaque Vestae (each a single structure) ; C. III. 27. 75 tua sectus orbis nomina ducet ; C. III. 5. 52 populum reditus (sc. of Regulus to Carthage) morantem ; Epod. 17. 3 Dianae non movenda numina.

129. The poet often uses an archaic simple verb in place of the more exact compound form in current use ; as

C. III. 25. 16 manibus vertere fraxinos (for convertere) ; C. III. 27. 74 mitte singultus (for omitte) ; C. III. 21. 32 virtutem incolumem odimus, sublatam ex oculis quaerimus invidi (for requirimus).

Metonymy.

130. The name of a divinity standing for his special province is particularly common ; as

Epod. 7. 3 campis atque Neptuno super (i. e. on land and sea) ; C. III. 24. 13 iugera liberas fruges et Cererem ferunt ; C. III. 16. 34 Bacchus in amphora languescit. (See Lucr. II. 652 sqq.)

Alliteration and Assonance.

131. Alliteration and assonance hold a very subordinate place in the structure of Horace's poetry, but he employs them to a limited extent. Alliterative sequences that bear the stamp of conscious effort, such as

S. I. 6. 57 pudor prohibebat plura profari are extremely rare, except where correspondence of sound with sense is aimed at, as

S. II. 8. 78 videres stridere secreta divisos aure susurros

C. I. 4. 13

pallida mors aequo pulsat pede pauperum tabernas

C. III. 5. 49

quae sibi barbarus

tortor pararet

Alliterative or assonant pairs, like dulce decus, Pontica pinus, vera virtus, maius meliusve, arcis attigit, obruit otio, come in from time to time in a natural way; sometimes two pairs in succession, as

C. I. 1. 16

mercator metuens, otium et oppidi

C. II. 1. 1

motum ex Metello consule civicum

C. III. 2. 1

angustam amice pauperiem pati

But in general Horace avoids mere iteration by alternating the recurring sounds with one another or judiciously distributing them, often with reference to metrical or syntactical connection, so that the reader feels the pleasing effect with little or no consciousness of the manner in which it is produced. The following examples will illustrate his method:

C. I. 29. 11

pronos relabi posse rivos

C. IV. 5. 24

culpam poena premit comes

C. III. 17. 8

litoribus tenuisse Livim | late tyrannus

C. IV. 2. 3

nititur pennis, vitreo daturus

nomina ponto

C. II. 8. 15

semper ardentis acuens sagittas

cote cruenta

C. II. 6. 15

viridique certat | baca Venafro

C. II. 1. 36

quae caret ora cruore nostro?

Epod. 16. 47

mella cava manant ex ilice, montibus altis

levis crepante lympa desilit pede

III. VERSIFICATION AND PROSODY OF THE LYRIC POEMS.

(A) VERSIFICATION.

NOTE. — In all the rhythms used by Horace the last syllable of the verse is syllaba anceps, i. e., its quantity is not considered. This is to be understood in all cases, though, for the sake of greater simplicity, it has not been indicated in the metrical schemes here given, being common to all. The sign $\cup$ is used to indicate two short syllables which are to be pronounced in the time of one short. In other respects the metrical notation is that adopted in the grammars in current use. 'Caesura' (||) is used to denote the regular pause in the verse, whether it falls within a measure (caesura in the stricter sense) or between two measures (diaeresis).

Dactylic Verses.

132. The Hexameter (dactylic hexameter catalectic):

Caesura in the second and fourth feet instead of the third, and 'feminine' caesura (i. e. between the short syllables of the dactyl) in the third are occasionally found, as Epod. 16. 31, C. I. 28. 15. A spondee in the fifth foot occurs four times, always in proper names: C. I. 28. 21 Ōrī ōnīs; Epod. 13. 9 Cŷllē|nēā; 16. 17 Phōcāē|ōrum; 16. 29 Appēn|nīnus. (There is only one spondiac verse in the Satires and Epistles, — Ep. II. 3. 467.)

133. The Dactylic Tetrameter (catalectic):

$\text{—} \cup \cup \mid \text{—} \cup \cup \mid \text{—} (\text{—}) \mid \text{—} \cup \wedge$

A spondee in the third foot occurs once (C. I. 28. 2).

134. The Lesser Archilochian verse (dactylic trimeter catalectic):

$\text{—} \cup \cup \cup \mid \text{—} \cup \cup \cup \mid \text{—} \wedge$

*Iambic and Trochaic Verses.135. The Iambic Trimeter : *

The caesura is occasionally hepthemimeral (as Epod. 1. 15 : 4. 3 ; 5. 3, etc.) ; in two verses it falls after the prefix of a compound word : Epod. 1. 19 im || plumibus ; 11. 15 in || aestuet (cf. 149, 150, 155, and see 115 e). Resolution is sparingly used. The apparent dactyl occurs chiefly in the first foot, seldom in the third ; the tribrach oftenest in the second and third, rarely in the first or fourth ; and both of these substitutions are always so made that the ictus coincides with a word-accent (in two cases with a secondary accent only : Epod. 17. 12 homicidam ; 74 inimicis), usually falling on the antepenult of a trisyllabic word. The anapaest occurs in the first foot only twice : Epod. 2. 35 pavidum, 65 positos (which are perhaps to be read by syncope as spondees ; see 183) ; and apparently three times in the fifth : Epod. 2. 35 laquo, 5. 79 inferius, 11. 23 mulierculam ; but see 180, 181.

136. The Pure Iambic Trimeter :

A hepthemimeral caesura occurs once (Epod. 16. 4).

137. The Iambic Dimeter :

* The metrical scheme is here given, to avoid confusion, in the form presented in the Greek and Latin grammars in common use. Iambic rhythm may also be represented, in accordance with our modern system of musical notation, thus : $\text{♩} : \text{—} \quad \text{♩} \text{—} \text{♩} | \text{—} \quad \text{♩}$ etc. ; and it will be necessary to adopt this method for those rhythms which are used in composite and logaoedic verse, where, though technically iambic, they are essentially trochaic in character.

Resolution occurs in only four verses (Epod. 2. 62 ; 3. 8 ; 5. 48 ; 15. 24) and under the same restrictions as in the trimeter (135). The scheme may also be written thus :

138. The Iambic Trimeter Catalectic :

Resolution occurs once, — C. II. 18. 34 regumque pueris, — unless we are to read by synizesis, pūeris (see 180).

139. The Nine-Syllable Alcaic (two trochaic dipodies, with anacrusis) :

$$\text{⏏} : \text{⏏} \cup | \text{⏏} > | \text{⏏} \cup | \text{⏏} \cup$$

The second trochee is always irrational.

140. The Euripidean verse (pure trochaic dimeter catalectic) :

$$\text{⏏} \cup \text{⏏} \cup | \text{⏏} \cup \text{⏏} \wedge$$

Composite Verses.

141. In several of the epodic distichs used by Horace, one of the verses is made up of two distinct cola, one dactylic and the other iambic or trochaic. Such a verse is usually ‘asynartete,’ that is, its two cola are not welded together (as, for example, the two halves of a hexameter are), but the end of the first colon is treated in all respects as the end of a verse, having syllaba anceps, and admitting hiatus before a following vowel. Whether the dactyl was read in trochaic time (cyclic dactyl) is uncertain. It is not improbable that there was a change of time in the middle of the verse.

142. The Greater Archilochian verse, composed of a dactylic tetrameter acatalectic and a trochaic tripody :

In the ten verses which Horace has left us in this measure

(C. I. 4) there is always caesura after the third ictus, and the first colon ends with a short final syllable, without hiatus.

143. The Elegiambus, composed of a lesser Archilochian (134)—which is identical with the second colon of the elegiac pentameter—and an iambic dimeter (137):

144. The Iambelegus, composed of the same cola as 143, but in reverse order:

No resolution occurs in the iambic cola, and no substitution in the dactylic, of either 143 or 144.

Logaoedic Verses.

145. Most of the Odes are composed in logaoedic rhythms, made up of trochaic, with an admixture of dactylic, elements. The combination of dactyl and trochee produces a succession of syllables identical with the choriamb (— ∪ ∪ —), especially where the trochee is syncopated (— ∪ | —) and the measure thus formed is repeated (as in 149 and 150, below). For this reason the rhythms were regarded by late Roman metrical writers as choriambic, and some of the verses (147–150, and sometimes 152) are still so called. Their choriambic character is only apparent; but it is nevertheless important to observe this measure,—which may, for convenience be called the ‘choriambic measure’—as its repetition constitutes the characteristic feature of some of the verses now to be explained. Thus, in 149 the rhythm proceeds through the choriambic measure (— ∪ | —) precisely as in 148; it then goes back, as it were, to the beginning of that measure and repeats it, but without syncopation (— ∪ | — || — ∪ | — ∪), and continues with trochaic movement to the close of the verse, as in 147. In the same way, 150 is developed from 149, and 152 from 151.

146. In his logaoedics Horace observes the following rules, prescribed in the metrical theories of his time, but unknown to the Greek lyric poets and to Catullus :

(a). Two choriambic measures in the same verse are separated by caesura.

(b). An irrational spondee takes the place of a trochee before the first dactyl ; thus, — > | ~ ~ | , not — ~ | ~ ~ | .

Horace's logaoedic verses are as follows :

147. The Glyconic (second Glyconic catalectic) :

Horace appears to have admitted a trochee before the first dactyl (cf. 146 b) in C. I. 15. 36 ; but see note.

148. The Pherecratic (second Pherecratic, to be read as a doubly catalectic tetrapody) :

149. The Lesser Asclepiad :

Caesura is neglected in C. IV. 8. 17 ; but the text here is in doubt. Caesura falls after the prefix of a compound word in II. 12. 25 de||torquet (cf. 135, 150, 155, and see 115 e).

150. The Greater Asclepiad :

Caesura falls after a prefix in C. I. 18. 16 per||lucidior (cf. 135, 149, 155, and see 115 e).

151. The Lesser Sapphic :

In the hands of Sappho and Alcaeus, and of Catullus, this verse had a much freer movement. The quantity of the fourth syllable was not fixed, and there was no regular caesura. In Horace the fourth syllable is invariably long (see 146*b*) and caesura in the dactyl is strictly observed, usually falling after the long syllable; 'feminine' caesura (—||) is frequent in the Carmen Saeculare and in Book IV., rare in the earlier books.

152. The Greater Sapphic:

— ∪ | — > | — || ∪ | — || — ∪ | — ∪ | — ∪
(or, perhaps, || — ∪ | — ∪ | — | — ^)

153. The Adonic:

— ∪ | — ∪ (or, perhaps, — ∪ | — | — ^)

154. The Aristophanic:

— ∪ | — ∪ | — ∪ (or, perhaps, — ∪ | — ∪ | — | — ^)

155. The Greater (eleven-syllable) Alcaic:

In Alcaeus the fifth syllable, like the anacrusis, is of variable quantity, and there is no fixed caesura. In Horace the anacrusis is usually, and in Book IV. always, long; caesura is neglected in only two instances (C. I. 37. 14, IV. 14. 17); in three it falls after a prefix, — C. I. 16. 21 ex||ercitus; 37. 5 de||promere; II. 17. 21 in||credibili (cf. 135, 149, 150, and see 115*e*).

156. The Lesser (ten-syllable) Alcaic:

— ∪ | — ∪ | — ∪ | — ∪

157. In the Epodes, with the exception of the seven-teenth, which consists of 81 iambic trimeters, every poem has an even number of verses, the unit of versification being a strophe of two verses, — the epodic distich from which the book derives its name (§ 18). In the Odes the number of verses is in all cases a multiple of four, with the exception of C. IV. 8, which contains 34 verses. In view of this striking fact, and in spite of C. IV. 8, — the text of which is open to grave suspicion on grounds quite independent of its metrical structure, — Meineke laid down the canon that Horace's odes were composed in tetrastichs, or strophes of four verses, and that accordingly where an ode is apparently written in distichs or monostichs, these were designed to be grouped together to form tetrastichs. This theory rests on a much narrower basis of induction than appears at first sight ; for of Horace's 104 odes only 18 are written in distichs, and in monostichs only 7. Horace may have desired to make these few odes conform to the rule imposed on the great majority by their metrical structure, but that is a different thing from saying that the unit of versification was the tetrastich. In a number of the odes the distichs are of the same character, — in two odes identical (see 162), — with those used in the Epodes, where they cannot be grouped in twos. It is true that the text of C. IV. 8 is probably corrupt, but it is by no means clear that a reduction to 32 or to 28 verses is the way to heal it. It is true, further, that in C. III. 9, which is a dialogue, two distichs at a time are assigned to each speaker, — one would be rather short for the purpose ; but in C. I. 1, on the other hand, a division into tetrastichs is curiously at cross purposes with the course of thought, while the significant manner in which the first two and the last two verses are set off by their content from the rest of the poem points to a probable grouping of such monostichs in twos, if they have any strophic character at all. In the remaining monostichic odes (I. 11, 18, III. 30, IV. 10) — leaving out of account III. 12 which has only four verses — the connection of thought gives no suggestion of an arrangement by strophes.

The lyric metres used by Horace are as follows :

158. The Iambic Trimeter (see 135). Epode 17.

159. The Iambic Strophe: an iambic trimeter (135) coupled with an iambic dimeter (137):—

For substitutions see 135, 137. Epodes 1-10.

160. The First Pythiambic Strophe: a dactylic hexameter (132) coupled with an iambic dimeter (137):—

161. The Second Pythiambic Strophe: a dactylic hexameter (132) coupled with a pure iambic trimeter (136):—

162. The Alcmanian Strophe: a dactylic hexameter (132) coupled with a dactylic tetrameter (133):—

C. I. 7, 28; Epod. 12.

163. The First Archilochian Strophe: a dactylic hexameter (132) coupled with a lesser Archilochian verse (134):—

164. The Second Archilochian Strophe: a dactylic hexameter (132) coupled with an iambelegus (144):—

165. The Third Archilochian Strophe: an iambic trimeter (135) coupled with an elegiambus (143):—

Epod. 11. (For vs. 23, see, 135, 181.)

166. The Fourth Archilochian Strophe: a greater Archilochian verse (142) coupled with an iambic trimeter catalectic (138):—

167. The Trochaic Strophe: a Euripidean verse (140) coupled with an iambic trimeter catalectic (138):—

C. II. 18. (For vs. 34, see 138).

168. The Ionic System, consisting of pure Ionici a minore (— — — —) in series of ten. There is usually diaeresis at the end of each foot.

C. III. 12.

169. The Lesser Asclepiad Metre: a series of lesser Asclepiad verses (149; see also 157):—

C. I. 1; III. 30; IV. 8.

170. The Greater Asclepiad Metre: a series of greater Asclepiad verses (150; see also 157):—

171. The First Asclepiad Strophe: a Glyconic (147) coupled with a lesser Asclepiad (149):—

C. I. 3, 13, 19, 36; III. 9, 15, 19, 24, 25, 28; IV. 1, 3.
Elision at the end of the Glyconic occurs C. IV. 1. 35.

172. The Second Asclepiad Strophe: three lesser Asclepiads (149) and a Glyconic (147):—

⌋ > | ⌋ ∪ | ⌋ ∥ ⌋ ∪ | ⌋ ∪ | ⌋ ∧

C. I. 6, 15, 24, 33; II. 12; III. 10, 16; IV. 5, 12.

173. The Third Asclepiad Strophe: two lesser Asclepiads (149), a Pherecratic (148), and a Glyconic (147):—

⌋ > | ⌋ ∪ | ⌋ ∥ ⌋ ∪ | ⌋ ∪ | ⌋ ∧

⌋ > | ⌋ ∪ | ⌋ ∪ | ⌋ ∧

C. I. 5, 14, 21, 23; III. 7, 13; IV. 13.

174 (a). The Sapphic Strophe: three lesser Sapphic verses (151) and an Adonic (153):—

Next to the Alcaic (176) the metre most used by Horace : C. I. 2, 10, 12, 20, 22, 25, 30, 32, 38 ; II. 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 16 ; III. 8, 11, 14, 18, 20, 22, 27 ; IV. 2, 6, 11 ; C. S.

(b). For the 'feminine' caesura, see 151. Sappho appears to have treated the third Sapphic and the Adonic as one continuous verse. Horace does not follow this practice absolutely, but he has hiatus between the two verses in only four cases (C. I. 2. 47 ; 12. 7, 31 ; 22. 15) in a total of 206 strophes ; and in all but 12 instances a spondee (by synaepheia) precedes the dactyl of the Adonic. He makes the two verses continuous in C. I. 2. 19, 25. 11, II. 16. 7 ; and he allows elision at the end of the third verse in IV. 2. 23 and C. S. 47. Elision at the end of the second verse occurs in II. 2. 18, 16. 34, IV. 2. 22.

175. The Greater Sapphic Strophe : an Aristophanic verse (154) coupled with a greater Sapphic (152) :—

 ∪ ∪ | ∪ > | ∪ || ∪ ∪ | ∪ || — ∪ ∪ | ∪ ∪ | ∪ ∪

C. I. 8.

176 (a). The Alcaic Strophe : two greater Alcaic verses (155), a nine-syllable Alcaic (139), and a lesser Alcaic (156) :—

∪ : ∪ ∪ | ∪ > || — ∪ ∪ | ∪ ∪ | ∪ ∧
 ∪ : ∪ ∪ | ∪ > || — ∪ ∪ | ∪ ∪ | ∪ ∧

The metre most frequently used by Horace : C. I. 9, 16, 17, 26, 27, 29, 31, 34, 35, 37 ; II. 1, 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, 13, 14, 15, 17, 19, 20 ; III. 1–6, 17, 21, 23, 26, 29 ; IV. 4, 9, 14, 15.

(b). Elision at the end of the third verse occurs II. 3. 27 ; III. 29. 35.

(B) PROSODY.

177. A final syllable ending in a short vowel is not lengthened in Horace before a word beginning with two consonants.

178. The prosody of certain proper names is unsettled : C. III. 30. 13 Italos, but II. 7. 4 Ītalo; I. 28. 20 Prōserpina, II. 13. 21 Prōserpinæ; I. 28. 21 Ōrionis, Epod. 15. 7 Ōrion; C. S. 1 Dīana, ib. 70 Dīana. Cf. also Epod. 2. 42 Apŭli, 3. 16 Apŭliae.

Horace has -ērunt in the third person plural of the perfect indicative active, Epod. 9. 17 vertērunt. It occurs also S. I. 10. 45 adnuērunt and Ep. I. 4. 7 dedērunt (cf. C. III. 6. 7 dedērunt); but nowhere in the Odes.

179. The final syllable of the third person singular, present or perfect, indicative is long in a few instances under the ictus, as in old Latin (see Allen's Remnants of Early Latin, Introd. 52 ff.) :

C. I. 3. 36	pérripŭt Acherónta Hérculeús labór
C. I. 13. 6	cérta séde manēt úmor et ín genás

Once in arsis, before the caesura :

C. III. 5. 17	si nón perírēt immiserabilis
----------------------	---------------------------------

Horace practiced this license in the Satires also, but in his latest writings, the Epistles and the fourth book of the Odes, he abstained from it altogether.

180. SYNIZESIS : C. II. 7. 5 Pompēi; apparently also, Epod. 2. 35 laqueō (see 135); and perhaps C. II. 18. 34 pŭeris (see 138). Under this head also are usually classed C. I. 35. 17 anteit and 37. 5 antehac; but the e of ante was probably elided, and the words pronounced ant'it, ant'ha.

181. SYNAERESIS: C. III. 4. 41 consiliūm; III. 6. 6 principiūm (in both cases the consonantal i lengthens the preceding syllable, and its own syllable is elided at the caesura); Epod. 12. 7 viētis; perhaps also Epod. 5. 79 inferiūs, and 11. 23 mulierculam (see 135).

182. DIALYSIS: C. I. 23. 4, Epod. 13. 2 siluae.

183. SYNCOPE: C. I. 36. 8 puertiae; II. 2. 2 lamnae; III. 20. 1 periclo; IV. 13. 20 surpuerat; Epod. 9. 1 repostum; 9. 9, 17. 72 vincla; perhaps also Epod. 2. 35 pav(i)dum, 65 pos(i)tum (see 135). Syncopated verb forms like natarunt, complesti, intrarit, promorat are of frequent occurrence.

184. ELISION. In his earliest Epodes Horace appears to have studiously avoided elision. In Epode 16 the hexameters are altogether free from it, and it occurs but three times in the iambics. There is no case in Epode 13, and only one in Epode 12. Later he was less strict, but confined it chiefly to short final syllables, and avoided harsh combinations. Monosyllables are never elided, except the pronouns me and te, and (once) the adverb iam (Epod. 17. 1).

185. HIATUS occurs after the interjections a and o, which, for obvious reasons, are never elided, and in the following undisputed cases: Epod. 5. 100 Esquilinae alites; 13. 3 Threicio Aquilone: C. I. 28. 24 capiti inhumato. The following are doubtful: C. II. 20. 13 Daedalco || ocior; III. 14. 11 male ominatis (see notes). For hiatus between the cola of 'asynartete' verses, see 141.

LIBER PRIMVS

I.

✓ Maecenas atavis edite regibus,
ó et praesidium et dulce decus meum : 4

I. This is Horace's prologue, as III. 30 is his epilogue, to the first edition of his Odes (Intr. 27); and the two poems thus set apart from the rest are written in a metre reserved for them alone. In addressing the prologue to Maecenas the poet dedicates the volume to him. After a brief tribute to his patron he puts forward a modest assertion of the claim of literature, and of lyric poetry in particular, to a place among the varied objects of human pursuit and ambition, which, after all, he implies, have no defense, as against one another, but the overmastering force of individual bent and taste; and he closes with an expression of his own aspiration to win for himself a place among the poets of the lyre.—Metre, 169 (page lxxxiii).

I. Maecenas: Intr. 21 ff. — atavis: here used, like avus, in a general sense, but indicating remoter ancestors, — forefathers. — regibus: in apposition with atavis; Intr. 126 c. The compliment is not an extravagant one, as rex suggested to a Roman a much less exalted monarch than 'king' does to us. For similar allusions to Maecenas' ancestry, cf. III. 29. 1, S. I. 6. 1 sqq., Prop. IV. 8. 1 Maecenas eques Etrusco de sanguine regum.

2. o et: for the hiatus, see Intr. 185.—praesidium, decus: cf. II. 17. 4 meorum grande decus columenque rerum. In each of these places the poet acknowledges both sides of his obligation to his patron, for substantial support and protection, and for the distinction which the friendship of so eminent a man confers. Horace elsewhere (S. II. 6. 32) confesses how sweet this distinction was to him; but dulce here, with double application, expresses also his affection for Maecenas; cf. dulcis amice, Ep. I. 7. 12

3-6. The ruling passion of the Greek is athletic contests, and a victory at the national games is the summit of his aspirations. For Horace's method in this and the following descriptions, see Intr. 117.

3. sunt quos . . . iuvat, some men delight. For the mood, see Intr. 84. — curriculo (from curriculus), with the chariot. — Olympicum: i.e. at Olympia, in the great national games held there every four years.

4. collegisse, to whirl; lit., 'to gather' (in a cloud); cf. pulvis collectus turbine, S. I. 4. 31. For the tense, see Intr. 81. The meaning is, to be in the chariot race in full career. To make the picture more telling, the two most critical points of the race, the turning-post and the finish, are included (vss. 4, 5). — meta evitata (sc. iuvat), to clear the goal: Intr. 105. The Greek hippodromos, like the Roman circus, was divided longitudinally by a low wall, round which the racing chariots were driven several times. At each end of this wall was a column or turning-post (meta). To turn this as closely as possible, without striking either it or other chariots, called for the utmost skill and, being attended with considerable danger, was the most exhilarating part of the race.

5. palmaque: for quosque palma; cf. C. S. 26. The victor at Olympia was crowned with olive, and a palm branch was placed in his hand (Paus. VIII. 48. 2). The latter practice was borrowed by the Romans (Liv. X. 47. 3), and hence the palm became to them the especial symbol of victory.

6. dominos: in apposition with deos. — evehit ad deos, exalts them to gods; expressing the pride and exultation of victory; cf. IV. 2. 17; Cic. Flacc. 31 hoc (to win at Olympia) est apud Graecos prope maius et gloriosius quam Romae triumphasse.

7-10. The highest objects of Roman endeavor, political preferment and wealth. Cf. Ep. I. 1. 42 quae maxima credis esse mala, exiguum censum turpemque repulsam.

7. hunc: sc. iuvat, the force of which, from vs. 4, is still felt, evehit ad deos 6 being only a more specific expression of the same idea. — mobiliū: in disparagement; Horace had no respect for office-seeking for the mere purpose of self-advancement. Cf. S. I. 6.

8. tergeminis honoribus: instrumental abl. The reference is to the three curule offices, the curule aedileship, praetorship, and consulship. — tollere: Intr. 94 h.

9. illum: see vs. 7 n. The great landowner is put forward as a type of successful but unsatisfied craving for wealth. — proprio: i.e. not acting merely as agent for another or for the government. — horreo : Intr. 69.

10. quicquid, all the grain that, suggesting unbounded desire ; cf. III. 16. 26. — Libycis : before the conquest of Egypt Africa was the largest source of the city's grain supply, and expressions like this appear to have become proverbial ; cf. S. II. 3. 87. — verritur areis : the area was a circular space, enclosed with a low wall and paved with concrete, on which the heads of grain, usually without the straw, were trampled out by cattle (tritura). A common way of winnowing was by tossing in the wind with a shovel (ventilatio) till the chaff was blown away. The grain was then swept together and removed.

11. gaudentem, etc. : from national characteristics the poet proceeds to individual tastes, which he presents in a series of contrasted sketches ; and first the rustic who finds his happiness in keeping up the old farm. — patrios : indicating his lack of enterprise ; he has added nothing to the fields his fathers tilled before him. Cf. 12. 43, and the picture of contentment in Epod. 2. 3 ; for the opposite spirit, II. 18. 23, S. II. 6. 8, Juv. 14. 140 sqq. — findere : Intr. 94 d. — sarculo : suggesting the small scale on which he farms ; he works with his own hands. The sarculum was a hoe used for loosening the soil between the rows of growing grain (sarritio).

12. Attalicis condicionibus, terms that an Attalus might offer. The Attali, kings of Pergamon, in Asia Minor, were famous for their patronage of literature and for the munificence with which they adorned their capital with works of art. The Romans received a vivid and lasting impression of their splendor when the treasures of Attalus III., the last of the line, who died B.C. 133, bequeathing his kingdom to the Roman people, were brought to Rome.

13. demoveas ut, tempt away to. — Cypria : Cyprus produced within its own borders all kinds of material required for shipbuilding (Am. Marc. XIV. 8. 14). For the epithets Cypria, Myrtoum, etc., see Intr. 117, and cf. 35. 7 sq.

15. luctantem, etc. : in contrast with the farmer, the restless trader cannot endure the dullness of country life, though in the storm he may sigh for peace and long for the quiet rural scenes of his childhood. — fluctibus : dative ; Intr. 57. — Africum, the Sou'wester (blowing from Africa).

16. mercator : not 'merchant' in our sense, but trader, who sails with his wares in his own ship. — metuens : with an accusative, because the fear is temporary ; with the genitive it would express a permanent trait, as S. II. 2. 110.—otium, peace and quiet; cf. II. 16. 1 sqq.—oppidi rura: every town had its ager, or adjacent country district under its jurisdiction (cf. ager Romanus, ager Tusculanus, etc.).

17. laudat: sc. as happy or conferring happiness (εὐδαιμονίζει), a sense in which Horace often uses the word; cf. S. I. 1. 9, Ep. I. 11. 6.—sui, his native.—mox: the asyndeton suggests the promptness with which his natural disposition asserts itself when the danger is past.

18. pauperiem: i.e. moderate circumstances, such as those of the farmer, not actual want (inopia, egestas). Horace calls his father, who was a man of some means, macro pauper agello (S. I. 6. 71).—pati: Intr. 101 c.

19–22. Between the restless enterprise of the trader and the excitement of war and the chase, the poet sets a quiet picture of leisurely enjoyment.

19. est qui: the singular suggests that this character is met with only now and then.—Massici (sc. vini): a much esteemed wine produced on the slopes of Mt. Massicus, on the border between Latium and Campania. See Intr. 117.

20. solido die: i.e. one (that would otherwise be) devoted wholly to business or serious work (cf. Sen. Ep. 83. 3 hodiernus dies solidus est; nemo ex illo quicquam mihi eripuit). The Roman 'day,' in this sense, lasted from early dawn to about the middle of the afternoon, octavam circiter horam (Ep. I. 7. 47).—demere: see Intr. 94 i.

21. (nec) spernit: i.e. does not deem it beneath his dignity, as, according to the old Roman notions, it was. For the mood, see Intr. 84.—membra: Intr. 41.—arbuto: a handsome flowering shrub or tree, common in Greece and Italy, with evergreen leaves something like those of our laurel, and fruit resembling the strawberry,—hence called the 'strawberry tree.' See Sibthorp's Flora Graeca, tab. 373.

22. ad aquae caput: i.e. by the side of some spring.—lene, sacrae: the epithets are interchanged: the stream is gentle, and the spring is sacred (as the haunt of a naiad). Cf. Intr. 124.

23. lituo: for litui sonitu, an economy of phrase common in prose and verse. The lituus was a long, straight brass trumpet, curved slightly at the larger end; it was used by the cavalry.—tubae: the trumpet of the infantry, straight throughout.

24. matribus: Intr. 54.

- 25 detestata. Manet sub Iove frigido

25. manet, spends the night, as in S. I. 5. 37; cf. S. II. 3. 234. — Iove, the open sky. The poets use the name of Iuppiter, with certain cognate forms from the root DI, DIV (cf. sub divo, III. 2. 5, sub divum, I. 18. 13, sub diu, Lucr. IV. 211), for the sky or the air, in which the god of heaven manifests his presence and power in the various phases of sunshine and rain, heat and cold, storm and lightning. Cf. Ennius ap. Varr. L. L. V. 65 istic est is Iuppiter quem dico, quem Graeci vocant | derem, qui ventus est et nubes, imber postea, | dique ex imbre frigus, ventus post fit, aer denno.

26. tenerae coniugis: i.e. of her anxiety for his safety, the contrast, as in matribus detestata 24, bringing out in stronger relief the hardihood of the man.

27. seu . . . seu: in either case the game will be lost unless pursued at once.

28. Marsus: Intr. 117. — plagas: used to bar the openings in the thicket (cf. Epod. 2. 31 sq.). The boar has escaped into the open country.

29. me: the emphatic position (Intr. 116 b) marks the transition to his own taste and ambition. In contrast with such pursuits as those last described, Horace finds his own greatest happiness far away from the busy world, in the presence of nature, where his poetic fancy sees the light-footed denizens of the woods and hears strains of divine music. — doctarum: of men of letters. Doctus denotes accomplishment in any art (cf. docte Trebatii, S. II. 1. 78; docte Cati, S. II. 4. 88). In literature it is a connoisseur as well as a writer (e.g., S. I. 10. 87). Here its meaning is limited by hederæ, the ivy wreath which was the especial prerogative (præmia) of the poet, as being sacred to Bacchus, who was one of the patron gods of poets (cf. Ep. II. 2. 78, I. 19. 4). — præmia: here rather the emblem (cf. S. I. 5. 35, Verg. E. 7. 25) of the recognized poet than a prize of victory. For the plurals, see Intr. 128.

30. dis miscent superis: cf. vs. 6; but here the feeling expressed is ecstatic delight.

32. si neque, etc.: the favor of the muse is an essential condition. — tibus, pipes. The tibia (αυλός) was a straight, flute-like instrument, but with mouth-piece at the end, like the clarinet; in some varieties the outer end was curved and flaring. The plural is used because two were commonly played together. (See Howard, Harv. Studies IV. p. 1.) The tibia as well as the lyre was associated with lyric

33. Euterpe, Polyhymnia: see note on Clio, 12. 2.

34. Lesboum tendere barbiton : i.e. to inspire him as she had inspired Alcaeus and Sappho ; see Intr. 26. — tendere, to tune ; lit., to stretch or tighten (the chords).
For the mood see Intr. 94 k.

35. quod si, and if. The ode closes as it began, with two verses of personal address to Maecenas.
These two couplets are rather sharply divided from the rest of the poem, giving the impression that the intervening verses may have been originally written without reference to their present purpose, though they are admirably adapted to it. — lyricis vatibus :
i.e. those of Greece, of whom there were nine recognized by the critics as classic. Horace's hope is that his achievement in Latin lyric may be regarded by his patron as making him worthy to be added to this noble company. — inseriris :
cf. II. 5. 21. For the tense, see Intr. 78 ; for its use with a future in the apodosis, cf. III. 24. 5.

36. sublimi : proleptic. — feriam sidera : expressing pride of achievement, like vs. 6. The extravagant phrase is legitimate enough, involving, as it does, a compliment to Maecenas' literary judgment, and there is a touch of humor in it.

II. The first place in the volume after the dedication is very properly given to an ode in honor of the emperor. It is the poet's declaration of allegiance to the second Caesar. There are no certain indications of its date ; the two great inundations of the Tiber in B.C. 27 and 22 (Dio Cassius LIII.
20. 1 ; LIV. 1. 1) were too late to be treated by Horace as visitations of divine wrath for the killing of Julius Caesar (B.C. 44). But as an appeal to rescue the country from ruin (vs. 25), the ode could not have been composed after the settlement of January 27, when Octavian as first citizen (princeps) received, with the new title Augustus, a renewal of the imperium for ten years, and his friends, at least, regarded the fortunes of the state as established on a firm basis. It was probably written in the period of uncertainty which preceded this settlement, i.e. between the return and triumph of Octavian in August, 29, and the end of 28. The portents which form the subject of the opening strophes need not be supposed to have all occurred at one time ;
they may have extended through a number of years. Beginning with an impressive account of these signs of the wrath of heaven at the Romans for shedding the blood of their countrymen, the

'dextera sacras iaculatus arcis saeculum Pyrrhae nova monstra questae, omne cum Proteus pecus egit altos visere montis,

piscium et summa genus haesit ulmo, 10 nota quae sedes fuerat columbis, poet points out the need of a divine mediator, and then leads on skilfully to the suggestion that the messenger of heaven is already among them, fulfilling his appointed task. — Metre, 174.

1. satis, etc.: for the repetition of the is sound, see Intr. 131. It suggests to the ear the fierce persistency of the storm. — terris: dative; Intr. 53. — dirae, portentous, applying to nivis as well as to grandinis; Intr. 119 a. A heavy fall of snow or a severe hail-storm was rare enough at Rome to be accounted a monstrum, or sign of divine displeasure.

2. pater, the Father (of gods and men; cf. 12. 13 sqq.), Jupiter; here as the god who wields the elements; cf. 1. 25 n. — rubente: from the glow of the red-hot thunderbolt.

3. iaculatus: here with an accusative of the thing aimed at; cf. cervos iaculari, III. 12. 4. — arcis: the twin summits of the Capitoline hill, on one of which was the Capitolium, the great temple of Jupiter, Juno, and Minerva (hence sacras), while the other was the Arx proper.

5. terruit: Intr. 116 g. — gentis (sc. humanas), all mankind; cf. 3. 28, II. 13. 20. — ne: after the idea of fear implied in terruit. For its position and that of cum, et, and quae, below, see Intr. 114.

6. saeculum Pyrrhae: i.e. the Deluge (Ovid, M. I. 260 sqq.). Pyrrha, daughter of Epimetheus and Pandora, was the wife of Deucalion, the Noah of Greek mythology. Many people believed that the earth would one day be overwhelmed in a second flood (cf. Sen. N. Q. III. 27. 1 cum fatalis dies diluvii venerit); and the dreadful prodigy of Jove hurling his bolts at his own greatest temple was to the superstitious a warning that the time was at hand. — nova, strange. — monstra, marvels; lit., 'signs' (cf. monéo); see note on dirae 1.

7. omne cum, etc.: it is a favorite device of Horace to break the continuity of an enumeration of persons or events by dwelling on some subject in the series and letting the reader's mind rest for a moment on a picture. Better examples than this are 12. 27 sqq., III. 4 60 sqq. — Proteus: the keeper of Neptune's sea-calves (seals), endowed with the gift of prophecy and the power of assuming various forms (hence our word 'protean'); cf. Odys. IV. 455 sqq. Verg. G. IV. 405 sqq. — egit, drove.

8. visere: see Intr. 93.

9. piscium genus, the finny tribe. — ulmo: Intr. 71.

templaque Vestae,

Iliae dum se nimium querenti
iactat ultorem, vagus et sinistra

11. superiecto, the overwhelming.

13. vidimus: the poet returns from his digression to the prodigies which his own generation has witnessed. — flavum: a standing epithet of the Tiber, owing to its permanent muddy color; cf. 8. 8, II. 3. 18; Verg. A. VII. 31 (Tiberinus) multa flavus arena. — retortis: sc. from the opposite shore, here called litus Etruscum. This term usually designates the seacoast from the Tiber northward, and many take it in that sense here, relying on the ancient theory that the inundations of the Tiber were caused by strong southwinds blocking the discharge of its waters into the sea (cf. Dio XXXIX. 61). But Horace is not here accounting for the river's conduct, — he does that in the next strophe; his words are descriptive, and they would imply, if litore Etrusco meant the seashore, a visible reversal of the stream, which was no part of the ancient theory, and which elsewhere (29. 12) he uses as a type of the impossible. In reality the Tiber, in time of flood, flows with a strong current down its winding channel through the city, and when its tumultuous waters poured over the left bank into the low ground between the Palatine and Capitoline hills, they may well have had the appearance of being 'hurled away' from the curving shore opposite. Litus is used of the shore of the Tiber by Verg. A. VIII. 83. Conversely ripa is sometimes used of the seashore, as II. 18. 22, III. 27. 24.

15. deiectum: supine. The river is here the river-god, coming in wrath to destroy; cf. sub Iove, I. 25 n. — monumenta regis: the Regia, or 'palace' of Numa, used under the Commonwealth as the official residence of the pontifex maximus. Monumentum ('memorial'; cf. monéo) is often used of a building.

16. templa Vestae: the round temple, near the Regia, in which the sacred fire was kept. These two buildings, with the Atrium Vestae or 'House of the Vestals,' formed an enclosed group adjoining the eastern end of the old Forum, at the foot of the Palatine. The flood is represented as threatening the most venerable monuments of the city and its holiest shrine. The visitation of divine wrath on a holy place was the punishment for its desecration (cf. 12. 59), — in this case by the murder of the pontifex maximus, Caesar. For the plurals monumenta, templa, see Intr. 128.

17. Iliae: mother of Romulus and Remus. According to the older tradition, which Horace follows, she was the daughter of Aeneas and therefore sister of Iulus, the mythical ancestor of the Julian family. After the birth of the twins she was thrown into the Tiber, but received by the river-god as his wife. He is here represented as enraged at the wrong done her family in the murder of Julius Caesar.—dum: introducing, as mere attendant circumstance, the cause or occasion of the main action; cf. 6. 9 and see Roby 1665.

18. sinistra: i.e. the eastern. The banks of a river are designated as 'right' or 'left' in reference to the personified river himself as he moves in his course.

19. ripa: here over the bank, in contrast with Epod. 2. 25. The ablative in both places is that of 'the way by which.'—non probante: i.e. he had not appointed the river to this office nor ordained such extreme retribution.—u-xorius: see Intr. 174. b.

21. audiet, etc.: after setting forth the signs of divine wrath the poet proceeds to the cause of it, —unnatural civil strife; and this he presents more effectively by carrying his reader forward to a time when it will be dispassionately judged by a generation which feels only its disastrous effects.—civis: the emphasis (Intr. 116 b) and the usual meaning of 'fellow-citizens' attaching to the word indicate that they are preparing for a struggle against one another, as if we should speak, e.g., of 'brothers drawing their daggers.'

22. Persae: i.e. the oriental peoples, called by Horace indifferently Medi, Persae, and Parthi, at this time under the sway of the Parthian kings, but formerly subject to the Medes and Persians successively, whose names were thus permanently impressed upon them.—perirent: imperfect subjunctive of softened assertion in past time, with apodosis implied in melius; cf. falleret, IV. 6. 16 n; Gr. 311 a.

23. pugnās: i.e. not only of preparations for war (acuisse ferrum) but of actual conflict.

24. rara, thinned.—iuventus: i.e. a younger generation.

25. divum: implying that no mere human help would avail.—ruentis: the figure is taken from a building; cf. II. 1. 32 Hesperiae sonitum ruinae.

26. rebus: dative, because vocet, with divum, expresses a call for favor or help.—prece qua, with what (new) prayer, in contrast with the ordinary ritual (carmina).—prece: the singular is rare, and is used by Horace only in the ablative.—qua: Intr. 114.

virgines sanctae minus audientem

- Cui dabit partis scelus expiandi 30 Iuppiter? Tandem venias precamur, nube candentis umeros amictus, augur Apollo;
 sive tu mavis, Erycina ridens, quam Iocus circum volat et Cupido; 35 sive neglectum genus et nepotes
 respicis, auctor,

27. virgines sanctae: the Vestals. — minus: here merely a softened negative (like parum) with no definite comparative force; cf. Plaut. Cas. 998 monebo, si quidem meministi minus. According to Ovid (F. III. 699 sqq.) Vesta was offended by the wrong done her in the murder of her priest, Caesar.

28. carmina, their litanies. These were old formulas (the proper meaning of carmen) cast in rythmical form in order to be better held in memory at a time when the art of writing was not in common use.

29. partis, office; properly 'rôle.' — scelus expiandi, of purging away our sin, sc. by casting out the spirit of strife and leading the people to worthy achievements. For scelus, cf. 35. 33. For answer to his question the poet appeals in succession to three divinities who might be supposed to have a special interest in the welfare of Rome: Apollo, who had recently rendered such signal assistance in the critical struggle at Actium (cf. Verg. A. VIII. 704, Prop. V. 6. 27.) and was adopted by the emperor as his patron god; Venus, as mother of Aeneas, the divine ancestress of the race (Aeneadum genetrix, Lucr. I. 1) and of the Julian family in particular; and Mars, the father of Romulus, and hence auctor generis (36).

30. tandem: implying that our prayers have long been in vain. — venias: Intr. 87.

31. umeros: Intr. 42.

32. augur: as the god of prophecy; cf. Verg. A. IV. 376.

33. sive tu mavis = vel tu (venias) si mavis; Intr. 119 d. — Erycina, Lady of Eryx, i.e. Venus. The epithet is appropriate here, as her temple at Eryx, in Sicily, was ascribed to Aeneas (Verg. A. V. 759). There was also a temple of Venus Erycina at Rome near the Colline gate. — ridens: after the Homeric φιλομυειδής; with Iocus (Mirth) and Cupido it makes up a picture in bright contrast to the grim scene next presented.

34. circum: see Intr. 115 c.

35. sive respicis: see 33 n. — neglectum: cf. tandem, 30 n. — genus et nepotes: expressing the same idea in two aspects, — collectively and individually.

36. auctor: Mars is appealed to, not as the god of war, as the

- heu nimis longo satiate ludo, quem iuvat clamor galeaeque leves acer et Marsi peditis cruentum 40 vultus in hostem ;
 sive mutata iuvenem figura ales in terris imitaris almae filius Maiae, patiens vocari Caesaris ultor,
 45 serus in caelum redeas diuque laetus intersis populo Quirini, neve te nostris vitiis iniquum ocior aura

next strophe shows, but as the father of the race.

37. ludo: the nature of the sport is explained in the picture that follows, which, as a specimen of Horace's skill in graphic portrayal may be compared with II. I. 17 sqq. See also note on vs. 7.

38. leves: notice the quantity of the penult.

39. acer vultus, the fierce look—Marsi: see Intr. 117. The Marsian troops were among the bravest in the Roman army; cf. II. 20. 18, Verg. G. II. 167, and the proverb 'No triumph over the Marsi, nor without them' (Appian B. C. I. 46). If the reading Mauri be adopted, peditis will mean 'unhorsed.'—cruentum: the epithet places the scene in the midst of a hot fight at close quarters.

41. sive: see 33 n; the apodosis begins with serus 45 and extends to the close of the ode.—mutata: sc. from that of a god; cf. ales.—iuvenem: here the poet gives the first intimation of the thought to which he has been gradually leading us. He indicates who the iuvenis is in vs. 44, but reserves the full revelation of his personality to the very end of the poem. Octavian was at this time about thirty-five years old.

42. ales filius: in agreement with the subject of imitaris.—in terris imitaris, dwellest on earth under the form of.

43. Maiae: daughter of the titan Atlas, and mother of Mercury.—vocari: Intr. 94 a.

44. Caesaris ultor: the punishment of his uncle's assassins was avowed by Octavian as one of the chief objects of his career.

47. iniquum, estranged. Aequus and iniquus are regular expressions for the favorable or adverse disposition of a divinity towards men; cf. 28. 28, II. 4. 15.

48. ocior aura: keeping in mind the character of the god as ales (42). Observe how, while the language of the last two strophes applies equally well to the god and the man, the human side is gradually brought out more distinctly till fully revealed in the name itself at the end.

 III.

Sic te diva potens Cypri, sic fratres Helenae, lucida sidera,

49. triumphos: in allusion probably to the three triumphs which Octavian celebrated on his return from the East in August, B.C. 29.

50. ames: see Intr. 94 c and 119 a. For the combination of an object accusative with a complementary infinitive, cf. I. 19 sqq. — pater: here a general expression of reverence, habitually applied to a god (as Bacche pater, 18. 6, Iane pater, Ep. I. 16. 59), and often to a man, as in the phrases pater patriae, pater senatus, pater urbis, etc., and also absolutely (cf. S. II. 1. 12, Ep. I. 6. 54, 7. 37). The formal title of pater patriae was not conferred upon Augustus till many years later, B.C. 2. — princeps: apparently abbreviated originally from princeps senatus (the title given to the senator of highest dignity, who was placed first on the roll by the censors), and used even under the Republic in the sense of princeps civitatis, since the 'first senator' would usually be in fact 'first citizen.' Octavian became princeps senatus in B.C. 28, and from that time on he cherished the title in its shorter form and wider signification as best expressing the character in which he wished to appear to his fellow-citizens. It thus came to be the usual term to designate the civil power of the ruler, imperator expressing his military power; cf. Tac. Ann. I. 1. 3 cuncta discordiis civilibus fessa nomine principis sub imperium accepit.

51. Medos: see 22 n. — equitare, to ride on their raids.

52. te duce, so long as thou art, etc. — Caesar: the name by which Octavian (as we call him, to avoid ambiguity) was known to his contemporaries from the time of his adoption by Julius Caesar (in his will, B.C. 44), his full name being C. Julius Caesar Octavianus. In B.C. 27 the title Augustus was added, but he was still usually called simply Caesar, as in III. 14.3, Ep. II. 1. 4 etc.; and this name is used by Horace for Julius Caesar in only two places, vs. 44, above, and S. I. 9. 18.

III. The third place in the series of odes is given to Vergil, and bears witness to Horace's warm regard for the friend to whom he owed his introduction to Maecenas (S. I. 5. 40 sqq., I. 6. 55; Intr. 20). The occasion is a proposed visit of Vergil to Athens, and in wishing him a safe voyage Horace indulges in some rather extravagant reflections on the temerity of man in braving the dangers of the sea, which is only an instance of the daring ventorumque regat pater, obstrictis aliis praeter Iapyga, 5 navis, quae tibi creditum

debes Vergilium, finibus Atticis spirit with which in all things he overleaps the bounds that Providence has established. The poem bears the marks of an early effort and, like many of the odes of this book, was probably worked out on a Greek model. Of the voyage referred to nothing further is known. It could not have been the voyage of B.C. 19, on the return from which Vergil died, as there is convincing evidence that these books were published before that time. — Metre, 171.

1. sic, so; i.e. on condition that (you grant my prayer); cf. Ep. I. 7. 69 sic ignovisse putato me tibi, si cenas hodie mecum. The prayer begins in vs. 6, and the words sic . . . Iapyga are parenthetical, introducing the prayer by an expression of good will to the ship, which is here the power appealed to; cf. S. II. 3. 300; Verg. E. 9. 30 sic tua Cyrneas fugiant examina taxos, | sic cytiso pastae distendant ubera vaccae, | incipe; Prop. V. 3. 67. The clause with sic sometimes follows the prayer, as I. 28. 23 sqq. In the present instance the appeal is not quite logical, since the fortunes of the ship and the voyager are bound up together. — diva potens Cypri: i.e. Venus, Ἀφροδίτη πειλαγία or πορτία (Venus marina; cf. III. 26. 5 and 9; IV. 11. 15), whose worship, as a protectress of seafaring men, was widely disseminated by the Phoenician traders. — Cypri: objective gen. after potens (Intr. 66 b), expressing here the worshippers over whom the goddess' control is exercised. The phrase is sometimes used to denote the special province of the divinity, as 5. 15 potenti maris deo (i.e. Neptune); 6. 10 imbellis lyrae musa potens; C. S. 1 silvarum potens Diana.

2. fratres Helenae: Castor and Pollux, whose constellation (Gemini) was believed to have a quieting influence on the sea; cf. 12. 27 sqq., IV. 8. 31 sq. Sailors also told of twin lights, which they attributed to these gods, appearing on the yards of their ships in the darkness of the storm, heralds of good weather (Plin. N. H. II. 101).

3. ventorum pater: Aeolus. — regat, guide.

4. obstrictis aliis: cf. Verg. A. I. 52 sqq. — Iapyga: so named by the Greeks as blowing from the southeastern extremity of Italy, which they called Iapygia, across the Ionian sea; hence favorable in the present instance. It is the same as the Latin Favonius.

5. creditum debes: a figure borrowed from commercial life: the ship has received Vergil as a depositum, and accordingly is bound to give him up (reddas) in unimpaired condition, at the time and place stipulated. Vergilium, standing in the accusative with reddas, in the place where the amount of the depositum is usually put, and before the caesura of the verse (Intr. 116 b) expresses emphatically the greatness of the ship's responsibility.

6. finibus: best taken as dative, but with reddas only, and not ἀπὸ κοινοῦ, see last note.

- reddas incolumem precor

 nec tristis Hyadas nec rabiem Noti, 15 quo non arbiter Hadriae

 Quem mortis timuit gradum, qui siccis oculis monstra natantia,

7. reddas, deliver him. The prefix red- denotes the reversal of the operation of giving, so far as it affects the recipient, — the giving up of what was received, not necessarily restoring it to the first giver; so here and Ep. I. 13. 2 Augusto reddes volumina; cf. also the regular expression for delivering a letter, epistulam reddere. From this it is a short step to the meaning 'to pay' sc. what is due (debitum = 'withheld').

8. animae dimidium: cf. II. 17. 5. The conception is borrowed from an old Greek definition of friendship, μία ψυχῇ δύο σώματα ἐνοικοῦσα (Diog. Laert. V. 1. 20); cf. Cic. Lael. 92 cum amicitiae vis sit in eo ut unus quasi animus fiat ex pluribus.

9. illi, etc., his heart was cased in, etc., i.e. was impenetrable to all impressions of fear. The figure is taken from the heavy armor of the soldier, but it is only a figure, and pectus is the heart; cf. IV. 4. 34.

10. erat: Intr. 77. — fragilem truci: Intr. 116 a.

12. primus: Intr. 116 b. — praecipitem: as coming in sudden squalls (creber procellis, Verg. A. I. 85; protervus, Epod. 16. 22). — Africum: see I. 15 n.

13. Aquilonibus, with the blasts of Boreas; see Intr. 57. Aquilo blew from between north and north-east, and his name was derived bysome from the resemblance of his violent onset to the swoop of an eagle (Fest. ap. Paul. p. 22).

14. tristis: as bringing wet and gloomy weather; cf. tristis Orion, Epod. 10. 10; pluvias Hyadas, Verg. A. III. 516. — Noti: the Greek name corresponding to Auster, the South Wind.

15. quo non arbiter maior (sc. est), than whom no mightier master sways; cf. III. 3. 4.

16. seu: see Intr. 119 c. — ponere, to allay; cf. 40 n.

17. quem (= qualem; cf. Ep. I. 15. 1 sq.) mortis gradum, what form of death's approach. For this conception of death cf. vs. 33 and III. 2. 14; Tib. I. 10. 4.

18. siccis oculis: i.e. without being moved to tears. The argument is a fortiori: the man who

- qui vidit mare turbidum et 20 infamis scopulos Acroceraunia?
 Nequiquam deus abscidit prudens Oceano dissociabili terras, si tamen impiae non tangenda rates transiliunt vada.
 25 Audax omnia perpeti
 gens humana ruit per vetitum nefas.

could contemplate these things without profound emotion would of course not be daunted by mere physical danger. The thought in this strophe is not, as in the preceding, of the storm with its perils, which might attract a man of adventurous spirit, but of the awful grandeur of the sea itself, the tremendous force of its waves, and the portentous shapes that people its waters. The man who gazes with indifference on these manifestations of a power immeasurably above all human strength is lacking, not in fear, but in reverence (pietas), and will brave the displeasure of Heaven in other ways. This thought is developed in the remainder of the ode.

20. infamis: from the frequency of shipwrecks there.—scopulos: Intr. 126 c.—Acroceraunia: a long narrow promontory forming the northwestern extremity of Epirus and enclosing the gulf of Oricum. It had to be passed on the voyage to Athens.

21. deus prudens, divine providence. The divine power that rules the world is often expressed by the word deus without further definition (cf. 18. 3, 34. 13, III. 16. 43, 29. 30, Epod. 13. 7, Ep. I. 11. 22, 16. 78), giving evidence of the persistence of a dim conception of a supreme being through the multifarious development of Roman polytheism. See Preller-Jordan, Röm. Myth., I. 48. As a personality, however, this supreme ruler was no other than Jupiter; incomparably more powerful than all other beings in the universe (cf. 12. 13 sqq.) but not the one God.—abscidit, set apart . . . from; cf. Ov. M. I. 22 nam caelo terras et terris abscidit undas.

22. prudens: sc. for man's best good.—Oceano: Intr. 70.—dissociabili, incompatible; cf. Tac. Agr. 3 res olim dissociabiles, principatum ac libertatem. The separation of land and water was necessary to make human life possible.

23. impiae: Intr. 124.

24. non tangenda, which they ought not to touch.—transiliunt, course over; suggesting entire freedom from scruple or caution.

25. audax perpeti: Intr. 101 a.—omnia: 'everything' (without exception), hence anything; more forcible than quidlibet (cf. Ep. II. 3. 10 quidlibet audendi) or quidvis (III. 24. 43, Ep. I. 15. 17); cf. holus omne, Ep. I. 5. 2.

26. ruit: cf. transiliunt 24 n.—per vetitum nefas: i.e. not only through sin, but in the face of an express prohibition.

27. audax: the anaphora (Intr. 116 f) indicates that the cases now cited are instances of the impious audacity just described.—Iapeti genus: Prometheus.

28. ignem, etc.: in the separation of the four elements from chaos (cf. 21 n), fire, the subtlest of all, rose to the highest place, in the ethereal spaces (aetheria domo 29) above the air (Ov. M. I. 26 sq.) From there it was obtained for man surreptitiously and in defiance of the will of Zeus by Prometheus, who brought down a portion concealed in a reed (Hes. Op. 50.)—mala, wicked; cf. malos fures, S. I. 1. 77 and the legal form dolus malus.—gentibus: cf. gentis, 2. 5 n.

29. post ignem subductum: Intr. 105 a.

30. macies, etc.: according to the same myth (Hes. ll.) disease came among mankind with the first woman, Pandora, whom Zeus sent with her fatal box (or vase) in resentment for the theft of fire.—nova: cf. 2. 6 n.

31. incubuit, settled upon; cf. Verg. A. I. 89 ponto nox incubat atra; Lucr. VI. 1143 (mortifer aestus) incubuit populo.—cohors, troop; properly 'retinue.'

32. semotique, etc.: i.e. death formerly, though inevitable (necessitas), was far off and came with slow pace; cf. Tib. II. 3. 38 hinc cruor, hinc caedes, mors propiorque venit. prius modifies the whole description, more particularly semoti and tarda (Intr. 76).

34. Daedalus invaded still another element not designed for such use. For the story, see Verg. A. VI. 14, Ov. M. VIII. 183.—vacuum, unsubstantial.

35. non datis: i.e. designedly withheld (litotes).

36. Hercules invaded even the realms of death.—perrupit, broke into. For the prosody, see Intr. 179.—Herculeus labor: Intr. 126 b.

37. nil ardui est (to be pronounced arduist), no path is steep. Strictly, however, est is predicative ('there is').—mortalibus: dat. of reference.

38. stultitia: in attempting the impossible; scelus: in transgressing the bounds set by divine will

IV. L. Sestius, who is thought to have been a son of the P. Sestius defended by Cicero in a speech now extant, had been an enthusiastic partisan of Brutus, under whom he served as quaestor. Horace's acquaintance with him very likely dated from that time. On his return to Rome, Sestius was wealthy enough to be independent, but in spite of his undisguised fidelity to the memory of his former chief, he accepted the new order of things, and in B.C. 23 became consul (suffectus) on the retirement of Augustus from the consulship in July, — a fact that may have determined the place of this ode in the collection, which was probably published in that year.

The ode is a highly artistic production, with an elaborate metre and a carefully balanced strophic symmetry. The main motive, expressed in the two middle couplets (vss. 9-12) grows naturally out of the description of spring which precedes (vss. 1-8) and is again enforced by the thought presented in the concluding verses (13-20). 'The cramping fetters of winter are bursting under the warm breath of spring, and man and nature are full of fresh, glad life. The season invites to enjoyment; and life is too short and death too sure for us to count on many such opportunities.' The poem is similar in construction to I. 7; in sentiment, to IV. 7. — Metre, 166.

1. solvitur, is breaking up. The hard and fast condition of the ground produced by winter is attributed to the season itself, just as death is 'pale' (vs. 13 n) etc. For the literal application of the word, see vs. 10. — Favoni: the West Wind (Zéφυρος), which began to blow, according to the Italian Farmer's Almanac, about February 10, and was accounted a harbinger of spring (veris praenuntius, Zephyrus, Lucr. V. 737). The season for navigation opened about a month later. Notice the alliteration in this verse (Intr. 131).

2. trahunt: the technical term is deducere; here the direction in which the ships are drawn is indicated by siccās. — machinae: simply rope and tackle and rollers (phalangae); cf. Caes. B.C. II. 10. 7.

3. neque iam gaudet: marking the contrast between winter, which made the warm stable and the cosy fireside so attractive, and the spring, which has robbed them of their charm.

5. The awakening of the regenerative power of nature and the renewal of life and beauty in the spring of the year are typified in mythology by the renewed activity of Venus. Cf. the fine invocation to Venus in Lucr. I. 6, te, dea, te fugiunt venti, te nubila caeli | adventumque tuum, tibi suavis daedala tellus | summittit flores, tibi rident aequora ponti, | placatumque nitet diffuso lumine caelum; | nam simul ac species patefactast verna diei, etc.; and the picture in V. 737 sqq. — Cytherea : i.e. in Cythera; cf. Delius et Patareus Apollo, III. 4. 64 n. — choros ducit, etc.: cf. the picture in the Homeric hymn to Apollo 194, αὐτὰρ ἐνπλόκαμοι Χάριτες καὶ εὐφρονας Ὀφραι | Ἀρμονίῃ θ' Ἡβῇ τε Διὸς θυγάτηρ τ' Ἀφροδίτῃ | ὀρχεῦντ' ἀλλήλων ἐπὶ καρπῷ χεῖρας ἔχουσαι. — imminente luna : the scene is laid in the solitude of the night, when the gods love best to visit the earth (sub nocte silenti, cum superis terrena placent, Stat. Silv. I. i. 94).

6. iunctae : sc. with their arms, forming a row or ring (ἐπὶ καρπῷ χεῖρας ἔχουσαι). — decentes, comely.

7. alterno terram : the spondee imitate the measured tread of the dance. — dum gravis, etc.:

a contrasted picture with heavy strokes, to set off the lighter lines of the preceding picture. — gravis, ponderous. — Cyclopum officinas : popularly located under the 'Volcanic' islands north of Sicily; cf. Verg. A. VIII. 416. The Cyclopes were three sons of Uranus and Gaea, who forged the thunderbolts of Zeus (Hes. Theog. 139), a conception of them quite distinct from that of the Odyssey, where they are represented as living the rude life of shepherds.

8. ardens : as the god of fire, working assiduously at the forge. — visit : cf. the description in Verg. A. VIII. 423 sqq. The conception of the gods visiting from time to time their favorite haunts or the scenes of their activity is a familiar one in classical mythology; cf. 17. 1 sqq., III. 28. 14 sq., Verg. A. IV. 144. (According to many MSS. the verb here is urit, fires.)

9. nitidum : sc. with ointment. — impedire : poetical for cingere. Perfumes and garlands were regular concomitants of a feast; cf. II. 3. 13 n. — myrto : i.e. with a garland of its leaves; see II. 15. 6 n.

10. flore : the singular is used collectively; Intr. 127. — solutae : cf. solvitur, I n.

11. nunc et (too) etc.: another form of feasting; the victim will furnish forth the banquet.

12. seu poscat, etc.: economy of phrase for vel agnā, si (agnā immolari) poscat, vel haedo, si malit, or the like; cf. 2. 33 n. For the ablatives, which are instrumental, cf. Cic. Leg. II. 29 quibus hostiis immolandum cuique deo.

13. pallida: the paleness which accompanies death is ascribed as a physical characteristic to the personified figure of the destroyer; Intr. 125. — aequo, impartial; Intr. 124. — pulsat pede: for the practice cf. Plaut. Most. 453 pul-tando pedibus paene confregi hasce foris. For the repetition of the p-sound, see Intr. 131.

14. regum, princes. The word is constantly used for a man of wealth, and particularly for the patron of a person in humble circumstances; cf. Ep. I. 7. 37. — turris: i.e. lofty houses. — beate, favoured; usually referring to riches.

15. summa, span; properly the 'sum' of the days (or whatever portion of time we may take as a unit) allotted to us; cf. IV. 7. 17. — brevis, longam: the contrast is enhanced by rhythmical position; Intr. 116 c.

16. te premet, will close round you; cf. Verg. A. VI. 827 concordes animae dum nocte premuntur. — fabulae (in apposition with manes; Intr. 126 c), phantom; lit. talk, mere talk, empty names. Cf.

Epod. II. 8. per urbem fabula quanta fui; Pers. 5. 152 cinis et manes et fabula fies.

17. domus Plutonia: here the whole lower world. — exilis: in contrast with the comforts with which Sestius is now surrounded. — simul: without ac, as often.

18. regna vini: at a drinking bout (comissatio) it was usual to select by lot a magister convivii, who presided with arbitrary power over the festivities, regulating the strength of the wine, the amount drunk, etc., in accordance with certain stringent rules. For the manner of choosing this arbitrator bibendi, see II. 7. 25 n. For the plural regna, see Intr. 128. — talis: like dice, except that the faces were of different shapes, and there were only four faces (1, 3, 4, 6) on which the talus could stand.

19. Lycidan: the name, like all of Horace's Greek names, is fictitious, and stands for any handsome lad; Intr. 117 a. — mirabere, feast your eyes upon. Mirror expresses a fascinated gaze, as III. 25. 14, 29. 11; Ep. I. 6. 18 Tyrios mirare colores. — quo: Intr. 72. — calet, are enamoured.

20. mox: i.e. when he is a little older — tepebunt: denoting a milder degree of warmth than calet, — the first step from indifference to interest.

Quis multa gracilis te puer in rosa perfusus liquidis urget odoribus grato, Pyrrha, sub antro?

Cui flavam religas comam,
5 simplex munditiis? Heu quotiens fidem mutatosque deos flebit et aspera nigris aequora ventis emirabitur insolens,

V. To a coquette. The poet writes in the character of one who has himself been led on to shipwreck under her spell, and retains a lively recollection of her wiles.—Metre, 173.

1. multa rosa: Intr. 127. The singular here suggests quantity rather than number.—in: i.e. wearing them; cf. Ep. II. 3. 228 regali conspectus in auro nuper et ostro; Cic. Fin. II. 65 potantem in rosa. The roses were worn in a great garland round the head and shoulders.—gracilis puer, slip of a boy; in disparagement, as S. I. 5. 69 gracili sic tamque pusillo. There is nothing disparaging in puer itself; see 9. 16 n.

2. perfusus liquidis odoribus, bathed in perfume.—urget, courts.

3. Pyrrha: Πυρρά (cf. πύρ), maid with the auburn hair (flavam comam 4), much admired by the Romans; cf. II. 4. 14, III. 9. 19, IV. 4. 4; Verg. A. IV. 698 (of Dido).—sub: for in, but directing the thought more specifically to the shelter afforded by the grotto; cf. II. 1. 39, III. 29. 14 sub lare, Epod. 9. 3 sub alta domo.—antro: such grottos or bowers, natural or artificial, were common in Roman country places, serving the purpose of our summer-house. The youth and maid are making holiday together in the manner suggested in 1. 19 sqq. Hence the roses and perfume (see 4. 9 n).

4. cui, for whose eyes?—religas: i.e. in a knot at the back of the head, the simplest mode of wearing the hair; cf. II. 11. 23; Ov. M. VIII. 319 crinis erat simplex, nodum collectus in unum.

5. simplex munditiis, in unadorned neatness. The girl adopts a very effective simplicity of dress.—fidem: here broken faith, as the context shows. Fides is sufficiently elastic to take on this meaning; cf. 18. 16 arcani fides prodiga, III. 24. 59 periura fides.

6. mutatos deos: sc. in their disposition towards him,—the loss of their favor; see Intr. 105 a:—flebit: Intr. 51 a.—aspera etc.: i.e. when she is tired of him and seeks a quarrel to get rid of him. The metaphor prepares the way for the figure with which the ode closes.

7. nigris: Intr. 125; cf. Epod. 10. 5 niger Euris.

8. emirabitur: the e- is intensive, as in ediscere, elaborare, edurus, etc. The word first occurs in Horace.—insolens, innocent soul.

qui nunc te fruitur credulus aurea, 10 qui semper vacuum, semper amabilem sperat, nescius auræ fallacis. Miseri quibus intemptata nites: me tabula sacer votiva paries indicat uvida 15 suspendisse potenti vestimenta maris deo.

The word is here used in its primitive sense of 'unaccustomed to,' 'unfamiliar with' something. Horace also uses it objectively, as II. 3. 3 insolenti lætitiâ, unusuâ or excessive joy; and in this sense it was sometimes applied to a person, as Ter. And. 907 quid tu Athenas insolens, (i.e. seldom seen, 'a stranger')? Finally it is used of a person who holds himself aloof, is reserved, unsympathetic, haughty, arrogant,—its commonest meaning, as I6. 21, II. 4. 2, etc.

9. credulus aurea: the juxtaposition of the two epithets (Intr. 116 a) is as expressive as a separate clause (credens te auream esse). —aurea, all gold; denoting supreme excellence; cf. IV. 2. 23 mores aureos, II. 10. 5 auream mediocritatem, Verg. A. X. 16 Venus aurea (χρυσέης Ἀφροδίτης, II. III. 64), and our 'golden rule,' 'silence is golden,' etc.

10. vacuum, fancy-free; cf. 6. 19.

11. nescius auræ: returning to the figure introduced in vs. 6; but aura in the sense of fickle favor had almost ceased to be figurative; cf. popularis auræ, III. 2. 20.

13. nites: of outward beauty; cf. S. II. 1. 64 nitidus per ora (i.e. in public) cederet, introrsum turpis. —tabula sacer, etc.: alluding to the custom, not yet extinct, by which the shipwrecked mariner commemorated his escape and his gratitude by depositing in the temple of the divinity to whom he attributed his safety a picture (tabula) of the occurrence, together with his clothes, the sole possessions which he saved with his life. Cf. Vergil's description of the sacred olive-tree of Faunus at Laurentum (A. XII. 766), nautis olim venerabile lignum, | servati ex undis ubi figere dona solebant | Laurenti divo et votas suspendere vestes.

14. votiva: the sailor in his peril would vow the offering; cf. votas vestes, Verg. l.l., —paries: that of the temple, on which the picture was hung.

16. maris: with potenti; cf. Cypri, 3. 1 n. — deo: Neptune.

VI.

Scriberis Vario fortis et hostium victor Maeonii carminis alite, quam rem cumque ferox navibus aut equis miles te duce gesserit.

VI. To Marcus Agrippa; an apology. It would seem that Agrippa had intimated a desire that Horace should write an ode in his honor. Horace protests in half playful strain that the subject is beyond his humble powers, a theme fit for epic verse, and by weaving in a good deal of complimentary allusion really grants the favor he professes to withhold. For similar instances of his skill in declining such requests, cf. S. II. 1. 12 sqq., Ep. II. 1. 250 sqq.—Metre, 172.

1. scribēris: the emphasis (Intr. 116 b) is that of assurance, and the ground of the assurance naturally follows at once, —‘Your achievements will not lack a historian; there’s Varius, etc.,’—drawing Vario away from its syntactical connection. Scribere with a personal object (cf. vs. 13 quis Martem scripserit) or with a personal subject in the passive is rare; and the real subject here is not merely tu, understood, but tu fortis et hostium victor, i.e. your prowess and success; see Intr. 105 a.—Vario . . . alite: ablative absolute, but with a force approaching that of the examples in Intr. 105 b. The thought is, ‘Your fame is safe in the fact that Varius is an epic poet.’ (Some editors change unnecessarily to aliti, making Vario dat. of the agent.)

2. Maeonii: i.e. Homeric. According to one of many conflicting traditions Homer was born at Smyrna in Lydia (Maeonia). When this ode was written Varius was looked upon as the epic poet of the age, and even after the publication of the Aeneid in B.C. 19 Horace couples his name with that of Vergil on equal terms (Ep. II. 1. 247, 3. 55); see Intr. 15.—alite: for poet or ‘singer’; cf. IV. 2. 25 Dircaëum cycnum (of Pindar), and II. 20.

3. quam rem cumque, etc.: i.e. whatever exploit the army or navy has achieved under your command will be an occasion for Varius to record your praises in his expected epic. The construction is similar to our own use of the general relative clause, when it is equivalent to a general condition, summing up all cases that may have occurred: ‘If in any case the soldier, etc. (i.e. in every case where the soldier, etc.), your prowess will be recorded.’ Cf. Ep. I. 2. 14 quicquid delirant reges, plectuntur Achivi.—cumque: treated by Horace as a detachable suffix; cf. 7. 25, 9. 14, 16. 2, etc.—navibus: alluding especially to the naval victories of Naulochus, B.C. 36, and Actium, B.C. 31.—equis: (i.e. in contrast with navibus), on land. Agrippa commanded in Gaul in B.C. 39 and 38, and gained some successes on the Rhine and elsewhere.

5. nos: Intr. 116 b.—neque haec dicere nec: i.e. I no more attempt these themes than I

- 5 Nos, Agrippa, neque haec dicere nec gravem Pelidae stomachum cedere nescii nec cursus duplicis per mare Vlixei nec saevam Pelopis domum

 laudes egregii Caesaris et tuas culpa deterere ingeni.

should, etc.; cf. III. 5. 27 sqq. By classing Agrippa's exploits with those of the heroes of Greek epos and tragedy, ostensibly to excuse himself, he pays the highest possible compliment to the Roman general.—gravem Pelidae stomachum: the subject of the Iliad,—μήνιν . . . Πηληιάδεω Ἀχιλῆος οὐλομένην, II. I. 1.—dicere, to sing; a common use of the word, especially where the theme of song is given; cf. 12. 25, 21. 1 sqq., II. 13. 30, I. 32. 3, III. 4. 1, IV. 12. 9, etc.

6. stomachum, spleen; cf. S. II. 7. 44. The word has a colloquial flavor, and is used in playful irony of so dignified a subject; so also duplex (7), wily, for the Homeric πολύτροπος, πολύμητις.—cedere: see Intr. 101 c.

7. cursus, etc.: the theme of the Odyssey.—Vlixei: genitive; cf. Achillei, 15. 34, Epod. 17. 14. The name of Ὀδυσσεύς invariably used by Latin writers is Vlixes, from a dialectic (Doric) form, Ὀύλιξ. The genitive Vlixei, from a parallel form Vlixeus, which however does not occur (cf. Perses and Perseus), is quadrisyllabic here and Epod. 16. 60, 17. 16; but necessarily trisyllabic in hexameter (Ep. I. 6. 63, 7. 40).

8. saevam Pelopis domum, Pelops' savage line,—the subject of many of the most famous Greek tragedies, among them the Agamemnon of Aeschylus, the Electra of Sophocles, and the Orestes, Electra, and Iphigenia of Euripides, still extant. Varius himself had written a Thyestes. The story of the family was a series of murders, from Pelops himself, who slew his father-in-law Oenomaus, to Orestes, who killed his mother Clytemnestra.

9. tenues grandia (agreeing with nos and haec respectively), grand themes for slender powers; Intr. 116 a.—dum: see 2. 17 n.

10. imbellis: indicating the nature of his unfitness to deal with Agrippa's exploits.—lyrae: cf. Cypri, 3. 1 n.—musa: see note on Clio, 12. 2.—vetat: Intr. 77.

11. egregii Caesaris: cf. III. 25. 4, and see 2. 52 n. The poet dexterously introduces the fact that Agrippa was associated with Augustus in his greatest achievements.

12. culpa ingeni: cf. Ep. II. 1. 229 sqq., where Horace expresses himself at length on this subject.—deterere, to belittle.—ingeni: substantives with stems in -io- have only the shorter form of the genitive in Horace.

 Laudabunt alii claram Rhodon aut Mytilenen aut Epheson bimarise Corinthi

13-16. Scenes from the Iliad. It is implied, of course, that Agrippa's prowess is to be ranked with that of the god and the heroes mentioned.

13. tunica tectum adamantina: a paraphrase of χαλκοχιτων, a stock epithet of the Homeric warrior. Adamas (ἀδάμας, unyielding; cf. δαμάω) is not a specific metal, but a poetic term for the hardest iron or brass.

14. digne scripserit: the more accurate Latin use of the future perfect, the question having reference not so much to the action itself as to its quality, which can be submitted to judgment only after the action is completed.

15. Merionen: charioteer of Idomeneus of Crete (Il. XIII. 528); cf. 15. 26, IV. 9. 20 n.—ope Palladis etc.: alluding to the combat (Il. V. 334 sqq.) in which Diomed, with the aid of Athena, wounds Venus and Mars and drives them from the field.

18. sectis, but . . . pared; not really dangerous.—in iuvenes acrium: cf. acer in hostem, 2. 39.

19. vacui: see 5. 10 n.—sive: Intr. 119 d.—quid, at all.

20. non praeter solitum, as usual.

VII. This ode is similar in plan to Ode 4, the main motive being an exhortation to forget the troubles and enjoy the pleasures of life, with an introduction and a conclusion designed to enforce this counsel. The introduction commends the beauty of a place (as in Ode 4 of a season) that invites to enjoyment, and the conclusion supports the counsel given by an example. The parts are not so skilfully fitted together, however, as in Ode 4, so that some critics, as early as the second century, have thought that we really have here two odes (vss. 1-14 and 15-32); and this division appears in some manuscripts. It is possible that vss. 1-14 were originally written independently, but there is no sufficient reason to doubt that Horace finally composed the ode in its present form, on the plan indicated above.

- 5 Sunt quibus unum opus est intactae Palladis urbem carmine perpetuo celebrare et undique decerptam fronti praeponere olivam ;

L. Munatius Plancus, to whom the ode is addressed, was a man of advanced years and great prominence in the state. He had been one of Caesar's lieutenants in Gaul and in B.C. 43, while holding the chief command in that country, founded the colony of Lugdunum (Lyons). He was consul in 42, and for many years after that was the trusted friend and agent of Antony in the East. The latter's relations with Cleopatra however, finally drove him (or gave him an excuse) to go over to Octavian just before the decisive struggle at Actium. His course made him, justly or unjustly, many bitter enemies, who have painted him as an unscrupulous trimmer. If so, it was a master stroke to make in the senate in B.C. 27 the proposal by which the title of Augustus was conferred upon Octavian; and for this he received his reward in the censorship in B.C. 22. Horace's tribute implies nothing as to his character, being little more than a formal compliment. — Metre, 162.

1. laudabunt : Intr. 79. For the meaning, see I. 17 n. — claram, renowned (cf. Rhodum nobilem, Cat. 4. 8), applying to the first three cities named (connected by aut . . . aut). All three were noted for beauty of situation and delightful climate. Rhodes was also famous for its commerce and for its school of rhetoric which exerted no small influence on Roman oratory, counting Cicero among its pupils. Mytilene was the capital of Lesbos, the city of Alcaeus and Sappho. Ephesus was the capital of the province of Asia.

2. bimaris : from its position on the Isthmus. The word, formed on the model of the Greek διθάλασσος, occurs first here, but was afterwards much used by Ovid. — Corinthy moenia : at this time in ruins. The city was destroyed by the Romans in B.C. 146, and the colony of freedmen established there by Julius Caesar had not as yet attained any great degree of prosperity.

3. Baccho, Apolline : abl. of cause, with insignis.

4. Tempe (Τέμπη, acc. pl. neut., like γένη) : the beautiful defile through which the Peneus makes its way between Olympus and Ossa to the sea.

5. quibus unum opus est : i.e. who devote themselves wholly to this one theme. — intactae, the Virgin, Ἀθήνη Παρθένος. — urbem : Athens.

7. undique decerptam etc. : i.e. to seek distinction by writing on every possible topic in Attic history and legend. The same figure is used by Lucretius, I. 928: inuatque novos decerpere flores | insignemque meo capiti petere inde coronam, | unde prius nulli velarint tempora musae. — fronti praeponere : i.e. in a garland. — olivam, an olive twig. The olive, the gift of Athena to Athens, grew in great abundance in Attica and was closely associated with the fame of that country.

8. plurimus, a great many; cf. Verg. A. II. 369 plurima mortis imago; Juv. 3. 232 plurimus hic aeger moritur vigilando; Lucan III. 707 multus sua volnera purpi adfixit moriens. — in Iunonis honorem, etc.: cf. Il. IV. 51, where Hera says: ἡ τοι ἐμοὶ τρεῖς μὲν πολὺ φίλτατα εἰσι πολῆες, | Ἄργος τε Σπάρτη τε καὶ εὐρύαγυια Μυκῆνη.

9. aptum equis Argos = Ἄργος ἱππόβοτον (Il. II. 287). — dicet: cf. 6. 5 n. — ditis Mycenae: cf. πολυχρύσοιο Μυκῆνης, Il. VII. 180. The city was already in ruins in Horace's time.

10. me: cf. 1. 29 n. The enumeration of Greek cities is continued into this sentence, and makes the connection with what follows. — patiens, hardy. — Lacedaemon: the third of the favorite cities of Juno. Cf. vs. 8 n. All these were insignificant at this time, and interesting to Horace and his readers, as they are to us, from their historical or traditional associations.

11. Larisae: in Thessaly, in the fertile valley of the Peneus. — percussit: sc. with admiration. — opimae: cf. Ἀάρισαν ἐριβῶλακα, Il. II. 841.

12. domus, etc.: i.e. Tibur (Tivoli) and its beautiful surroundings. — domus Albuneae: i.e. the grotto sacred to this sibyl, which was resorted to as an oracle in early times from all parts of Italy. See Verg. A. VII. 82 sqq. — resonantis, from the neighboring cata-ract.

13. praeceps Anio: after passing through the town, which stands on the edge of the Sabine hills, commanding a fine view of the Campagna, the river descends to the plain in a series of beautiful waterfalls. — Tiburni: the mythical eponymous founder of Tibur. Tradition made him a grandson of the Argive prophet Amphiaraus, banished with his brothers Catillus and Coras; cf. Il. 6. 5 Tibur Argeo positum colono, I. 18. 2, where the town is called moenia Catili, and Verg. A. VII. 670 sqq. — lucus, the sacred grove; the regular meaning of lucus in distinction from nemus. Cf. Ep. I. 6. 32. — uda: i.e. irrigated; cf. III. 29. 6.

14. mobilibus rivis: the streams that flow into the Anio, with their frequent waterfalls. — pomaria: cf. Propert. V. 7. 81 pomosis Anio incubat arvis.

15. Here begins the second and main part of the ode, for which the preceding praise of Tibur paves the way. — albus, bright; cf. III. 27. 19; Intr. 125. It belongs with saepe and the predicate: as the South Wind is often bright and wipes away, etc. Notus was ordinarily cum fugeret, tamen uda Lyaeo

a stormy wind (cf. 3. 14 rabiem Noti), but sometimes brought clear weather, in which case he was called by the Greeks Λευκόνωτος.

16. parturit, is pregnant with, breeds.

17. perpetuos: cf. primus, 3. 12 n. — sapiens: equivalent to an adverb with finire. — finire, to seek relief from; lit. to set limits to, so that they shall not be perpetua. Cf. III. 4. 39; Ep. II. 3. 406 ludusque repertus et longorum operum finis. — memento: a common form of command or advice, softening the direct injunction; cf. II. 3. 1, III. 29. 32, S. II. 5. 52, Ep. I. 8. 16, etc.

18. labores, troubles.

19. molli: referring at once to the mellowness of the wine (from age) and to its soothing influence. — fulgentia: the eagle of the legion and the silver disks on the standards of the cohorts were kept highly polished.

20. tenent . . . tenebit: the natural inference from this change of tense,—that Plancus was at the time in camp,—places the date of the ode at least as early as B.C. 30, as there is no evidence and no probability that Plancus was engaged in military operations after that year.

21. tui: according to Porphyrio Plancus was a native of Tibur. He must at least have had a villa there. — Teucer: the example which the poet quotes to enforce his counsel is that of a man who, with hardships and struggles staring him in the face, refused to let them gain complete possession of his mind, and devoted to enjoyment the few hours that were left before the inevitable time of their coming. It is idle to search for any special resemblance to his case in that of Plancus. Teucer, the son of Telamon and brother of Ajax, on returning home to Salamis after the Trojan war, was repulsed and driven into banishment by his father, who had sent the brothers to the war with the strict injunction that neither should return without the other. Teucer sailed with his companions to Cyprus and there founded a city, to which he gave the name of his native Salamis; cf. Verg. A. I. 619. The story was familiar to Horace's contemporaries from a popular play of Pacuvius.

22. cum fugeret, when going into exile from; cf. S. I. 6. 13 Tarquinius regno pulsus fugit, and the Greek φεύγειν. The time indicated is apparently the night before he sailed away from Salamis. — uda Lyaeo, moist from wine, i.e. from drinking; cf. Tibul. I. 2. 3 multo perfusum tempora Baccho. Lyaeus ('the Releaser'; as if from λύω), a surname of Bacchus, stands here for his province, as Baccho in the example quoted; Intr. 130.

tempora populea fertur vinxisse corona, ambiguum tellure nova Salamina futuram.

30 O fortes peioraque passi mecum saepe viri, nunc vino pellite curas ;
 cras ingens iterabimus aequor.'

23. pōpulea : the poplar was sacred to Hercules, the great traveller of heroic times (vagus Hercules, III. 3. 9), under whose protection Teucer at this juncture would naturally place himself.—corona : cf. 4. 9 n.

25. cumque: cf. 6. 3 n.—melior, kind.—parente : represented, in the tragedy of Pacuvius, as harsh and stern (Cic. de Or. II. 193).

27. Teucro: the use of his own name instead of me,—the name by which he is known to them, with the associations attached to it in their minds,—is an appeal to their confidence in him.—duce et auspice : an expression borrowed from the institutions of the Commonwealth, under which all military operations in the province of a consul were done under his auspicia, though not necessarily under his immediate personal direction (ductus). Cf. Suet. Aug. 21 domuit autem partim ductu partim auspiciis suis Cantabriam, etc. The phrase here, however, expresses something more than complete leadership, auspice being used with reference to the prophecy which he proceeds to quote.

28. certus, unerring.

29. ambiguum : i.e. one that will rival the original Salamis so that the name will no longer serve, without further definition, to indicate which of the two is meant.—futuram : sc. esse.

30. o fortes peioraque passi : cf. Verg. A. I. 198 o passi graviores.

31. nunc : i.e. while you may ; in contrast with cras ; cf. 9. 18 and 21.

32. iterabimus : having just completed one voyage (from Troy) ; cf. Odys. XII. 293 ἤωθεν δ' ἀναβάντες ἐνήσομεν εὐρέι πόντῳ.

VIII. A spirited sketch of a young athlete in love. The name Lydia, sometimes Lyde (Λύδη), as III. 11 and 28, occurs frequently in amatory poetry, and is here appropriate with its suggestion of oriental effeminacy. Sybaris, after the name of a town in Magna Graecia proverbial for its luxury, is equally suitable for the lover in his present state. The poet expresses his amazement at the transformation which has been wrought, in a volley of questions which do not wait for an answer, adjuring Lydia to tell how she has worked such a spell upon the youth. The questions are at first indirect, depending on dic, but afterwards proceed more quietly in the direct form. The ode is no doubt formed on a Greek model, —Horace's only experiment in this difficult metre, — but is worked out as usual with Roman details. — Metre, 175.

1. per omnis te deos oro: this interlocked order (Intr. 110) is a favorite one in adjurations; cf. Ter. And. 538 per te deos oro; 834 per ego te deos oro. Here te brings out the emphasis on omnes and deos by separating them.

2. cur properes amando: i.e. why he is hastening to his ruin under her spell; not asking why she does so, but adjuring her to explain the marvelous result. What has she done to him to change him so utterly? — amando: used in a neutral sense, neither active nor passive, like an abstract noun; cf. Verg. E. 8. 71 cantando rumpitur anguis; Lucr. I. 312 anulus in digito subter tenuatur habendo.

4. campum: sc. Martium, a portion of which, on the bank of the river, was set apart for athletic exercises. The usual time was early in the afternoon, before the hottest part of the day. See S. I.

6. 125 sqq. — patiens, he who can bear; cf. metuens, I. 16 n.

5. neque . . . nec: i.e. neither in the common exercises nor alone. — militaris aequalis, the soldierly young fellows of his own age.

6. equitat: an exercise which Augustus made more fashionable by the institution (or restoration) of the Game of Troy (lusus Troiae, Suet. Aug. 43; Verg. A. V. 545); cf. III. 7. 25 sq., 12. 3, 24. 54 sq. — Gallica: i.e. of the Gallic steed. Gaul supplied the Romans with their best horses. — lupatis: cf. Verg. G. III. 208.

7. temperat, govern.

8. timet tangere: humorous exaggeration to express the extreme distaste which the youth has conceived for what was once his favorite exercise. For the infinitive see Intr. 94 l. — flavum: see 2. 13 n. — Tiberim: swimming in the warm climate of Rome was naturally a very attractive form of exercise. Cf. III. 7. 27; 12. 3; S. II. 1. 8; Cic. Cael. 36 ad Tiberim, eo loco quo omnis inventus natandi causa venit. — olivum: with which the body was anointed before swimming (cf. III. 12. 3) and the exercises of the palaestra, such as those that follow. Cf. Sat. I. 6. 123.

9. sanguine viperino: regarded as poisonous; cf. Epod. 3. 6. For the abl. see Intr. 75.

10. cautius vitat: cf. timet tangere, 8 n. — neque iam, and no longer. — livida: e.g. from carrying the discus, from occasional bruises, perhaps from blows with the boxing glove (caestus, called arma Verg. A. V. 412). — gestat: seldom used except of things separate from the body, but cf. non obtusa pectora gestamus, Verg. A. I. 567. — armis: sc. campestribus (Ep. II. 3. 379); i.e. the discus, javelin, and other implements used in the sports on the Campus.

11. disco: a heavy disc of stone or metal. The exercise was similar to our 'throwing the hammer' and 'putting the shot.' See the cut of Myron's famous discobolus in Baumeister II., p. 1003. Apparently the javelin was also used in this way, among others.

12. trans finem expedito, for having put . . . clear beyond the farthest mark ('broken the record'), like Ulysses among the Phaeacians, Od. VIII. 192: ὁ δ' (λᾶας) ὑπέρπτατο σήματα πάντων. For the construction see Intr. 105 a. — nobilis, he who is famous; concessive, like patiens 4 n.

13. ut dicunt: the story that Thetis, foreseeing the fate of her son if he should join the expedition against Troy, placed him, disguised in girl's clothes at the court of Lycomedes, king of Scyros, where he was discovered by the shrewdness of Ulysses, is not alluded to in Homer, but occurs in later Greek literature. Cf. Ovid M. XIII. 162, and Stat. Achil. I. 207 sqq., where it is worked out in detail.

14. filium: Achilles. — sub, on the eve of; see III. 7. 30 n.

16. cultus, dress. — Lycias catervas: the most important allies of the Trojans.

IX. In contrast with Ode 4, the scene is here laid in mid-winter, when the forbidding aspect of nature invests the warm fireside with a special charm. The ode is modeled upon a drinking song of Alcaeus, a part of which is preserved (Fr. 34):

"Τεῖ μὲν δ' Ζεὺς, ἐκ δ' ὀράνω μέγας χείμων, πεπάγασιν δ' ὑδάτων ῥόαι.

μάλθακον ἀμφι(τίθη) γνόφαλλον·

but the details of the picture are, as in the preceding ode, Italian. 'Thaliarchus' (θαλιάρχος = magister convivii; cf. 4. 18 n) is in all probability not an assumed name for one of Horace's friends, but with the whole setting of the ode existed only in the poet's fancy. The poem is one of Horace's early studies of his Greek masters, and may be counted among the most successful. — Metre, 176.

1. ut, how. — stet: of the mountain towering up against the sky; more picturesque than sit. Cf. Verg. A. VI. 471 stet Marpesia cautes. — alta: cf. Epod. 6. 7.

2. Soracte: on the western side of the Tiber valley, rising to a height of about 2000 feet. It was in sight from the city, about 25 miles to the north, but the scene, so far as it is definitely conceived at all, must here be imagined at some country place.

3. laborantes, struggling, sc. to hold their own against the weight of snow.

4. constiterint: i.e. are frozen entirely over: cf. Ov. Tr. V. 10. 1 ut sumus in Ponto, ter frigore constitit Hister. Such extreme cold and heavy snow as here described did not occur in middle Italy once in a lifetime. The picture is borrowed from the Greek original; cf. πεπάλασιν δ' ὑδάτων ῥόαι in the fragment quoted above.

5. dissolve: cf. solvitur, 4. 1 n. — super, upon; cf. super Pindo, 12. 6. In this sense super usually takes the accusative in prose, and with the ablative is more commonly equivalent to de, as III. 8. 17, C. S. 18. — foco: in country houses a low square platform of stone or brick in the middle of the atrium. The fire of logs was built on the top of it, and the smoke made its way out through the roof. On one side was the altar of the Lares. It was the centre of household worship and work, and around it the family would gather evenings, with such guests as they had with them; cf. Epod. 2. 65 sq., S. II. 6. 65 sqq.

6. reponens, replenishing. The word properly means to make good the loss of what has been consumed, which carries with it, however, the notion of an adequate supply. Cf. epulae repostae, Verg. G. III. 527. — benignius, more generously.

7. deprome, draw. — Sabina: i.e. containing Sabine wine (Intr. 124). It was a plain wine (cf. 20. 1), but in this case somewhat mellowed by age (quadrimum).

8. Thaliarche: see intr. note. — diota, flagon; the amphora or two-handed (lit. 'two-eared') jar in which the wine was kept in the cella vinaria, and from which it was poured (deprome) into the mixing-bowl (cratera) on the table.

9. cetera, all else, sc. than enjoyment of the present moment; cf. III. 29. 33 sq. — qui simul, the moment they. See 4. 17 n.

10. stravere, have laid. — aequore: Intr. 69.

11. deproeliantis: sc. with one another; cf. 3. 12 sq. The prefix is intensive, as in deamo, demiror, depereo, etc. — nec cupressi: i.e. the warring winds give place to absolute calm. The meaning of the whole strophe is that the gods, and they alone, can make the storm cease; we must bide their time, and not waste such opportunities for enjoyment as the present affords in fretting over what is beyond our control. This thought Horace proceeds to work out with details which are obviously his own, and not taken from Alcaeus. For cupressi see II. 14. 23 n.

13. fuge quaerere: Intr. 94 k.

14. quem . . . cumque, each day that. — fors: here personified and equivalent to Fortuna. The goddess was worshipped under the name of Fors Fortuna; cf. Ter. Phor. 841; Cic. Leg. II. 28. — die-rum: Intr. 63. — lucro adpone, set down as gain; lit. insert it in that category, on that side of the balance-sheet.

15. nec sperne: see Intr. 88 and 89 note. — amores: the plural of repeated instances; see Intr. 128.

16. puer, while you are young. The word is frequently used for early manhood (cf. III. 2. 2, IV. 4. 28, S. II. 1. 60), as puella is often a young woman. — neque tu: the insertion of the pronoun with the second verb points the exhortation with special emphasis at the person addressed, — 'However it may be with others, don't you, at any rate, etc.' Cf. Ep. I. 2. 63 hunc frenis, hunc tu compesce catena.

17. virenti? sc. tibi.

18. morosa, fretful, easily irritated, and hence incapable of enjoyment. — nunc: repeating with emphasis the idea of donec virenti, etc. — campus: see 8. 4 n; areae, the squares, open spaces about public buildings; both especially attractive for saunterers in a city where the streets were very narrow.

19. sub noctem, at nightfall ; cf. 8. 14 n.

20. composita, appointed (by agreement).—repetantur, be claimed. Repetere, 'to demand what is due' (cf. composita hora), corresponds to reddere (3. 7 n.), as petere to dare ; cf. the technical phrases for demanding and making restitution, res repetere, res reddere.

21. nunc et: the anaphora (Intr. 116 h) carries over from the preceding sentence (with a slight zeugma) the idea of repetantur.—latentis, etc.: the arrangement is highly artistic, each word in this verse expressing a partial notion, to be completed by the word holding the corresponding position in the next verse ; see Intr. 110.

23. pignus : i.e. a bracelet or a ring, as the following words show.—lacertis : dative.

24. male pertinaci, not very obstinate. Male, like a negative quantity in mathematics, diminishes the force of an adjective which expresses a positive or desirable quality, as here and in male sanos, Ep. I. 19. 3, male parentem, Ep. I. 20. 15 ; but strengthens one that expresses a negative quality or a defect, as male dispari, 17. 25, male laxis, S. I. 3. 31, rauci male, S. I. 4. 66.

X. A hymn to Mercury, after Alcaeus. The first lines of the original were perhaps (Fr. 5) :—

Χαῖρε Κυλλάνας ὁ μέδεις, σὲ γάρ μοι θῦμος ὕμνην, τὸν κορύφαις ἐν αὐταῖς Μαῖα γέννατο Κρονίδα μίγνισα.

Accordingly Mercury appears here with the finer attributes of the Greek Hermes, with whom he was identified at a very early period, rather than as the god of trade, which was the character under which he was most widely worshipped in the Roman world ; and his attributes of cunning and deception, which he necessarily bore as the patron of traders in an age when trade had not even advanced so far as to regard honesty as the best policy, are lightly touched upon and presented in the more agreeable aspect of the harmless practical joke.—Metre, 174.

1. facunde : as the nuntius deorum (vs. 5), 'Ἐρμῆς λόγιος.—nepos Atlantis : as filius Maia (2. 43 n).

2. feros cultus, etc., the savage life of early man.

callidum quicquid placuit iocoso condere furto.

Te boves olim nisi reddidisses 10 per dolum amotas puerum minaci voce dum terret, viduus pharetra risit Apollo.

3. voce, by language, i.e. by teaching them articulate speech, the first step in civilization which raised man above the level of the brute. Cf. S. I. 3. 99 sqq., where the poet's Epicurean view of man's progress is the same, except that it excludes the intervention of any god.—formasti, didst mould, i.e. reduce to symmetry and order.—catus: i.e. in foreseeing the efficacy of such means. The word has an antique flavor, an instance of the rule which Horace lays down Ep. II. 2. 115.

4. more, the practice; i.e. by the institution of it.—palaestrae: here the exercise, not the place; hence decorae. Physical training was regarded by the Greeks as an essential factor of education.

6. nuntium: as ἑρμῆς δίακροπος. In this capacity he appears frequently in Greek and Latin literature, e.g. Odys. V. 20, Verg. A. I. 297, IV. 222 sqq.—lyrae parentem: according to the myth, which is substantially the same as given in the Homeric Hymn to Hermes 22 sqq., this feat and the one recounted in the next strophe occurred on the day the god was born. The lively infant caught a tortoise and with the shell constructed the first tetrachord.

7. iocoso: i.e. in fun, with no malice.

8. condere, to hide. For the mood see Intr. 101 c.

9. te: cf. vss. 5, 13, and 17. The emphatic repetition of the personal pronoun of the second person (Intr. 116 f) is particularly characteristic of hymns and eulogies; cf. 35. 5–21, IV. 14. 33–51.—nisi reddidisses: the apodosis is implied in minaci voce, which must have stated what would happen if the cattle were not brought back. The pluperf. subj. is here used in indirect discourse to represent the future perf. indic. used by Apollo: nisi boves reddideris.

10. puerum minaci: Intr. 116 a.

11. dum terret: i.e. before the threat was out of his mouth he found his quiver gone.

12. risit: emphatic (Intr. 116 b), indicating the complete success of his joke: even his victim was left in good humor and joined in the laugh. The two brothers at once became fast friends; Mercury gave Apollo his lyre, and received from the latter the magic rod (virga 18 n.).

Quin et Atridas duce te superbos castra fefellit.

 Tu pias laetis animas reponis sedibus virgaque levem coerces aurea turbam, superis deorum 20 gratus et imis.

13-20. The poet now returns to Mercury's office as nuntius deorum in their dealings with men, recalling a signal example of his success in that capacity and closing with a reference to his high function of conductor of the shades of the righteous to Elysium ('Ερμῆς ψυχοπομπός).

13. quin et: the story is introduced as merely a more marked example of the god's success in concealment, and hence suggested by the preceding. But it serves to make the transition to the subject of his beneficent activity in behalf of mankind, and to the more serious thought with which the ode very properly closes. The story is from Il. XXIV. 159 sqq.

14. Ilio: here and elsewhere in Horace (III. 19. 4, IV. 4. 53, Epod. 10. 13), neuter in the ablative. He uses a feminine nominative and accusative, Ilios, Ilion (IV. 9. 18, Epod. 14. 14). — Ilio relictō: and so placing himself at the mercy of his enemies. — dives: and hence a prize they would have been most eager to capture, had they known of his presence.

15. Thessalos: i.e. those of Achilles' men, the Myrmidons, from Phthia, in Thessaly. Cf. II. 4. 10. — ignis: suggesting the danger of detection. — Troiae: dative.

16. fefellit, passed unobserved.

17. tu: cf. te 9 n. — laetis . . . reponis sedibus, dost bring safely to the homes of bliss. Re-ponere, in the sense of 'put away' (cf. tellure repostos, Verg. A. VI. 655) gives to sedes here the meaning of permanent abode. For the case of sedibus see Intr. 69.

18. virga aurea: cf. Hymn to Herm. 529: ὄλβου καὶ πλοῦτος δώσω περικαλλέα ῥάβδον, | χρυσεῖην, τριπέτηλον, ἀκήριον ἧ σε φυλάξει, | πάντας ἐπικραίνουσ' οἴμους ἐπέων τε καὶ ἔργων | τῶν ἀγαθῶν. The caduceus, with its two intertwining serpents, symbolical of peace and commerce, was of later origin. — levem coerces turbam, keepest together the unsubstantial throng, as a shepherd his flock; cf. 24. 16 sqq.; Odys. XXIV. 1 sqq.

19. deorum: Intr. 63.

20. imis: for the more usual inferis.

XI. The superstition of the Romans made them an easy prey to the soothsayers and astrologers (cf. S. I. 6. 114) who flocked to the city after the conquest of the East. Leuconoe,—a name chosen apparently for its pleasing sound and its metrical value,—represents in the poet's fancy a young person whose attachment to him leads her to resort to the fortune-tellers, to learn what she can of his future and of her own. Horace meets this folly with his usual Epicurean maxims,—a repetition, substantially, of 9. 13 sqq. The ode is no doubt, like the two others written in this metre (I. 18., IV. 10.), a free imitation or paraphrase of a Greek original.—Metre, 170.

1. scire nefas, it is not vouchsafed us to know. Cf. III. 29. 29 sq.
—quem finem etc.: i.e. when is our appointed time to die.

2. nec: for neve (Intr. 89 note). The clause defines more particularly the kind of inquiry against which his warning (ne quaesieris) is directed.—Babylonios numeros: the calculations of the Chaldean astrologers.

3. temptaris, meddle with.—ut, how much.

4. hiemes: i.e. years, but used as in modern poetry, to give the desired color to the thought,—the same background as in Ode 9.—tribuit, has assigned, i.e. at our birth, the question which the astrologers professed to solve. For its position see Intr. 119 a.—ultimam: agreeing with the antecedent of quae (sc. hanc), as the last.

5. debilitat, breaks; lit. 'cripples.'—pumicibus: instrumental abl. The word is here used of the rocks eaten away and hollowed out by the action of the waves; cf. Plin. N. H. XXXVI. 154 appellantur quidem ita (sc. pumices) erosa saxa; Verg. A. V. 213 columba | cui domus et dulces latebroso in pumice nidi.

6. Tyrrhenum: see Intr. 117.—sapias, etc.: Intr. 87.—liques, strain. The wine as it came from the amphora contained a good deal of sediment, which was removed by pouring it through a coarse linen saccus or a colander (colum).—spatio brevi (abl. abs.), since our time is short, sc. for the realization of far-reaching plans and hopes.

7. spem longam: cf. 4. 15.—reseces, prune down.—fugerit, will be gone.—invida: personify

8. diem, the passing day, carpe implying a transitory character in its object; cf. Mart. VII. 47. 11 fugitiva gaudia carpe. — credula: cf. 5. 9; it expresses more than credens (= fidens), and alludes to her foolish faith in the astrologers. — postero (sc. diei): Intr. 58 a.

XII. This ode, like Ode 2, was written to glorify the mission of Caesar Augustus, as the heaven-sent ruler of the world. For the form, Horace has worked upon a suggestion which he found in Pindar's second Olympian ode, the opening verses of which he has closely imitated:—

Ἀναξιδόρυγες ὕμνοι, τίνα θεόν, τίν' ἥρωα, τίνα δ' ἄνδρα
κελαδήσομεν;

As in this ode Pindar approaches the praise of the victor Thero through the long story of the fortunes and sorrows of his ancestors, so Horace presents Augustus as the culmination of the long line of benefactors,—gods, heroes, and men,—to whose activity or suffering mankind is most indebted for its progress. The tone of the ode, in keeping with Augustus' professed view of his mission, is serious and free from any note of triumph. It presents him as the bearer of a great responsibility, the successor, not of the great warriors and powerful monarchs of the past, but of the men who died for their country or who served her without exalting themselves. See notes on vss. 35 and 41-44.

The allusion to Marcellus (vs. 45 sq.) shows that the ode could not have been written much before his marriage with Julia, the daughter of Augustus (B.C. 25), nor later than 23, the date of his death.—Metre, 174.

1. quem virum . . . heroa . . . deum: these three classes are taken up in reverse order,—dei in vss. 13-24, heroes in vss. 25-33, viri in 34-48.—heroa, demigod.—lyra vel tibia: cf. III. 4. 1-4. Either instrument from its traditional use would be suitable for the present purpose: the Greek rhapsodist sang the exploits of his heroes to the notes of the lyre; the tibia was said to have been used to accompany the songs which the Romans in early times, according to Cato (Cic. Tusc. IV. 3), sang at banquets in praise of their ancestors.—acri, shrill, a highly appropriate and expressive epithet according to Quintilian (VIII. 2. 9).

2. sumis, dost thou take, i.e. as a subject. Cf. Ep. II. 3. 38 sumite materiam vestris, qui scribitis, aequam | viribus. The present implies that the muse has already determined to sing; the poet feels her inspiration, and asks what is the theme. The future, which is found in a few MSS., would be suitable if it were an invitation to sing.—celebrare: Intr. 93.—Clio: possibly addressed here in the character, which she gradually acquired, of muse of history. But the special attributes of the muses which have come down to us are not sharply defined in Horace, whose muse is sometimes Euterpe or Polyhymnia (I. 33), or Clio, as here, or Melpomene (cf. 24. 3, III. 30. 16, IV. 3. 1), or Calliope (III. 4. 2); often simply musa, as II. 1. 37, 12. 13, III. 3. 70, etc.; or mea musa, 17. 14; sometimes with a qualifying phrase, as 6. 10 imbellis lyrae musa potens; S. II. 6. 17 musa pedestris; Ep. II. 3. 407 musa lyrae sollers; cf. II. 1. 9 musa tra-goediae.

3. iocosa, merry, personifying Echo, as if she mocked people in jest. Cf. Ov. M. III. 356 sqq., where Echo is represented as a nymph.

4. imago: used in prose also for the Greek ἠχώ; cf. Varro, R. R. III. 16. 12 ubi non resonant imagines.

5. Heliconis: a mountain in Boeotia, on the borders of which, at Ascra, there existed from very early times a μουσεῖον, devoted to the worship of the muses, and under their protection to the promotion of literature. Hesiod was the most famous leader of this school or guild, and ancient copies of his works with the Homeric and doubtless other poems were preserved there. The mountain in consequence, and particularly the springs of Aganippe and Hippocrene, had come to be regarded as a favorite haunt of the muses.

6. super: cf. 9. 5 n. — Pindo: the mountain range between Thessaly and Epirus, also regarded as a seat of the muses; cf. Verg. E. 10. 11. — Haemo: tradition made the Heliconian school of song an offshoot from an older school which had been established at Libethrum, in Pieria, on the slopes of Olympus, by a tribe or guild of Thracians whose leader, Orpheus, was the son of the muse Calliope and the Thracian king Oeagrus. Hence the name Pieris for muse.

7. unde: i.e. from Haemus. — temere: i.e. spell-bound, not of their own will and intent; they could not choose but follow.

9. arte materna: i.e. music. See note on Haemo, 6.

11. blandum, with charm. — et: Intr. 114. — auritas (proleptic), to lend ears to . . . and.

12. ducere: for the mood see Intr. 101 c.

Quid prius dicam solitis parentis laudibus, qui res hominum ac deorum, 15 qui mare et terras variisque mundum temperat horis?

Vnde nil maius generatur ipso, nec viget quicquam simile aut secundum;
 proximos illi tamen occupavit
 20 Pallas honores.

13. quid prius, etc.: it being prescribed by ancient tradition to begin heroic songs with the glory of Jove (solitis laudibus). Cf. Pind. Nem. 2. 1 ὁθένπερ καὶ Ὀμηρίδαι ῥαπτῶν ἐπέων ταπόλλ' αἰδοὶ ἀρχονται, Διὸς ἐκ προοιμίου. The form ἐκ Διὸς ἀρχώμεσθα is found in Aratus (Phaen. 1) and Theocritus (17. 1); cf. Verg. E. 3. 60 ab Iove principium. — parentis: sc. of gods and men, as is indicated in the following clause; cf. II. 19. 21, and see I. 2. 2 n.

14. laudibus: Intr. 75.

15. mundum, the firmament. Mundus strictly includes the earth (mare ac terras), but as we naturally think of the latter more in its connection with our own lives than its place in the universe, mundus comes to mean the sky and the heavenly bodies.

16. temperat, governs. — horis, seasons; cf. hora Caniculæ, III. 13. 9; sub verni temporis horam, Ep. II. 3. 302.

17. unde = ex quo, referring to parentis 13; cf. S. I. 6. 12. Valeri genus, unde superbus Tarquinius regno pulsus fugit. The use of unde with a personal antecedent is not infrequent in prose, as Sal. Jug. 14. 22 tibi, unde minime decuit, vita erepta est. — nil, no one; but stronger than nemo; cf. S. I.

3. 18. — generatur: the present expresses what is true at all times, so that the meaning is that Jove is eternally supreme. The statement includes all gods and men, Jove being here thought of as the parent of all (cf. parentis, 13 n.)

18. nec viget, etc.: i.e. no living being can compare with Jove in power and glory (viget). The relative construction is abandoned, and ei must be supplied with simile. — quicquam: cf. nil, 17 n. — aut secundum; proximos tamen: i.e. though Pallas, as compared with the common throng of gods, is nearest to Jove, she cannot be called next to him: she is separated from him by a long interval. Cf. Cic. Brut. 173 duobus summis, Crasso et Antonio, L. Philippus proximus accedebat, sed longo tamen intervallo proximus; itaque eum . . . neque secundum neque tertium dixerim; neque enim in quadrigis eum secundum nominaverim . . . qui vix e carceribus exierit cum palmam iam primus acceperit; Verg. A. V. 320.

19. occupavit, holds.

20. Pallas: as goddess of wisdom exalted above all other gods but Jove himself. Cf. Hesiod, Theog. 896 ἴσον ἔχουσιν πατρὶ μένος καὶ ἐπίφρονα βουλὴν.

Proeliis audax neque te silebo Liber, et saevis inimica virgo beluis, nec te, metuende certa Phoebe sagitta.

- 25 Dicam et Alciden puerosque Ledae, hunc equis, illum superare pugnis nobilem ; quorum simul alba nautis stella refulsit, defluit saxis agitatus umor,

21. proeliis audax: Horace not infrequently begins an address with a descriptive phrase in agreement with the name of the person addressed, which is inserted in the sentence later, as II. 7. 1, Ep. I. 1. 1. Bacchus was endowed with a greater variety of attributes and epithets (cf. Ov. M. IV. 11 sqq.) than any other god. His prowess in war was displayed in the battle of the Giants (II. 19. 21 sqq.), and his triumphal Indian journey, according to one form of the myth, was a military expedition. The poet naturally mentions this, one of his nobler qualities, in a list of gods and heroes who have contributed to the welfare of mankind. So Diana is here not simply the goddess of the chase, but the destroyer of monsters (saevis beluis), and Apollo is joined with her as the god of the bow; see vs. 23 n. Hercules and the Dioscuri are well known benefactors of the race.

22. et: connecting the description of Diana with proeliis audax Liber. The idea of neque te silebo (= te quoque memorabo; non silere being a mere rhetorical variation (litotes) for dicere or memorare; cf. IV. 9. 31) is repeated with virgo, which is vocative.

23. metuende sagitta: see vs. 21 n. The allusion is to Apollo's destruction of the python (Ov. M. I. 438 sqq.). — certa, unerring.

25. dicam: see 6. 5 n. — et, too. — Alciden: Hercules, whose reputed father, Amphitryon, was the son of Alceus. His services, like those of the Roman heroes who follow, are not enlarged upon, being well known. — pueros Ledae: Castor and Pollux.

26. hunc, etc.: cf. S. II. 1. 26 Castor gaudet equis, ovo prognatus eodem | pugnis; Il. III. 237 Κάστορα θ' ἱππόδαμον καὶ πῆξ ἀγαθὸν Πολυδεύκεα. — superare nobilem: see Intr. 101 c. — pugnis: from pugnus.

27. quorum simul: cf. qui simul, 9. 9 n, and the whole description there. — alba, bright.

28. stella: cf. 3. 2 n. — refulsit, has flashed (out of the darkness) upon.

29. defluit, etc.: Horace here introduces one of his graphic pictures (cf. 2. 7 n), to break the monotony of his long catalogue of benefactors. In this passage and in IV. 8. 31 he reproduces a description of Theocritus, 22. 17 ἀλλ' ἔμπας ὑμεῖς (sc. Διόσκουροι) γε καὶ ἐκ βυθοῦ ἔλκετε νῆας | αὐτοῖσιν ναῦταισιν ῥιομένους θανέσθαι · αἶψα

- 30 concidunt venti fugiuntque nubes, et minax, quod sic voluere, ponto unda recumbit.

Romulum post hos prius an quietum
Pompili regnum memorem an superbos

- 35 Tarquini fascis dubito, an Catonis nobile letum.

δ' ἀπολήγοντ' ἀνεμοι, λιπαρὰ δὲ
γαλήνη | ἄμ' πέλαγος· νεφέλαι δὲ διέδραμον ἄλλυδις ἄλλαι.

31. voluere, have willed. Such parenthetical clauses, referring the events described to the will of some deity, are not uncommon; cf. II. I. 5 Διὸς δ' ἐτελείετο βουλή.

32. recumbit, subsides; lit. 'lies down,' having been minax, i.e. towering aloft as it approached.

33. Romulum, etc.: from the demigods who have befriended mankind, Horace proceeds to the founders and builders of the great empire which is destined to bring the whole earth under its beneficent sway. The number of these is so large as to be embarrassing, and the poet is in doubt where to begin.

34. Pompili: sc. Numae. Roman tradition assigned almost equal merit to Romulus and Numa for their very different services in establishing the state. Cf. Liv. I. 21. 6 duo deinceps reges, alius alia via, ille bello hic pace, civitatem auxerunt. — superbos Tarquini fascis, the haughty power of the Tarquin. The epithet belongs logically to Tarquini (Intr. 124), and hence the reference must be to Tarquin the Proud, whose contributions to Rome's greatness, through the subjection of neighboring tribes, were very considerable, and whose memory, in spite of the bitter hatred which he incurred in his struggle with the people, was at least respected. Cf. Cic. Phil. 3, 9 Tarquinius . . . non crudelis, non impius, sed superbus habitus est; . . . nihil humile de Tarquinio, nihil sordidum accepimus.

35. Catonis, etc.: it is noteworthy that Horace, coming now to the time of the Commonwealth, passes over the greatest warriors and statesmen, and selects only typical instances of the Roman virtus which courted poverty or death for the public good.

36. nobile letum: Cato's contemporaries were entirely convinced of his disinterestedness and his sincerity in carrying his Stoic principles into political life, and his dramatic suicide at Utica, after Caesar's victory at Thapsus, in B.C. 46, invested him with something of the halo of a saint, whose lofty character and motives were a safe subject of eulogy even in an ode in honor of the heir and successor of Caesar. Horace's admiration for him, which appears here and in II. 1. 24, dated no doubt from the time when he joined the army of Brutus. Vergil's tribute is still higher: he makes Cato another Minos, judging the dead (secretosque pios; his dantem iura Catonem, A. VIII. 670).

Regulum et Scauros animaeque magnae prodigum Paullum superante Poeno gratus insigni referam camena

40 Fabriciumque.

37. Regulum: the poet's second example of a nobile letum. M. Atilius Regulus, in his second consulship, B.C. 256, during the first Punic war, successfully invaded Africa, but the next year he was defeated and captured by the Carthaginians. The story of his mission to Rome with a Carthaginian embassy to arrange ransom for the prisoners, his advice to the senate to leave the latter to their fate, and his voluntary return to captivity and death, is told in III. 5. 13 sqq. — Scauros: M. Aemilius Scaurus and his son. The latter was involved in the panic of the Roman cavalry under Catulus in the disastrous battle on the Adige (B.C. 101), when they were so effectively routed by the Cimbri that they abandoned their general and fled incontinently to the city. Young Scaurus was met by a stern message from his father that his dead body brought home from the battle-field would have been more welcome than his return alive after so disgraceful a repulse, and thereupon put an end to his own life. Val. Max. V. 8. 4.

38. prodigum, that squanderer. The touch of censure implied in the word only heightens the effect of the eulogy. L. Aemilius Paullus, consul in B.C. 216 with Terentius Varro, fell in the battle of Cannae, which his colleague had brought on against his advice. As the story is told by Livy (XXII. 49. 6) Paulus could have escaped without personal dishonor, but chose to die with his men rather than return from such a disastrous defeat.

39. gratus: i.e. for the sacrifice which such splendid devotion to duty and country has cost. — insigni camena, with no ordinary song. The Camenae (earlier form, Casmenae; cf. carmen = casmen), originally nymphs in whose songs the magical or prophetic knowledge of the spirits of the woods found expression, enjoy a wider province in the Augustan and later poets, who identify them with the Greek muses (cf. II. 16. 38 Graiae Camenae; C. S. 62), and use the singular, as here, concretely for 'song' (cf. Ep. I. i. 1).

40. Fabriciumque: by including one of the group of great men next described in his grata relatio Horace virtually includes them all.

41-44. The three worthies named in this strophe too are selected not so much for the greatness of their achievements as for the lesson which their example conveys. They stand for the highest type of citizenship in the best days of the Commonwealth,—men whose training for public service was hard work at home, and whose eminence in the state did not affect the simplicity of their lives and their indifference to riches. C. Fabricius Luscinus and M'. Curius Dentatus were prominent in the wars against the Samnites and Pyrrhus, and tradition loved to tell of the futile efforts of the latter to move them either with flattery or with gold (Val. Max. IV. 3. 5 sq., Cic. C. M. 55, Rep. III. 6). M. Furius Camillus, the conqueror of Veii (B.C. 396) and deliverer of Rome

Hunc et intonsis Curium capillis utilem bello tulit et Camillum saeva paupertas et avitus apto cum lare fundus.

- 45 Crescit occulto velut arbor aevo
fama Marcelli ; micat inter omnis from the Gauls (390), was the most eminent Roman of his time.

41. intonsis capillis: this characteristic of earlier and simpler times was made familiar to every Roman by the public statues. Cf. Varro R. R. II. 11. 10 olim tonsores non fuisse adsignificant antiquorum statuae, quod pleraeque habent capillum et barbam magnam. There were no barbers in Rome, according to Varro (cf. Plin. N. H. VII. 211), till B.C. 300, which was in the lifetime of Curius, and it was a long time after that date that the fashion of trimming the hair short and shaving off the beard became general. Hence intonsus, barbatus, etc., are used to connote ancient times and simple manners. Cf. intonsi Catonis, II. 15. 11 ; barbato regi, Juv. 4. 103.

42. utilem: applying to all three men. — bello: dative; Intr. 58 c.

43. saeva paupertas: cf. III. 6. 33-44, where the poet points more sharply the contrast between the severe training which made the sturdy manhood of early times, and the degeneracy of his own day when poverty was a reproach (III. 24. 42). — avitus: i.e. not purchased or enlarged by him, implying his abstinence from the pursuit of wealth; cf. patrios agros I. 11 n. — apto, to match; not a great country-house such as a man of his station would now have.

44. lare, a dwelling. The word itself excludes the idea of a large house.

45. crescit, is growing. The present prepares the reader for the transition which the poet now makes to his own times. This he does by selecting as his last example of the great men of old, M. Claudius Marcellus, the conqueror of Syracuse (B.C. 212) and the first Roman general who fought Hannibal with success. He was killed in a skirmish in his 5th consulship, B.C. 208. The mention of this famous warrior could not fail to carry with it to Horace's readers an allusion to Marcellus, the nephew and son-in-law of Augustus, whose untimely death Vergil commemorates in the Aeneid (VI. 860); and the poet manages, without expressly naming this young man, who had performed no achievement as yet worth mentioning, to intimate that he has a great career before him. — occulto aevo, which does not show its age; descriptive ablative. Since the time of the great Marcellus no member of that family had attained any special eminence; his fame, which would have been enhanced by distinguished descendants, appeared to be at a standstill; but like a tree, which appears the same from year to year, it is really growing. The compliment to the young Marcellus is obvious.

46. inter omnis: sc. duces, or the like; 'in the whole galaxy,' as we should say, of great men.

Iulium sidus velut inter ignis luna minores.

Gentis humanae pater atque custos,
50 orte Saturno, tibi cura magni
Caesaris fatis data : tu secundo Caesare regnes.

Ille seu Parthos Latio imminentis

55 sive subiectos Orientis orae Seras et Indos, te minor latum reget aequus orbem ;
tu gravi curru quaties Olympum, tu parum castis inimica mittes
60 fulmina lucis.

47. Iulium sidus: i.e. the Julian house. The figure paves the way for the comparison that follows, which is from Sappho (Fr. 3). Some see in it an allusion to the comet that appeared after Caesar's death (Plin. N. H. II. 94, Suet. Iul. 88); but the poet wishes us to think here of Augustus, and refers only indirectly to Julius Caesar.—inter ignis, etc.: cf. Epod. 15. 2.

49. gentis humanae, etc.: the ode closes with a solemn appeal to Jupiter, the father of all mankind, to accept the predestined ruler of the race as his vicegerent on earth.

51. secundo Caesare, with Caesar next to thee. There is no allusion to verse 18, the point of view here being entirely different. The other gods have their special provinces and do not come under consideration at all here, where the government of the earth is the topic in mind.

53. ille seu, etc.: i.e. he, on his part, whatever triumphs may be in store for him, will ever own his dependence on thee.—Parthos: see 2. 22 n.—Latio: used like Roma for the Roman state; cf. 35. 10 with II. 3. 44.

54. egerit, shall lead; lit. 'shall have driven,' a more exact expression than ducere (which is also used), since the prisoners preceded the victor's car in the triumphal procession.—iusto, well earned. Iustus triumphus is a technical phrase, expressing compliance with certain well understood conditions relating to the rank of the general and the extent and importance of his victory.

55. subiectos Orientis orae, who dwell beneath the borders of the eastern sky. Orientis is a substantive, like Occidentis, Epod. 1. 13.

56. Sērās (Σήρας) et Indos: vague names to convey the impression of unlimited future conquests; cf. IV. 15. 21 sqq., C. S. 53 sqq.

57. te minor, as subordinate to

58. tu gravi, etc.: i.e. thou wilt maintain thy supreme authority by the usual manifestations of thy power and of thy wrath.

59. parum castis, polluted. — inimica fulmina: cf. 3. 40 n, and see Intr. 124.

60. lucis: dat.; cf. terris, 2. 1; Intr. 53. Lightning as a sign of the divine will held a prominent place in Roman divination, and it was regarded as of momentous significance if a sacred grove or temple (cf. 2. 16 n.) was struck. Preller-Jordan Röm. Myth. I. 192.

2. cerea: i.e. smooth and free from blemishes, like a waxen image. — Telephi: repeated with bitterness, in imitation of her maddening iteration of the name. Cf. S. I. 6. 45 sq.

3. vae, ugh!

4. difficili, uncomfortable. —

iecur: regarded as the seat of the passions, especially of anger (cf. S. I. 9. 66 meum iecur urere bilis) and love (cf. IV. 1. 12).

5. nec mens, etc.: i.e. I lose control of my feelings and my color comes and goes. For this use of mens cf. Cat. 61. 33 mentem amore revinciens.

6. manēt: Intr. 179. — umor, the tear.

7. furtim, etc.: i.e. to my surprise, making me aware of the depth of my feeling.

8. quam: with penitus. — lentis, persistent, lingering. — macerer, I am wasting away.

9. uror, etc.: i.e. I am enraged by the sight of these unseemly marks of the intimacy which you have allowed him.

10. turparunt: i.e. have left them 'black and blue.' Cf. 17. 25 sqq.; Prop. III. 7. 19 quin etiam, si me ulterius provexerit ira, ostendes matri bracchia laesa tuae. — immodicae, (carried to excess), indecent. — mero, over your cups. The abl. expresses the cause of immodicae.

 divolsus querimoniis
 20 suprema citius solvet amor die.

11. sive, etc.: the passionate youth has been as violent in his caresses as in his anger.

14. perpetuum, constant.

16. quinta parte: i.e. a generous share. Others explain the phrase as indicating the degree of sweetness, referring to a fancy found in the Greek lyric poets that honey was ἑνατον μέρος τῆς ἀμβροσίας or τῆς ἀθανασίας δέκατον μέρος (Athen. II. 8, Schol. on Pind. Pyth. 9. 16); but this would imply that the substance with which Venus bathed Lydia's lips was something else than nectar. It has also been conjectured that quinta pars was used, like quinta essentia in mediaeval Latin, for ἡ πέμπτη οὐσία, the name given by the Pythagorean philosophers to the ether, the subtlest of the five elements. This would be very appropriate here (quintessence), but there is no evidence and little probability that the phrase was used in this sense. — sui, her own.

17. ter et amplius: cf. Verg. A. I. 94 terque quaterque beati.

18. inrupta, that nothing can sever. The word is found only here and is used, like invictus, indomitus, etc., with the force of an adjective in -ilis. — nec malis, etc., and whom no estrangement, begotten of hateful reproaches, etc.; an amplification of the preceding clause.

19. divolsus amor: see Intr. 105 a.

20. suprema, the last (sc. of life). — solvat: with reference to copula, 18. — die: Intr. 75.

XIV. Quintilian (VIII. 6. 44) cites this ode as an example of that species of allegory (inversio) which aliud verbis aliud sensu ostendit, and adds this explanation: navem pro re publica, fluctus et tempestates pro bellis civilibus, portum pro pace atque concordia dicit. The figure of the 'ship of state' Horace found already employed by Greek writers (as Theognis 671, Plato Rep. VI. 488), and among others by Alcaeus in an ode (Fr. 18) beginning

Ἀσυνέτημι τῶν ἀνέμων στάσιν· τὸ μὲν γὰρ ἔνθεν κύμα κυλινδεται, τὸ δ' ἔνθεν· ἄμμες δ' ἂν τὸ μέσσοι νῆϊ φορήμεθα σὺν μελαίνα, χεῖμωνι μοχθεῖντες μεγάλῳ μάλα· πὲρ μὲν γὰρ ἄντλος ἰστοπέδαν ἔχει, λαῖφος δὲ πᾶν ζάδηνλον ἦδη καὶ λάκιδες μέγαλαι κατ' αὐτοῖ· χόλαιοι δ' ἀγκυραί.

XIV.

O navis, referent in mare te novi fluctus ! O quid agis ? Fortiter occupa portum ! Nonne vides ut nudum remigio latus
 5 et malus celeri saucius Africo antemnaeque gemant ac sine funibus vix durare carinae
 possint imperiosius

Horace's treatment, however, is essentially different. In the Greek poet the ship is merely the metaphor under which he pictures to his fellow-citizens their political situation ; in the present ode, as in Longfellow's famous poem, she is the personified Commonwealth, the ideal object of patriotic devotion which we usually express by 'our country.' There is no direct evidence to show when the ode was written, but it probably belongs to the period of uncertainty between the battle of Actium and the settlement of the year 27. The ship is still at sea, sailing now in the quieter waters near the shore, but so shattered and torn that she cannot possibly live through another storm. Her only safety lies in making without delay a secure harbor. The plain meaning of this is that the state is in too exhausted a condition to endure another civil contest ; what is needed above all else is peace, — the very sentiment to which Octavian appealed and on which he established his power. — Metre, 173.

1. in mare, out to sea. The ship is imagined as sailing along, according to the ancient practice, within a safe distance of the shore; cf. II. 10. 1-4. — novi fluctus : i.e. another storm coming up, (another civil conflict).

2. fortiter occupa, be active now, and gain.

3. nonne vides, seest thou not ? But vides is vague enough in its meaning to express the perception of sounds (gemant, 6); cf. S. II. 8. 77 videres stridere susurros; Verg. A. IV. 490 mugire videbis | sub pedibus terram et descendere montibus ornos. — ut: cf. 9. 1 n.

4. nudum remigio (sc. sit), is stripped of its oars (broken off by the violence of the storm). See Intr. 66 c, note.

5. malus: to be taken with gemant.

6. gemant, creak, — not by rubbing against one another, but each for itself ; they have all been strained by the force of the storm. — funibus: used for undergirding the ship (cf. N. T. Acts 27. 17), to keep the planks from springing apart under the strain of a rough sea.

7. durare, hold out against. — carinae, the hull. For the plural see Intr. 128.

8. imperiosius, in his sterner mood, personifying aequor.

aequor? Non tibi sunt integra lintea, 10 non di, quos iterum pressa voces malo.

Quamvis Pontica pinus,

11 silvae filia nobilis, iactes et genus et nomen inutile, deb^{es} ludibrium, cave.

Nuper sollicitum quae mihi taedium, nunc desiderium cura^{que} non levis, interfusa nitentis

20 vites aequora Cycladas.

10. non di: i.e. the images of gods, which were carried in the stern (cf. Verg. A. X. 171 aurato fulgebat Apolline puppis; Pers. 6. 30), have been dashed overboard in the storm.—iterum pressa malo, when again in distress.

11. Pontica: the woods of Pontus and Bithynia were famous for their excellent ship-timber. Cf. Cat. 4. 9 Ponticum sinum, | ubi iste post phaselus antea fuit | comata silva.

12. silvae filia: cf. Mart. XIV. 90. 1 silvae filia Maurae (of a table).

13. iactes: observe that this is the emphatic word of the verse, and inutile is only thrown in incidentally: boast as thou wilt of thy worthless pedigree and name.—genus et nomen: carrying out the fancy expressed in filia.

14. pictis: the after part of a ship was often richly decorated; cf. Seneca, Ep. 76. 13.

15. tu: cf. 9. 16 n, 11. 1.

* 16. debes, art bound to furnish (sc. by fate), art doomed to be (so that no effort can save thee).—

ludibrium, food for laughter.—cave: used absolutely (as in Epod. 6. 11), but the caution is expressed more fully below (vss. 19, 20).

17. nuper sollicitum, etc., whom I but lately looked upon with apprehension and disgust; i.e. disgust at the turn things had taken, and apprehension of worse results that might ensue. The allusion is to the time following the defeat of the republican army at Philippi, when Horace, whose whole heart was in the lost cause, could see in the triumph of its enemies nothing but the utter rottenness of politics; cf. Epodes 7 and 16.—quae: sc. eras.

18. nunc desiderium, etc., now my heart's desire and deep solicitude. Cf. Cic. Fam. XIV. 2. 2 (to Terentia) mea lux, meum desiderium; Cat. 2. 5; Verg. A. I. 678 puer, mea maxima cura.

19. nitentis, glistening; alluding to their marble-quarries. Cf. III. 28. 14 fulgentis Cycladas; Verg. A. III. 126 niveam Parum.

20. Cycladas: object of interfusa. The sea in the neighborhood of these islands, like the rest of the Aegean (cf. II. 16. 2, III. 29. 63, etc.), was subject to sudden and dangerous storms. The mention of these particular waters has no significance in the allegory (Intr. 117 a).

XV. The motive of this ode, according to Porphyrio, was borrowed from an ode of Bacchylides, in which Cassandra was represented as foretelling the events of the Trojan war. If so, Horace has improved upon his model by transferring the scene to the ship of Paris on his homeward voyage with Helen, and substituting for the Trojan prophetess the sea-god Nereus; for Paris is thus confronted with the disastrous consequences of his crime in the very hour of his triumph. — Metre, 172.

1. pastor: Paris, who was exposed in his infancy and brought up among the shepherds on Mt. Ida. So Phrygius pastor, Verg. A. VII. 363. — traheret, was carrying off.

2. Idaeis: i.e. built of wood from Mt. Ida. — perfidus hospitam: Intr. 116 a. No treachery could be more heinous than that of the man who used the sacred rights of hospitality to plot against his host.

3. ingrato, unwelcome (sc. to the winds). — obruit, smothered.

4. caneret, foretell; frequently used in this sense, oracles and prophecies being in metrical form. Cf. C. S. 25; Verg. A. II. 124.

5. Nereus: eldest of the sons of Pontus, father of Thetis and the other Nereids; always called in Homer the 'old man of the sea' (e.g. Il. I. 556 ἀλίοιο γέροντος), and never by name. Cf. Hes. Theog. 233 Νηρέα δ' ἀψευδέα καὶ ἀληθέα . . . καλέουσι γέροντα | οὐνεκα νημερτὴς τε καὶ ἥπιος. — malā avi: for malis auspiciis; cf. mala alite, Epod. 10. 1; bona alite, Cat. 61. 20. — dūcis (sc. eam) domum, thou art bringing home a bride.

6. multo milite: Intr. 127.

7. coniurata: referring probably not to the oath by which Tyndareus bound the suitors of Helen before her marriage, but to the league of the assembled chiefs at Aulis, alluded to in Verg. A. IV. 425 non ego cum Danais Troianam excindere gentem | Aulide iuravi. — rumpere, to break up. For the mood, see Intr. 94 f.

9. heu heu, ah me! The sympathy of the god is called forth by the actual vision which he has as a seer of the events foretold. The following scenes are all taken from the Iliad. — quantus equis, etc.: cf. Il. II. 388 ἰδρώσει μὲν τεν τελαμών . . . ἰδρώσει δὲ τεν ἵππος.

10. quanta moves funera, what a train of disaster . . . thou art starting. For the plural, see Intr. 128 and cf. 8. 15. — Dardanae: Intr. 65.

11. iam, even now. — Pallas, etc.: cf. Il. V. 719 sqq. — aegida: sometimes represented as the shield of Zeus, more commonly as the corselet of Athena (Il. V. 738). As such it appears in numerous statues of that goddess, — a coat of mail, with the head of the gorgon Medusa in the middle, as described by Verg. A. VIII. 435: aegidaque horrifera, turbatae Palladis arma, | certatim squamis serpentum auroque polibant | conexosque anguis, ipsamque in pectore divae | Gorgona, desecto vertentem lumina collo.

12. currus: Intr. 128. — et rabiem: added with powerful effect to complete the inventory of her outfit for battle; cf. Il. IV. 447 σύν ῥ' ἔβαλον ῥινούς σύν δ' ἔγχεα καὶ μένε' ἀνδρῶν.

13. nequiquam etc.: cf. the taunt of Hector, Il. III. 54 οὐκ ἄν τοι χαλίσμῃ κίθαρις τά τε δῶρ' Ἀφροδίτης | ἢ τε κόμη τό τε εἶδος, ὅτ' ἐν κονίῃσι μυγέῃς. — ferox, emboldened. The phrase suggests a scornful contrast with genuine courage.

14. grata feminis: contemptuous, like imbelli cithara and thalamo, below.

15. imbelli cithara: cf. imbellis lyrae, 6. 10. — divides, wilt sing to the accompaniment of. The word, which is nowhere else used in this sense, is apparently intended to express the effect of the instrumental accompaniment in marking the parts or measures of the air. Others, however, suppose that Horace had in mind the division into strophes by interludes on the lute.

16. thalamo: see Intr. 69. and cf. Il. III. 380 τὸν δ' (sc. Paris) ἐξήρπαξ' Ἀφροδίτῃ | καδ' δ' εἶς' ἐν θαλάμῳ εὐώδει, κηῶντι.

17. Cnosii: Intr. 117 a. The Cretans were famous archers, and Cnosus was one of their principal towns; cf. Verg. A. V. 306 Cnosia spicula.

18. vitabis, wilt thou stay . . . out of the way of. — sequi: Intr. 101 b.

19. Aiacem: the son of Oileus (Ὀϊλῆος ταχὺς Αἴας, Il. II. 527). — serus, though long deferred the day will come when. Cf. III. II. 28 sera fata. For the adjective used to express time, cf. 2. 45, Ep. II. 1. 161. — adulteros crinis: Intr. 124.

21. Laertiaden: Ulysses. — exitium tuæ gentis: to the shrewdness of Ulysses, culminating in the seizure of the Palladium, the success of the Greeks was held to be chiefly due. Cf. Ep. I. 2. 18 Vlixen, qui, domitor Troiae, etc., a free translation of the opening lines of the Odyssey.

22. non respicis, seest thou not behind thee? cf. Verg. A. VIII. 697 necdum geminos a tergo respicit anguis. The god in his vision sees the dangers of the battle-field already close upon the unconscious Paris.

24. Teucer: see 7. 21 n. — Sthenelus: charioteer of Diomed.

25. sive: Intr. 119 d.

26. Merionen: see 6. 15 n.

27. reperire: Intr. 94 c.

28. Tydides: cf. 6. 15 n. — melior patre: i.e. as a warrior; suggested by the saying of Sthenelus, Il. IV. 405 ἡμεῖς τοι πατέρων μέγ' ἀμείλινους εὐχόμεθ' εἶναι.

29. cervus uti, etc.: sc. fugit, of which lupum is the object. — in altera parte, (on the other side of), across; i.e. without waiting for him to come near.

30. visum, at the sight of. — graminis immemor: a further touch to indicate the fright of the stag.

31. sublimi anhelitu, panting with head high in air. This description properly belongs to the stag; the comparison and its subject are purposely confused; Intr. 123. — mollis, faint heart.

32. non hoc, etc.: i.e. something very different from this (litotes). With this final touch of scorn the god dismisses Paris, and closes his prophecy with the fate of Troy itself. — tuæ: cf. tuo, 25. 7.

- Iracunda diem proferet Ilio matronisque Phrygum classis Achillei:
 35 post certas hiemes uret Achaicus ignis Iliacas domos.'

XVI.

O matre pulchra filia pulchrior, quem criminosis cumque voles modum

33. iracunda classis: see Intr. 105 a. The followers of Achilles, who shared the inactivity of their chief, are regarded as sharing the wrath to which it was due.—diem proferet, will put off the day, i.e. the day of doom, already foreshadowed in vss. 8 and 21.

34. matronisque Phrygum: not strictly necessary after the comprehensive Ilio, but added to lend a touch of pathos to the otherwise colorless statement, by recalling the class of persons on whom the calamity will bring the most intense suffering; cf. I. 24, 35. 11 n.—Phrygum: for Trojan, as in II. 9. 16; cf. Verg. A. I. 182, etc.—Achillei: for the form, cf. Vlixæi, 6. 7 n.

35. post certas hiemes, when the predestined number of winters is past, i.e. in the fullness of time. Observe the asyndeton and the emphatic position of these words. The preceding sentence is not concessive, but the two together sum up, in its successive stages, the course of the war which is to come. Translated into prose the thought is: For a time internal dissension will paralyze the Greek and the doom of Troy will be withheld; when the appointed hour is come, he will burn the city. For hiemes cf. II. 4 n.

36. Iliacas: this reading of all the MSS. has been questioned for two reasons: (1) because of Ilio in 33, and (2) on account of the trochee ignīs, which violates a rule elsewhere strictly observed by Horace (see Intr. 146 b, 147). The second objection may be explained on the supposition that in this, which is probably one of his early odes, Horace followed his Greek models, and allowed himself a liberty which he subsequently refrained from using. The first objection has some weight, but no substitute for Iliacas is offered by any authority. Conjectures such as Pergameas, Dardanias, barbaricas have been adopted by various editors.

XVI. The inscription in the manuscripts, Pulinodia, indicates the nature of this ode, in which the poet represents himself as having given vent to his anger against his mistress in some verses which he now begs her to destroy and forget. The fact that he calls the offending verses iambi, his own name for the Epodes (Ep. I. 19. 23, II. 2. 59), gives some color to the supposition that here for once Horace is dealing with a definite experience of his own. But the humorous extravagance

pones iambis, sive flamma sive mari libet Hadriano.

- 5 Non Dindymene, non adytis quatit mentem sacerdotum incola Pythius, non Liber aequae, non acuta sic geminant Corybantes aera with which he urges the lady to calm her mind and dilates on the dreadful effects of anger is hardly to be taken as the expression of genuine repentance. In any case the ode cannot be connected with any of the extant Epodes.—Metre, 176.

2. criminosus, abusive.—cumque: cf. 6. 3 n.—modum pones, you shall put an end to. The context gives the future a half-concessive, half-hortatory force; Intr. 79, 90.

3. iambis: a rapid rhythm (cf. vs. 24 and Ep. II. 3. 251 iambus, pes citus) well adapted for invective, a use to which it was said to have been turned by its reputed inventor Archilochus (Ep. II. 3. 79 Archilochum proprio rabies armavit iambo; see Intr. 18).

4. mari Hadriano: Intr. 117 a. The language is purposely exaggerated, as if we should say, 'You may fling them into the middle of the Atlantic.'

5. non, etc.: the poet proceeds to discourse with humorous irony on the overmastering force of anger, which unbalances the intellect of man and drives him irresistibly upon a course of slaughter and destruction. It is first compared with the religious frenzy exhibited in the worship of certain divinities.—Dindymene: i.e. Cybele, identified with Rhea, the mother of Zeus. Dindymus was a mountain in Phrygia, near Pessinus, one of the principal seats of the worship of Cybele, whose rites were celebrated with the wildest orgies, the priests in their frenzy often slashing themselves with knives. Cf. Catullus 63.—adytis, in the sanctuary, in contrast with the mountains and woods where Cybele and Bacchus exercise their power. For the abl. see Intr. 69.

6. incola Pythius, he that dwelleth in Pytho, i.e. Apollo, Pytho being the ancient name of Delphi. The frenzy of the priestess of Apollo (the Cumaeen sibyl), when possessed by the oracular spirit of the god, is described by Vergil, A. VI. 46 sqq.

7. Liber: alluding to the orgiastic rites practiced by the bacchanals, under the overpowering inspiration, as they claimed, of the god. Cf. II. 19. 5 sqq.—aequae, as much, completing the predicate, non aequae mentem sacerdotum quatit, which is distributed, in Horace's favorite manner, among the three subjects; Intr. 120. The place of ac, which would naturally follow aequae, is supplied by ut, vs. 9, the change being due to the intervening sic, vs. 8.—acuta, shrill.

8. sic, with such effect, sc. in exciting the mind.—geminant, clash together; lit. put together in pairs. Cf. Stat. Theb. VIII. 221 gemina aera sonant.—Corybantes: priests of Cybele.—aera: i.e. cymbals, used by the Corybantes in their rites.

9. tristes ut irae, as unhappy anger has. The predicate to be supplied, however, is mentem quatunt or the like, expressing the general sense of the preceding strophe, which is implied even in sic, on which ut grammatically depends. — irae: Intr. 128. — Noricus: Intr. 117. The iron foundries in Noricum are alluded to by Ovid, M. XIV. 712 durior et ferro quod Noricus excoquit ignis.

10. deterret: i.e. from pursuing its course of vengeance. — ensis, mare, ignis: stock examples of obstacles; cf. S. I. 1. 38: cum te neque fervidus aestus | demoveat lucro, neque hiems ignis mare ferrum, | nil obstat tibi.

12. Iuppiter: cf. Iove, I. 25 n. — ruens, descending, i.e. in thunder and lightning.

13. fertur, we are told that. — Prometheus: the myth of the creation of man and the other animals from clay and water by Prometheus, though unknown to Homer and Hesiod, was very old (cf. Plato, Protag. 320 D). In its present form, however, it is not found in any other author now extant, though the notion of man being endowed with the qualities of various other animals, — the cunning of the fox, the timidity of the hare, etc., — occurs very early. — principi, first, original, that of which the first man was created.

14. particulam: that a material portion is meant, and not a portion of the soul (as S. II. 2. 79), is shown by desectam. The idea seems to be that each of the animals had been created by mixing with the clay out of which it was shaped a certain material which gave it its peculiar disposition, but that when he came to the creation of man, Prometheus was obliged, in order to obtain the requisite amount, to take from each of the animals which he had already created (undique) a portion of its predisposing substance.

16. stomacho: i.e. to the organ which is the seat of our passion (cf. 6. 6 n) was added, among other elements (et), a particle taken from the lion, bringing with it the violence of his rage.

17. irae: repeated from vs. 9. — Thyesten: son of Pelops and brother of Atreus, whose vengeance took the monstrous form of a supper at which Thyestes was induced to eat unawares the flesh of his own son. — exitio, e.c.: this part of the myth has not come down to us. It was probably familiar to Horace and his readers from the Thyestes of Varius, recently published.

18. altis: a frequent poetical epithet of cities, denoting lofty walls and buildings, and hence implying power and splendor; cf. IV. 6. 3; Verg. A. I. 7 altae moenia Romae. — urbibus: virtually dative of possessor (see note on stetere), anticipating the subject of the interrogative clause. — ultimae, primary, the last reached in tracing backwards the series of results; cf. Cat. 4. 15 ultima ex origine.

19. stetere: more expressive than fuere, implying the persistent efficacy of the cause.

20. imprimeretque muris, etc.: amplification of funditus, to illustrate how far the victor is carried in his rage. To drive a plow over the ruins of a city as the Romans did in the case of Carthage (Momm- sen Hist. III. p. 54), was to proclaim its absolute and final effacement.

21. hostile aratrum: Intr. 124. — insolens: cf. 5. 8 n. For the caesura of this verse, see Intr. 155.

22. compesce mentem: the moral of his discourse, which was therefore meant as a warning to the lady, and not an apology for his own indulgence in anger. That, he goes on to say (me quoque, etc.), is a thing of the past.

23. temptavit, attacked (as a disease); cf. Ep. I. 6. 28 si latus aut renes morbo temptantur acuto. — dulci: not an idle epithet. The fervor pectoris was one phase of the strong passions and quick impulses that made life so sweet at that time.

24. celeris iambos: see vs. 3 n.

25. mitibus . . . tristia, kind feelings . . . bitterness. For the use of the neuter plural cf. ima summis, 34. 12 n; for the construction see Intr. 74, and cf. 17. 1 sq.

26. mutare: Intr. 94 c.

27. recantatis, now that I have retracted; the verb being here used as a translation of παλινφθεῖν. — amica, friendly.

28. animum reddas, give me back your heart. Cf. 19. 4.

XVII. On the attractions of his Sabine farm, with an invitation to a fair friend, whom he calls Tyndaris, to visit him there and enjoy with him the quiet country pleasures which it affords. — Metre, 176.

1. Lucretilem: Intr. 24.

2. mutat: see Intr. 74 and cf. 16. 25. — Lycae: a mountain range near the southern border of Arcadia. — Faunus: an old Italian divinity, still worshipped in the country, sometimes as a benevolent god of woods and pastures (cf. III. 18), sometimes as a prophetic spirit who secluded himself in the forest, from which his loud voice occasionally resounded, filling all who heard it with terror and foreboding (Cic. Div. I. 101., D. N. II. 6, III. 15; cf. Liv. II. 7. 2). The Arcadian Pan, the son of Hermes, with whom Faunus was identified in literature, was also a spirit of the hills and woods, who punished men that disturbed his midday sleep (Theocr. I. 15) by frightening them out of their senses with demoniacal cries (hence the expression 'panic fear'); but in general he was a merry spirit, always accompanied by dancing and singing nymphs, to whom he played on his marvelous pipe, while the shepherds down in the valley listened in spell-bound silence or terror (Mart. IX. 61. 12).

3. defendit, wards off. — aestatem: i.e. heat. — capellis: dative; cf. Verg. E. 7. 47 solstitium pecori defendite. Gr. 229 c.

5. impune, with impunity; referring to deviae, which implies a neglect of the precautions ordinarily necessary to keep them from harm. — arbutos: see I. 21 n.

6. quaerunt deviae, stray . . . in search of. — latentis: i.e. easily escaping notice among the other trees and bushes.

7. olentis uxores mariti, the wives of the unfragrant spouse. — mariti: sc. gregis; a common way of designating the male animal. Cf. Verg. E. 7. 7 vir gregis ipse caper; Theocr. 8. 49 & τράγε, τῶν λευκᾶν αἰγῶν ἀνερ.

9. Martialis: i.e. sacred to Mars; cf. Martius lupus, Verg. Aen. IX. 566, and the story of the birth of Romulus and Remus. — haediliae (sc. metuunt), the kids. The word does not occur elsewhere, but this interpretation of it as a diminutive form from haedus is supported by the parallel form porcilia, from porcus. The old hypothesis, that Haedilia was the name of a place in the neighborhood, rejected by Bentley, is still maintained by some editors.

10. utcumque: always temporal in Horace. With the perfect definite, here and IV. 4. 35, it introduces a determining circumstance, like simul (e.g. 9. 9). — fistula, with his pipe. Fistula is the Latin name for the Greek σύριγξ, Pan's pipe. Cf. Tib. II. 5. 31 fistula, cui semper decrescit harundinis ordo; | nam calamus cera iungitur usque minor; and Verg. E. 3. 25.

11. Vsticae: said by Porphyrio to be a hill or mountain of gentle slope (cubantis) in the neighborhood of the Sabine farm.

12. personuere, have rung; perfect, because the strains of the fistula, once heard, are an assurance of the presence of the god, inspiring the animals with the feeling of security described. The music is not thought of as continuing.

14. musa: see note on Clio, II. 2. — copia: not personified as in C. S. 60 and Ep. I. 12. 29, where Plenty is the goddess who showers blessings from her overflowing horn. Here, as in the oldest Greek conception of the 'horn of plenty' (the horn of Amalthea, the nurse of Zeus, taken by Hercules from the river-god Acheloos), copia is the contents of the horn, which was represented as in the possession of various divinities, Demeter, Dionysus, Fortuna (Tyche), Autumnus, etc.

15. benigno: cf. 9. 6 n.

16. honorum, the glories, i.e. fruits, vegetables, flowers; cf. S. II. 5. 12 dulcia poma | et quoscumque feret cultus tibi fundus honores. For the case, see Intr. 66 c.

17. Caniculae, the Dog-star; properly the constellation of the Lesser Dog, which the Greeks called Προκύων (cf. III. 29. 17 n) as rising before the (Greater) Dog; but the name was popularly applied to Sirius, the chief star of the Greater Dog, whose rising, July 26, heralded the hot season. Cf. III. 13. 9, S. II. 5. 39.

18. aestus: Intr. 128. — fide Teia: i.e. in love songs, such as those of Anacreon, who was a

A.* II. 540 at non Achilles | talis in hoste fuit Priamo; Epod. 11. 4; Cat. 64. 98 in flavo hospite suspirantem; translate for. — uno: Ulysses.

20. vitream, crystal, suggesting a brilliant, dazzling beauty; cf. 19. 5 Glyceræ nitor splendentis Pario marmore purius and III. 13. 1 splendidior vitro. The Romans, though they used glass very little for their windows, on account of its expensiveness, were very skilful in working it for artistic purposes — vases, ornaments, imitations of precious stones, etc. The epithet is perhaps applied to her as a sea-goddess; cf. IV. 2. 3 vitreo ponto and Epod. 13. 16 mater caerulea (Thetis). — Circen: Odys. X. 274 sqq.

21. innocentis: i.e. not intoxicating, as explained in the next clause. — Lesbii: one of the sweeter Greek wines.

22. duces, you shall quaff. For the tense, cf. 16. 3 n. — nec Semeleius, etc.: i.e. nor will there be any quarrelling over the cups, as there is in the companies where she meets his rival. — Semeleius, the son of Semele; cf. Cat. 61. 225 Telemacho Penelopeo.

23. confundet proelia: a variation of the ordinary committere proelia, to express a disorderly squabble. — Thyoneus: a name of Bacchus meaning 'son of the raving one,' (Θυώνη; cf. θύω). The latter name was very early applied to Semele; cf. Hom. Hym. to Dionys. (34) 21 σύν μητρὶ Σεμέλῃ ἥνπερ καλέουσι Θυώνην.

25. suspecta: because of his jealousy. — male, very; see 9. 24 n.

26. incontinentis manus: cf. 13. 9 n, and see Intr. 124.

27. coronam: cf. 4. 10 n.

28. crinibus: probably dative, as S. I. 10. 49 haerentem capiti multa cum laude coronam; but see Intr. 71. — immeritam: i.e. having done nothing to deserve such treatment.

Nullam, Vare, sacra vite prius severis arborem circa mite solum Tiburis et moenia Catili.

Siccis omnia nam dura deus proposuit neque mordaces aliter diffugiunt sollicitudines.

5 Quis post vina gravem militiam aut pauperiem crepat?

XVIII. On the blessings of wine when used with moderation, and the folly and sin of intemperance. The ode appears to be a translation, with a few touches to give it a local setting, of a poem of Alcaeus, in the same metre, of which the first verse is preserved (Fr. 44):

Μηδὲν ἄλλο φυτεύσῃς πρότερον δένδριον ἀμπέλω.

The Varus addressed is probably the literary critic, Quintilius Varus, whose death is mourned in Ode 24.—Metre, 170.

1. sacra: sc. to Bacchus. The word sets the tone of the ode at the outset: wine is not for the mere pleasure of our palate; it is a divine gift, the abuse of which will be punished as sin.—severis, plant; cf. Caecilius ap. Cic. C. M. 24 serit arbores quae saeculo prosint alteri.—arborem: cf. δένδριον, intr. note, and Plin. N. H. XIV. 9 vites iure apud priscos magnitudine quoque inter arbores numerabantur.

2. circa, about; used in different senses, as the English word may be, with its two objects: with solum, equivalent to 'here and there in,' with moenia, 'in the neighborhood of.'—mite, mellow, i.e. light and crumbling, yielding readily to the plough. Such soil was suitable for the vine

(Verg. G. II. 226 sqq.).—Tiburis: it would seem that Varus had a country place there.—moenia Catili: see 7. 13 n. With the name of Catillus (Verg. A. VII. 672) Horace has allowed himself a Homeric license; cf. Ἀχιλλεύς, Ἀχιλεὺς, e.g. Il. I. 148, 199.

3. siccis: i.e. those who abstain; cf. IV. 5. 39, Ep. I. 19. 9.—omnia dura, only the hard side of life; dura has a predicate force, expressing the aspect under which everything is presented.—nam: Intr. 114.—deus: cf. 3. 21 n.

4. aliter, in any other way; used illogically, as if the preceding statement had been put in the converse form: all things are softened to those who drink wine.

5. gravem militiam, the hardships of a soldier's life. This topic would hardly have occurred to Horace, who had seen nothing of war for a dozen years; it is no doubt taken from the ode of Alcaeus; cf. 32. 5 sqq.—crepat, prattles; cf. Ep. I. 7. 84 sulcos et vineta crepat merra. The word simply means rattling on, as men do when their tongue is loosened by wine, about subjects fit or unfit (Ep. I. 7. 72), and is to be understood in this sense in the next verse. The censure is directed against the depressing topics of conversation, and not specially against the manner of talking.

Quis non te potius, Bacche pater, teque, decens Venus?
 Ac ne quis modici transiliat munera Liberi, Centaurea monet cum Lapithis rixa super mero debellata, monet Sithoniis non levis Euhius, 10 cum fas atque nefas exiguo fine libidinum discernunt avidi. Non ego te, candide Bassareu, invitum quatiā nec variis obsita frondibus

6. te potius, etc.: i.e. of the brighter side of life, — its joys and solaces, rather than of its troubles. — Bacche, Venus: cf. 19. 2 n, 32. 9. — pater: a title of reverence (cf. 2. 50 n) suited to the character of benefactor, in which Bacchus is here invoked; cf. III. 3. 13, Ep. II. 1. 5 Liber pater. — decens: cf. 4. 6 n.

7. ac, and yet, qualifying the preceding recommendation of wine. For this use of ac cf. S. II. 2. 118, Ep. II. 1. 208. — ne quis transiliat, against a reckless use of. — munera Liberi: not simply wine, but wine as Liber designed it, for the good of mankind. The condition imposed in his design is expressed in modici. With munera thus limited the poet uses transiliat, go beyond, with the implication of recklessness, as in 3. 42.

8. Centaurea, of the Centaurs. At the wedding of Pirithous, king of the Lapithae, with Hippodamia, Eurytion, one of the Centaurs, who were present as guests, attempted in his drunkenness to carry off the bride. The battle that ensued became a famous subject in literature (cf. Odys. XXI. 295, Ov. M. XII. 210) and in art (as in the metopes of the Parthenon and in the pediment of the temple at Olympia). — monet, there is warning in. — super: cf. 9. 5 n.

9. debellata: the contest ended in the extirpation of the Centaurs

(II. I. 267), a result which, in the form of the myth which Horace follows, took place then and there (super mero). — Sithoniis; a Thracian tribe, used here for the Thracians in general. — non levis, the severity of; Intr. 105 a. The allusion is to the bloody quarrels over their wine for which they were notorious (cf. I. 27. 1 sq.), and which are here represented as punishments inflicted by the god. — Euhius: a name of Bacchus, formed from εὐοί (cf. II. 19. 5), the cry of the bacchantes.

10. exiguo, faint, scarcely perceptible, instead of the broad and distinct line that separates right and wrong in the mind of one whose moral perceptions are unclouded. — fine libidinum, the line which appetite draws; cf. III. 24. 44 virtutis viam (the path that virtue prescribes); S. I. 1. 50 naturae finis (the limits that nature sets).

11. avidī, in their strong craving. — non ego te: this is the usual order where non and ego are both emphatic; cf. 23. 9, II. 7. 26, 17. 9, S. I. 1. 103, etc. — candide, radiant; of the ever youthful beauty of the god (cf. candide Bacche, Ov. F. III. 772; candida Dido, Verg. A. V. 571), in accordance with the ordinary Greek conception, yet not inconsistent with the more serious character attributed to him here. — Bassareu: a name of Bacchus said to be de-sub divum rapiam. Saeva tene cum Berecyntio

15 et tollens vacuum plus nimio gloria verticem arcanique fides prodiga, perlucidior vitro.

rived from βασσάρα, a fox-skin, worn by the Thracian bacchantes, hence called Βασσαρίδες. Under this name he was represented with a beard and the features of mature age (Macrob. Sat. I. 18. 9).

12. quatiam, rouse. — variis obsita frondibus, the mysteries enveloped in divers leaves (especially grape and ivy); alluding to the caskets containing mysterious symbols carried in bacchanalian processions. See the vivid description in Catullus, 64. 254 sqq. Under the figure of respect for these mysteries the poet professes his own resolution to conform to the will of the god, and again deprecates intemperate indulgence.

13. sub divum, to light; cf. sub Iove I. 25 n. — saeva, barbarous. — Berecyntio cornu: named from Berecyntus, one of the mountains in Phrygia on which the orgies of Cybele were celebrated, and therefore belonging, like the tympana (vs. 14), tambourines (cf. Cat. 63. 21), to the worship of that goddess; but the orgies of the two divinities were always more or less confused with one another. See III. 19. 19 n.

14. quae subsequitur: keeping up the figure, the qualities that follow being personified in the bacchanals who march behind this wild music.

15. tollens verticem: cf. I. 36. — plus nimio, all too high; a colloquial expression (cf. Cic. Att. X. 8 A. 1 quia te nimio plus diligo), in Horace always used of censurable excess (33. 1, Ep. I. 10. 30). — gloria, vainglory, vanity, as in Ep. I. 18. 22 gloria quem supra viris et vestit et ungit.

16. arcanique fides prodiga: see 5. 5 n. — perlucidior: i.e. with no more power of concealment, a familiar result of intoxication; cf. the practice of the Germans described by Tacitus, Ger. 22. For the peculiar caesura of this verse, see Intr. 150. — vitro: see note on vitream, 17. 20.

XIX. The poet will have us believe that he has once again had to surrender to the charms of a fair girl, when he thought his days of love were over long ago. — Metre, 171.

1. Cupidinum: the original conception of Eros as the one son of Aphrodite was later enlarged by poets and artists, who represented numberless Loves, all in the shape of pretty winged boys, in attendance on Aphrodite, and sometimes on Bacchus. See Preller-Robert, Gr. Myth. I. p. 507.

2. Semelae puer: cf. Semeleius, 17. 22. Here, in contrast

- 15 bimi cum patera meri:
 mactata veniet lenior hostia.

with the last ode, he is the youthful Bacchus (puer), the companion of Venus. Cf. 32. 9.

4. animum reddere: cf. 16. 28 n.

5. nitor, the beauty. Cf. nites, 5. 13.

6. splendentis purius, who shines with purer lustre. — Pario: from Paros, one of the nitentes Cyclades (14. 20), preferred for sculpture on account of its fineness and purity.

8. et voltus, etc., and her too dazzling face. — lubricus adspici: i.e. on which one's glance can no more rest steadily than one's foot upon a slippery surface. For the infinitive, see Intr. 102.

9. tota, with all her force. — ruens: cf. 16. 12.

10. Cyprum: cf. 3. 1, 30. 2. — Scythas, Parthum: subjects of national importance that engage the public attention. Cf. 26. 5 n.

11. animosum: in contrast with versis equis (Intr. 116 a), which ordinarily indicates fear or cowardice. The allusion is to the favorite stratagem of the Parthian cavalry, of turning suddenly while in full retreat and sending a shower of arrows in the face of the pursuing enemy; cf. Verg. G. III. 31.

12. quae nihil attinent, any such irrelevant subject; a delicious touch of feminine assumption.

13. hic . . . hic: Intr. 116 g. The case calls for immediate attention; a sacrifice must be instituted on the spot. — vivum caespitem: often used for a temporary altar; cf. III. 8. 4.

14. verbenas, green sprigs (of certain sacred trees and plants, here probably myrtle). — pueri: i.e. slaves (not necessarily young); the usual term in addressing them; cf. 38. 1.

15. patera: a saucer-shaped vessel with a handle, used especially for libations. — meri: in its literal sense, only unmixed wine being permitted for this purpose.

16. veniet lenior: in contrast conditum levi, datus in theatro cum tibi plausus,

- 5 care Maecenas eques, ut paterni fluminis ripae simul et iocosa with tota ruens, 9.—hostia: victims were sometimes sacrificed to Venus (Plaut. Poen. 449 sqq., Tac. H. II. 3), but her sacrifices were commonly bloodless.

XX. To Maecenas, in anticipation of a visit from him, perhaps at the poet's country place (Intr. 24). The ode lacks the usual finish of Horace's lyric works, and if genuine,—which some even of the more conservative editors doubt,—must be regarded as a hasty and informal production, preserved only for the sake of the allusion in vss. 3 sqq. The abrupt beginning may be explained on the supposition that the poem is an answer to a note from Maecenas, announcing his intended visit.—Metre, 174.

1. vile, plain, in contrast with the fine and costly brands mentioned in the last strophe.—modicis, modest, referring not so much to the size of the cups as to the quality of their contents. Cf. S. II. 6. 70 modicis (sc. poculis) uvescit laetius, where it is contrasted with acria pocula; S. I. 5. 2 hospitio modico; Ep. I. 5. 2 modica cenare patella.—Sabinum (sc. vinum): the wine of the district; cf. 9. 7 n. According to Ep. I. 14. 23, it could not have been produced on his own place.

2. cantharis, bowls. The cantharus was a large cup with handles, said to have been named for its inventor.—Graeca testa: i.e. a jar which, having contained Greek wine, would improve the flavor of the Sabine put into it. For the case of testa see Intr. 69.—ipse, with my own hands.

3. conditum levi, stored and sealed. The cork of the amphora was smeared with pitch to make it air-tight; cf. III. 8. 10.—datus: sc. est.—theatro: probably that of Pompey, the only permanent theatre existing in Rome at the time. It stood in the Campus Martius, about a thousand feet from the river.

4. cum, at the time when. See Intr. 114.—plausus: the occasion, as appears from II. 17. 22 sqq., was the first public appearance of Maecenas after a serious illness, probably in B.C. 30. The date of this ode must be set some years later.

5. care: cf. dilecte Maecenas, II. 20. 7.—eques: Intr. 21.—paterni fluminis: the Tiber, as rising in Etruria (amnis Tuscus, S. II. 2. 32), the home of Maecenas' ancestors.

6. riparae: the plural for one side of the river only, as Aen. VI. 305. See Intr. 128.—iocosa imago: cf. 12. 3 n.

7. redderet, repeated. — Vaticanī montis: here used for the whole range of hills along the west bank of the Tiber, rising to a height of over 250 feet above the river. The part opposite the theatre of Pompey was called Ianiculum. Echoes from the steep slopes of this hill were no doubt familiar to the Romans, but Horace's introduction of them here is purely ornamental. The applause in the theatre, could not possibly have been so reëchoed. The short i of Vaticanus is peculiar to Horace.

9. Caecubum, etc.: fine wines of Latium and Campania respectively, standing for rich wines in general (Intr. 117 a). — domitam, crushed.

10. tu bibes: sc. at home; not the simple future, like potabis, vs. 1, but with a concessive-hortatory force, brought out by the antithesis of tu and mea; see Intr. 79. — Falernae . . . Formiani: again a choice Campanian and a choice Latin wine, from the same districts respectively as the Calenian and the Caecuban. They therefore repeat, with variation of form, the same general idea.

11. temperant, flavor; lit. 'mix' (in due proportion), as Epod. 17. 80; hence 'determine the quality of.' Observe that the subject is not the wine but the vines and the hills.

XXI. An ode in honor of Apollo and Diana, — especially the former as the patron god of Augustus, — in the form of an address to a chorus of boys and girls employed in some festival of these divinities. It may be compared with the latter part of IV. 6 (vss. 31 sqq.) addressed to the chorus that sang the Carmen Saeculare, and with Catullus 34. — Metre, 173.

1. Dīanam: Intr. 178. — dicite: cf. 6. 5 n.

2. intonsum: as possessed of eternal youth, Apollo was represented with a beardless face (lēvis, IV. 6. 28) and long golden locks (ἀκεοσεκόμης, II. XX. 39; ὁ χρυσοκόμας, Pind. Ol. 7. 58). Cf. Tib. I. 4. 37 solis aeterna est Phoebus Bacchoque iuventa, | nam decet in tonsus crinis utrumque deum, and II. 5. 121. — Cynthium: Apollo; so named from the hill Cynthus, in Delos, where Apollo and Diana were born. The latter is for the same reason often called Cynthia, as III. 28. 12.

3. Latonam: to be included in the hymn as the mother of the twin deities.

5. vos: sc. dicite; addressed to the girls, as mares, 10, shows. — fluviis, etc.: cf. Verg. A. I. 498 qualis in Eurotae ripis aut per iuga Cynthi | exercet Diana choros, etc. — coma, the tresses, i.e. the foliage, as in IV. 7. 2.

6. prominet, tower aloft. — Algido: the range of hills between Tuscum and the Via Latina, north of the Alban mount, being the northern member of the semi-circular range that encloses that extinct volcano. The whole range, which was thickly wooded and cool in comparison with the surrounding plain (hence the name Algidus and the epithet gelido; cf. nivali III. 23. 9), was regarded as a favorite haunt of Diana (quae tenet Algidum, C. S. 69), and at its southern extremity, near Aricia, there was a famous grove and altar of the goddess (Diana Nemo-rensis; cf. Ep. II. 3. 16). For the case see Intr. 69.

7. nigris: referring rather to the color of the leaves than to the thickness of the foliage. See note on viridis, 8. — aut: Intr. 114. — Erymanthi: a mountain on the north-western borders of Arcadia, a famous hunting ground of Artemis (Odys. VI. 103).

8. silvis, in the forests, of which the nemora (open woods and glades) are a part. — viridis: the lighter color of deciduous trees in contrast with the dark evergreens (nigris) of Erymanthus; cf. IV. 12. 11 nigri colles Arcadiae; though not belonging grammatically to silvis, it supplants the epithet nigris, and silvis alone is understood with Gragi. — Gragi: a mountain range (Kpáγos; cf. Agri-gentum for Ακράγας) on the western coast of Lycia, the seat of some of the oldest legends of Latona and her children.

9. Tempe: see 7. 4 n. Here Apollo was purified after slaying the Python, and here an altar marked the spot where he plucked the laurel branch with which he returned to establish his oracle at Delphi.

10. natalem Delon: see note on Cynthium, 2.

12. fraterna: as a present from Mercury; cf. 10. 12 n. — umerum: object of tollite; cf. III. 28. 9 cantabimus Neptunum et Nereidum comas. Some editors take it as

- Hic bellum lacrimosum, hic miseram famem pestemque a populo et principe Caesare in 15 Persas atque Britannos vestra motus aget prece.

an accusative of specification with insignem, which would then stand for eum qui insignis est (cf. laetam, 5); but it is very doubtful whether Horace ever used a masculine accusative, in this construction, with an adjective; see Intr. 44.

13. hic, etc.: an extension of his functions as ἀλεξίκακος, or defender against plague; cf. Preller-Robert, Gr. Mythol. I., p. 276.

14. principe: see 2. 50 n.

15. Persas: see 2. 22 n. — Britannos: cf. III. 5. 3, where they are coupled, as here, with the Parthians as not yet vanquished foes of Rome.

XXII. Aristius Fuscus, to whom this ode is addressed, was a man who dearly loved his joke, as appears from the part he took in Horace's famous encounter with the bore, S. I. 9. 61 sqq.; and Horace was in thorough sympathy with him (paene gemelli, fraternis animis, Ep. I. 10. 1 sqq.; cf. also S. I. 10. 83). Fuscus therefore could not have been misled by the high moral tone in which this ode opens, only to be puzzled by the somewhat flippant anticlimax at the end. No one who has learned to know Horace in the Satires could for a moment suppose that he would seriously propound the extravagant sentiment in the first two strophes, much less that he would seriously point to himself as an example of such lofty virtue. The incident of the third strophe was probably real, and our ode has no higher purpose than to tell his friend the story with a mock-serious moral attached. — Metre, 174.

of that name, but the adjacent coast of Libya, east of the province of Africa; a district infested with wild beasts and poisonous serpents (Plin. N. H. V. 26.)—iter facturum (sc. est): Intr. 120.—aestu-osas, sweltering; cf. aestuosae Calabriae, 31. 5.

7. fabulosus, storied, i.e. rich in legends.

9. me silva lupus: observe the skilful arrangement. The first three words set before us the scene and the two characters in their actual order, the poet's light-hearted unconcern before the encounter, the quick dénouement, and the impression left behind by the retreating monster. See, further, Intr. 112.

10. Lalagen: the name (λαλαγή, 'prattle') is paraphrased in dulce loquentem, vs. 24. The accusative of the theme of song is usual after cantare; cf. 6. 17 sqq.

11. terminum: apparently that of his own farm. He had strolled away deeper into the forest.—curis expeditis: for the usual curis expeditus, as if the cares were fettered to the man instead of the man by the cares. Cf. Epod. 13. 5 obducta solvatur fronte senectus;

Cat. 31. 7 *o quid solutis est be-

12. fugit inermem: Intr. 116 a.

13. quale portentum: i.e. tale portentum (nom., in apposition with lupus) quale (acc.).—militaris: i.e. producing good soldiers;
cf. III. 5. 9.

14. Daunias: Apulia, so named from a mythical king Daunus (III.
30. 11 n, IV. 14. 26), who ruled over the northern part of the country. In the Aeneid he is the father of Turnus (X. 616); elsewhere the father-in-law of the exiled Diomed.
In form the word is a Greek feminine adjective, like 'Ιλιάς, 'Αμυρακιάς, etc. That Apulia was infested with wolves appears also from 33.
7 sq.

15. Iubae tellus: Mauretania.
The younger Juba, here referred to, had lived in Rome in Horace's time, having come there as a captive after the battle of Thapsus, in which his father fought against Caesar. He was made king of Mauretania by Augustus in B.C. 25.

17. pone: equivalent to a condition.—pigris, sluggish, with no quickening power for vegetation.—
nulla arbor recreatur: i.e. there is no summer breeze and hence no tree or shrub (cf. 18. 1 n).

19. quod latus, etc.: cf. quale portentum, 13 n. — latus mundi: in accordance with the Roman conception of the earth as a flat surface; cf. Tac. Agr. 12. The far North is the 'side' referred to. — malus, unkind.

20. Iuppiter: cf. I. 25 n. — urget, broods over.

21. sub curru, etc.: i.e. in the far South. — nimium propinqui where he is all too near.

23. dulce: Intr. 48.

XXIII. The comparison which forms the substance of this pretty ode is found in a fragment of Anacreon (52):

Ἀγανῶς οἷά τε νεβρὸν νεοθηλέα γαλαθηνόν, ὅστ' ἐν ὕλῃ κεροέσσης ἀπολειφθεὶς ὑπὸ μητρὸς ἐπτοήθη· and we probably have here another of Horace's early studies. The name Chloe (χλόη, 'a young shoot') is perhaps chosen to suit the character portrayed. — Metre, 173.

2. quaerenti: i.e. having strayed away or been left behind, and suddenly found herself alone. — pavidam, timid, enhancing the impression of the timorous nature of the fawn. — aviis, lonely.

3. non sine: a favorite litotes with Horace; cf. 25. 16, III. 4. 20, etc.

4. siluae: see Intr. 182.

5. seu, if. — vepris . . . ad ventum: Bentley's reading for veris . . . adventus of the MSS., which is interpreted by those who retain it to mean the blowing of Favonius (see 4. 1 n.). — inhorruit, rustles.

6. ad ventum, in the wind; lit., when the wind blows, ad denoting the occasion of the action, as in ad haec, ad famam, etc.

Atqui non ego te tigris ut aspera 10 Gaetulusve leo frangere persequor ; tandem desine matrem
 tempestiva sequi viro.

XXIV.

Quis desiderio sit pudor aut modus tam cari capitis? Praecepte lugubris cantus, Melpomene, cui liquidam pater vocem cum cithara dedit.

7. dimovere: i.e. in gliding through it.

10. Gaetulus: cf. III. 20. 2 and see Intr. 117 a. — frangere, to crush you; suggested, perhaps, by the Homeric simile, Il. XI. 113 ὥς δὲ λέων ἐλάφοιο ταχέως νήπια τέκνα | ῥηιδίως συνέαξε λαβὼν κρατερῶσιν ὁδοῦσιν. For the infinitive see Intr. 93.

12. tempestiva viro: cf. Verg. A. VII. 53 iam matura viro, iam plenis nubilis annis. Intr. 58 b.

XXIV. To Vergil, on the death of their common friend, Quintilius Varus, in B.C. 24. Quintilius, so far as we know, was not an author himself; but as an accomplished critic he had a high reputation among the writers of the day, who often submitted their compositions to his friendly judgment. (Ep. II. 3. 438.) Vergil's affection for him is sufficiently attested by the present ode. He was the friend of the poet's maturer years—he is not mentioned in the Eclogues—and his death was at once a personal bereavement and the loss of an invaluable literary adviser. Horace apparently stood on no such intimate terms with him; otherwise he could hardly have failed to mention him among the literary friends whose good opinion he valued, in S. I. 10. 81 sqq. But Horace's relations with him were nevertheless, — perhaps not till later than the period of the Satires, — so friendly that he addressed to him the eighteenth ode of this book. — Metre, 172.

1. quis desiderio, etc.: i.e. who can feel ashamed of mourning, or can control his grief. The case of desiderio is determined by modus; the dative would hardly be used with pudor alone.

2. tam cari capitis, for one so dear. For this use of caput, in the sense of 'person,' cf. Epod. 5. 74; Verg. A. IV. 354 puer Ascanius capitisque iniuria cari. — praecepte: i.e. start the strain, so that the poet may sing with her voice to guide and sustain him.

3. Melpomene: the muse of tragedy; but see 12. 2 n. — liquidam: i.e. clear and smoothly flowing. — pater: i.e. Jupiter. The muses were daughters of Zeus and Mnemosyne (Hes. Theog. 52).

5 Ergo Quintilium perpetuus sopor urget! Cui Pudor et Iustitiae soror, incorrupta Fides, nudaque Veritas quando ullum inveniet parem?

Multis ille bonis flebilis occidit, 10 nulli flebilior quam tibi, Vergili;
tu frustra pius heu non ita creditum poscis Quintilium deos.

Quid si Threicio blandius Orpheo auditam moderere arboribus fidem?

15 Num vanae redeat sanguis imagini, quam virga semel horrida,

5. ergo, and so; an expression of reluctant conviction and resignation; cf. S. II. 5. 101 ergo nunc Dama sodalis nusquam est.

6. urget, holds in its embrace; cf. premet, 4. 16 n. — cui: dative with parem, vs. 8. — Pudor, etc.: personified not simply as qualities of the man, but in the abstract, as in C. S. 57 sq. Judged by the standard of these personified virtues Quintilius was a rare type of man, — unassuming, absolutely just, sincere, and candid. — soror: i.e. the constant companion, implying that Iustitia also dwelt with Quintilius. Cf. Cic. Off. I. 23 fundamentum autem iustitiae est fides, id est dictorum conventorumque constantia et veritas.

7. incorrupta Fides; the epithet is included in the personification. See note on fidem 5. 5, and cf. rara Fides, 35. 21, vitiosa Cura, II. 16. 21, Pudor priscus, C. S. 57.

9. ille flebilis occidit, his death was cause for tears. See II. 14. 6 n.

11. frustra pius, with vain piety; cf. Cat. 76. 26 o di reddite mi hoc pro pietate mea, and see note on poscit, 31. 1. — non ita creditum: sc. illis a te. The meaning is that Vergil, in his anxiety for his sick friend, had piously commended him to the keeping of the gods, but non ita, — not that they should never give him back.

13. quid si, etc.: the thought gently suggested in frustra, vs. 11, is now further developed, and forms the transition from the sympathetic tone with which the poem opens to the exhortation to firmness with which it closes. — Threicio, etc.: see 12. 7 sqq. — blandius: cf. 12. 11 n.

14. arboribus: Intr. 54.

15. vanae imagini, to the empty form. The ancient conception of the dead in the underworld was very similar to the modern idea of ghosts, — not disembodied spirits, but disembodied forms, which were intangible, but retained, along with the spirit, enough of their material quality to be seen and heard, — tenuis sine corpore vitas, cava sub imagine formae (Verg. A. VI. 292 sq.) For the dative see Intr. 53. — sanguis: cf. Odys. XI. 98, 153, etc., where the dead are revived by drinking blood.

16. virga: cf. II. 18 n.—semel, once (for all); implying, as often, that the act is decisive and final.

17. precibus: with recludere, better taken as ablative of cause: because of (i.e. in answer to) our prayers. Recludere with the dative means to open to those who are to enter, as II. 18, 33, III. 2. 21. —fata recludere, to open the doors of fate, i.e. the doors of the tomb, which fate has closed forever on the departed; cf. Prop. V. 11. 2 pan-ditur ad nullas ianua nigra preces. For the infinitive see Intr. 101 a.

18. nigro gregi: i.e. the endless procession passing into the darkness of the underworld. Niger is sometimes used like ater (see 28. 13 n) as an epithet of death and of things connected with death; cf. IV. 2. 23, IV. 12. 26; Tib. I. 3. 4 abstineas avidas, mors modo nigra manus; | abstineas mors atra, precor. — compulerit, has gathered to.

19. levius fit patientia: cf. II. 3. According to Donatus, Vergil himself was in the habit of commending patience as the most useful of human virtues.

20. est nefas, Heaven forbids us.

XXV. In this ode Horace portrays, with his usual light touch but with powerful effect, the career of a courtesan, — her short-lived triumph, her waning power, and her inevitable doom of a despised and neglected old age, in which the passions she has fostered remain to torture her. — Metre, 174.

1. iunctas, closed; cf. the phrase iungere flumen (e.g. Liv. XXI. 47. 2) for bridging a river. The word is here used with reference to the two wooden shutters with which alone the window-aperture was closed (cf. bifores fenestras, Ov. Pont. III. 3. 5).

2. iactibus: i.e. of stones and the like, the windows being as a rule above the ground floor, which was occupied by shops. Cf. III. 7. 29 domum claude, neque in vias despice.

3. amat: i.e. cleaves to, seldom parts from; cf. Verg. A. V. 163 litus ama et laeva stringat sine palmula cautes. — -que: cf. 27. 16 n

5. multum: Intr. 49.

7. me tuo, etc.: words of a serenade. Hence the plural noctis:
 the lover complains of her persistent indifference. — tuo, your lover; cf. tuas, 15. 32. — pereunte, languishing.

9. invicem, your turn will come, and; the arrogance will be on the other side. — moechos: no longer the protervi iuvenes (vs. 2), the bold admirers and the sighing lovers of the days of your pride; even the most vulgar sort of game will be beyond your reach.

10. in solo levis angiportu, neglected in your lonely alley. The window and door mentioned above open on an alley which runs along the side and rear of the tenement (insula), separating it from other buildings (whence its name). For levis cf. Ep. II. 3. 423 levi pro

11. Thracio vento: Boreas

Thrace; cf. Threicio Aquilone, Epod. 13. 3. — bacchante magis, pursues his wilder revels. The expression accords with his character as Thracius; cf. 18. 9 n. — darkness out of doors enhance the impression of the loneliness of the wretched creature waiting within.

 — inter-lunia: Intr. 174 b.

14. matres equorum: a paraphrase similar to that of 17. 7.

16. non sine: cf. 23. 3 n.

17. virenti . . . pulla, fresh . . .
dark green; both epithets applying to each of the two substan-tives (Intr. 121), and contrasted with aridas.

18. magis (sc. quam aridis fron

19. hiemis sodali: cf. Verg. G. II. 339 hibernis parcebant flatibus Euri, and, for the expression, 28. 21 and IV. 12. 1.

20. dedicet, consigns. Cf. 26. 2.

XXVI. In honor of L. Aelius Lamia, one of the two sons of the intimate friend and devoted adherent of Cicero of the same name. (See Cic. Fam. XI. 16. 2, Sest. 29.) Horace enjoyed the friendship of both brothers. He alludes to the death of one, Quintus, in Ep. I. 14. 6. Lucius, whose name is 'enshrined' in this ode, and in 36. 7 and III. 17, is described by Velleius (II. 116. 3) as vir antiquissimi moris, et priscam gravitatem semper humanitate temperans. He was consul A.D. 3, and his death vivida senectute in A.D. 33 is recorded by Tacitus (Ann. VI. 27. 2). He must therefore have been much younger than Horace.

The date of this ode is fixed with considerable certainty by the allusions in vs. 3 sqq., as B.C. 30; that it was one of the earliest odes is implied in fidibus novis, vs. 10. — Metre, 176.

1. amicus: here used in the sense of gratus or acceptus (C.S. 62), as in dis amicum carmen, IV. 6. 41. Cf. II. 17. 2, III. 4. 25 n, and, for the opposite, dis inimice senex, S. II. 3. 123.

2. in mare Creticum: see Intr. 117 a and cf. 16. 4.

3. portare: Intr. 93. — quis metuatur, etc.: depending on securus, 6. quis is better taken as nominative singular; cf. quis pudor, 24. 1. The form quis (= quibus) occurs in the Satires and Epodes, but in the Odes this would be the only instance. — sub Arcto: i.e. in the far north; cf. subiectos Orientis orae, 12. 55 n.

4. rex: apparently Cotiso, king of the Dacians, whose threatened incursion alarmed the Romans about the time of the war of Actium. He was finally defeated by Crassus; cf. III. 8. 18 n.

5. Tiridaten: king of Parthia at the time of the battle of Actium, having headed a successful revolt against Phraates a few years before. In the next year (B.C. 30) the contest was renewed and Tiridates was forced to take refuge in Syria. These verses must have been written before January, B.C. 29, when the news of his flight reached Rome. Subsequently Tiridates succeeded in regaining the throne, and held it till about B.C. 27, when Phraates, with the aid of the Asiatic Scythians, among whom he had taken refuge, finally defeated him and drove him into permanent exile under the protection of Augustus. — unice securus, perfectly unconcerned.

XXVII.

Natis in usum laetitiae scyphis

 morem, verecundumque Bacchum sanguineis prohibete rixis.

6. fontibus integris: such as Aganippe, Hippocrene, and others less famous; cf. note on Heliconis, 12. 5. There is reason to believe that in the oldest Greek conception of them the muses were inspired, spring-haunting nymphs (Preller-Robert, Gr. Myth. I. 486). integris, however, is no doubt intended, like novis 10, to convey the idea of fresh, unhackneyed poetry, and is perhaps a reminiscence of Lucr. I. 927.

7. apricos, sunny; i.e. the bright, gaily-colored ones which seem to carry with them the sunshine in which they bloom; cf. Intr. 124.—necte flores, necte, etc.: a graceful way of saying necte floribus coronam. The meaning is not 'make Lamia a poet,' but 'distinguish him in song.' Of course, the ode itself, commending him to the muses as worthy, serves that end.

9. Pimplea, nymph of Pimplea. The latter was a spring in Pieria, on the slope of Olympus, sacred to the muses; see note on Haemo

12. 6.—mei: i.e. those that I confer, the possessive pronoun here representing the subjective genitive. More commonly it retains its possessive force, as 6. 11 laudes tuas.

10. fidibus novis: i.e. in a new kind of poetry, explained by Lesbio plectro in the next verse; cf. Lesbionum barbiton, I. 34 n.

11. sacrare, to enshrine, to immortalize; to set his name in verse, as an offering is placed in a temple to be preserved forever.—plectro: a small stick of ivory or other substance for striking the strings of the lyre (πλήκτρον; cf. πλήσσω). The player held it in one hand, playing with the fingers of the other.

XXVII. A convivial scene, dramatically portrayed, though there is but one speaker. The poet finds his friends in hot dispute over their wine; offense has been given, and from angry words they have come to the verge of blows,

5 Vino et lucernis Medus acinaces immane quantum discrepat: impium lenite clamorem, sodales, et cubito remanete presso.

Voltis severi me quoque sumere
 10 partem Falerni? Dicat Opuntiae

when he checks them with the sharp rebuke with which the poem opens. They laugh, and for answer put a goblet into his hand. Having thus secured their attention, he proceeds to play a little comedy before them with one of the younger members of the party, in watching which they forget at once their quarrel and his reproof.

Though the wine is Falernian, the Greek origin of the sketch is hardly disguised. Porphyrio says that the poem was taken in substance from Anacreon, referring perhaps to this fragment (63):

Ἄγε δηῦτε μηκέθ' οὔτω
 πατάγω τε κάλαλήτῳ Σκυθικὴν πόσιν παρ' οἶνον μελετώμεν, ἀλλὰ καλοῖς ὑποπίνοντες ἐν ὕμνοις.

—Metre, 176.

1. natis: i.e. designed from the very beginning of their existence. — in usum laetitiae, to promote joy and gladness—scyphis: a large, two-handled cup of wood, earthenware, or metal. Its size would make it a very effective weapon.

2. Thracum est: Thracian drunkenness was proverbial; cf. 18. 9 n. — tollite, away with!

3. verecundum, modest. The epithet (cf. modici, 18. 7 n.) is used to indicate the quality which the god approves in his worshippers.

4. prohibete, keep . . . free from; cf. Ep. I. 1. 31 corpus prohibere cheragra. For the sense cf. 17. 22 sqq.

5. vino et lucernis: Intr. 57. — Medus: cf. 2. 22 n. — acinaces: a short sword or dagger worn at the belt in front of the right thigh. Such a weapon would never be seen at a Roman convivium. Horace found it no doubt in his Greek original, and retained it to continue the idea of barbarum morem, 2.

6. immane quantum discrepat, is a monstrous anomaly amid, etc. The phrase immane quantum (like nescio quis = aliquis) has lost its interrogative character, and hence takes the indicative; cf. Liv. II. 1. 11 id mirum quantum profuit ad concordiam. — impium renewing the thought already suggested in verecundum Bacchum, 3.

8. cubito presso: i.e. on the cushions of the couches. The Greeks as well as the Romans reclined at table.

9. severi, strong. There were two kinds of Falernian wine, one harsh and tart (austerum, ἀσθηρὸς), the other sweet (γλυκάζων); Athen. I. 26 c.

10. Falerni: the only strictly Italian feature which Horace has added to the poem. — dicat, must tell us; i.e. that we may drink her health. There was nothing extraordinary in the demand: on being asked to take a cup with the rest, he calls for a toast. — Opuntiae: from Opus in Locris, near the Euboean gulf.

20 digne puer meliore flamma!

11. frater Megillae: a humorous variation on such honorary designations as filius Thetidis, 8. 14, nepos Veneris, Verg. A. IV. 163, etc.; substituted for the lad's own name, it implies, of course, that his chief recommendation to the present company is his handsome sister. — beatus pereat: Intr. 120.

12. pereat: of love, as in 25. 7, and frequently in the poets.

13. cessat voluntas, does inclination falter?

14. mercede, terms. — cumque: cf. 6. 3 n. — Venus, love, in a personal sense; cf. Verg. E. 3. 68 parta meae Veneri sunt munera.

15. non: with erubescendis, for which see Intr. 51 a.

16. ingenuo semper, etc., your weakness is never for a lowborn love. — -que: Horace often uses -que or et after a clause containing a negative, when the latter is closely connected with a particular word, so that the clause as a whole is felt to be affirmative; cf. 28. 34, II. 20. 4, III. 30. 6, Epod. 15. 14.

17. amore: used of a person, like Venus, 14. For the case, see Intr. 72. — quicquid habes, etc.:

he urges the lad to whisper the name in his ear, if he will not tell it to all.

18. auribus: Intr. 69. — a miser: his exclamation on hearing (or pretending to hear) the name. His expectation of an ingenuus amor is disappointed.

19. laborabas, you are struggling; cf. 9. 3 n. The imperfect is in keeping with the humorous outburst of horror and pity. It refers to the time, just before, when he was urging the lad to confess, all unconscious of the dreadful fact now revealed; cf. Ter. Phor. 857 oh, tu quoque aderas? — Charybdi: expressing the insatiable rapacity of the woman; cf. Cic. Phil. 2. 67 quae Charybdis tam vorax? The comparison of this class of persons to all sorts of monsters, Chimaeras, Hydras, Scylla, Sphinx, etc., appears to have been not uncommon (Athenaeus, XIII. 558 a).

20. flamma: returning to the figure of vss. 15 sq.

21. solvere . . . poterit: cf. beatus pereat, 11 n. — Thessalis: Thessaly was notorious for magic and necromancy; cf. Epod. 5. 45, Ep. II. 2. 209.

Quae saga, quis te solvere Thessalis

22. venenis, drugs, used to produce magical influences on the mind; cf. S. I. 8. 19 carminibus quae versant atque venenis | humanos animos; Epod. 5. 87. — deus: observe the climax, saga, magus, deus.

23. inligatum: i.e. in the coils and limbs of the monster. — triformi: in front a lion, behind a dragon, in the middle a goat; cf. Lucr. V. 905; Il. VI. 181.

24. Pegasus: the meaning is: even with the aid of the winged horse on which Bellerophon rode when he destroyed the original Chimaera you will not escape. — Chimaera: cf. Charybdi, 19 n.

XXVIII. This ode, like the last, is a dramatic presentation, the details of which, however, are obscure. Whether the poem is a dialogue or a monologue; if the former, how it is to be divided; who the speaker or speakers are, — these are questions which have always puzzled scholars and on which they are not yet agreed. The effort, however, to arrange the ode as a dialogue may be said to have failed. According to Porphyrio, the ode is a monologue in the mouth of Archytas, whose shipwrecked body lies on the sea-shore. In the opening verses he apostrophizes himself, contrasting his former world-embracing range of thought with his present low estate, and reflecting on the vanity of all human achievement in the presence of the universal destroyer. He then appeals to a passing sailor for the three handfuls of dust which constituted due burial. The first part of this interpretation is difficult to accept. The language of vss. 1-20 is hardly natural in the mouth of Archytas, and the view is much more probable which attributes the monologue to a shipwrecked man whose body has been cast ashore close to the tomb of Archytas, the sight of which suggests the reflections of the opening lines. — Metre, 162.

1. numero carentis, countless. — harenae: referring perhaps to a discussion of the subject in the lost works of Archytas.

2. cohibent, holds, confines. — Archyta: a statesman and general of Tarentum (about 400-360 B.C.), and a philosopher of such eminence that his instruction and friendship were sought by Plato. As a Pythagorean, Archytas directed his studies to the solution, by mathematical methods, of the problems of the physical universe.

3. pulveris exigui parva munera, the poor boon of a handful of dust; i.e. the 'few feet of earth' which enclose his bones, called munera, the last offering of affection or pity, to enhance the idea of his present helpless dependence. We have here the familiar contrast between man's unbounded ambition and the 'narrow house' to which death consigns him. Cf. Juvenal 10. 168 sqq. For the plural munera see Intr. 128. (Those who accept Porphyrio's interpretation of the ode are obliged to assume that the body of Archytas lies unburied on the shore (see vss. 23 sqq.), and to take munera . . . cohibent as meaning 'the gift, etc., holds you here,' i.e. is all that prevents you from entering the lower world.) — litus Matinum: the shore of the Adriatic near Matinus, which was apparently a mountain (cf. Matina cacumina, Epod. 16. 28), and has been placed by geographers on the southern side of the promontory of Garganus, where there is a modern village named Matinata. We are safe in supposing that it was within the region familiar to Horace in his boyhood, and that he had seen the tomb or mound near the shore which tradition assigned to Archytas. For the form Matinum see Intr. 65.

5. aerias domos, the mansions of the air, the spaces where the heavenly bodies (which the Pythagoreans regarded as divinities) dwell. — temptasse, to have explored, with the idea of boldness in venturing into the region; cf. III. 4. 30 insanientem navita Bosporum | temptabo. — animoque: Intr. 119 a.

6. morituro: expressing in a word the reason of nec quicquam prodest. For the meaning see Intr. 104 b.

7. occidit et, fallen too is. The main thought is presented first; cf. III. 8. 18, 21. — Pelopis genitor: Tantalus, a favorite of Jove until his head was turned by the honor, and his impiety consigned him to the punishment which made his name proverbial. — conviva deorum, though he was a guest, etc. In like manner remotus in auras and Iovis arcanis admissus are concessive.

8. Tithonus: brother of Priam and husband of Aurora, at whose request he was endowed with immortality, but not with eternal youth (Hom. Hymn in Ven. 218 sqq.). He consequently shrunk away (longa minuit senectus, II. 16. 30) until he became a mere voice, like a cicada. — remotus, translated. — in auras: i.e. to heaven; cf. aerias domos, 5 n.

9. Iovis arcanis: the famous laws of Minos were represented by tradition as a revelation from his father, Zeus.

10. Tartara: for the lower world in general. — Panthoiden: properly Euphorbus (Πανθολδης Εὐφορβος, Il. XVI. 808), a Trojan hero, killed in battle by Menelaus (Il. XVII. 9 sqq.); but the patronymic is here used ironically for Pythagoras. The story was told that the latter, in accordance with his doctrine of metempsychosis, asserted that his own soul had previously inhabited, among others, the body of Euphorbus, and to prove his assertion offered to identify the shield he had carried, which was dedicated among many others in the temple of Hera at Argos. The shield he pointed out, on being taken down (clipeo refixo), was found to be inscribed with the name of Euphorbus. — Orco: Intr. 53.

11. quamvis, etc.: i.e. although, since he proved his previous existence in Trojan times, he had in fact given up nothing, etc.

13. concesserat: Intr. 83. — atrae, sable; a standing epithet of death and of things associated with death; cf. S. II. 1. 58 mors atris circumvolat alis; Il. 3. 16, 13. 34, 14. 17, etc.

14. auctor, interpreter, expounder.

15. sed omnis: cutting short the list of examples with a comprehensive statement. — una: i.e. the same for all.

16. semel: i.e. there is no return; cf. 24. 16 n. — via leti: i.e. the one that death opens to man (cf. fine libidinum 18. 10 n); a different conception from that of 3. 17, where see note.

17. alios, some, although there is no second alius, a special class of persons (nautae) being substituted. — Furiae: as inflaming the passions which lead men to fight with one another. — torvo, grim; his expression as he watches the show. — spectacula: a striking comparison, representing war as a sort of gladiatorial contest for the entertainment of Mars; cf. 2. 37 sqq.

18. exitio est: Gr. 233 a.

19. mixta, without distinction. — funera, the funeral trains. — nullum: emphatic (Intr. 116 b), summing up (like sed omnis, 15) the fact which the foregoing examples illustrate.

20. caput: alluding to the fancy that Proserpina doomed her victim to death by clipping a lock of hair, as the priest did from the head of the victim before the altar; cf. Eurip. Alc. 74; Verg. A. IV. 698 nondum illi flavom Proserpina vertice crinem | abstulerat Stygioque caput damnaverat Orco. — Prōserpina: see Intr. 178. — fūgit, shuns, i.e. omits, in performing the function referred to. For the tense see Intr. 80.

21. devexi, setting. The time was early in November, a season of storms, which were attributed as usual to the influence of the constellation; cf. III. 27. 17; Epod. 15. 7; Verg. A. VII. 719. — comes: cf. veris comites animæ, IV. 12. 1. — Orionis: for the prosody and rhythm see Intr. 178, 132.

22. Illyricis undis: i.e. in the Adriatic. See Intr. 117. — Notus: cf. 3. 14 n.

23. at tu, etc.: see intr. note. — vagæ: i.e. of no value, and hence a thing it would be niggardly (malignus) to withhold. — ne parce: Intr. 88.

24. capiti inhumato: for the hiatus see Intr. 185.

25. dare: Intr. 94 k. — sic: cf. 3. 1 n. — quodcumque, etc.: for the construction cf. quam remcumque 6. 3 n.

26. fluctibus Hesperiiis: that wash the shores of Italy (Hesperia, III. 6. 8 n); here those of the Adriatic (cf. vs. 22). — Venusinæ silvæ: about forty miles inland, but exposed by their elevated situation on the spurs of the Apennines to the fury of the eastern winds.

27. plectantur, suffer the loss. — multa merces, abundant recompense.

28. unde potest (sc. defluere): anticipating ab Iove Neptunoque. He can offer no reward from any earthly source. For unde with a personal antecedent cf. 12. 17 n. — aequo, approving; cf. 2. 47 n. Jove would reward him as the god of hospitality and the protector of strangers.

29. sacri: sc. to Neptune as its patron divinity (custode). The mythical founder of Tarentum was Taras (gen. Tarantos), a son of Neptune. The sailor is thought of as belonging to Tarentum, and therefore as an object of Neptune's care.

30. neglegis, will you lightly . . . ? cf. Cat. 30. 5 facta impia . . . quæ tu neglegis, and see Intr. 95. The sailor has turned away as if not disposed to grant the request. For the tense see Intr. 78. — nocituram: Intr. 104 b.

XXIX.

Icci, beatis nunc Arabum invides

31. postmodo: with nocituration.—te natis, your children.—fraudem, a wrong. To refuse burial was to rob the dead of his just due (cf. debita iura, 32).—fors et, may be, as likely as not; a phrase used where the speaker regards his conjecture as altogether probable, and not a mere guess; cf. Verg. A. II. 139, XI. 50, Prop. II. 9. 1, where it is used with the indicative.

32. debita iura, etc.: i.e. your turn may come to need the service which you now withhold, and to have your righteous demand refused with the same scornful indifference.—debita iura, rights withheld, referring to the right of the dead to burial.—vices superbae, pitiless retribution. For the epithet see Intr. 124.

33. precibus inultis: i.e. without being avenged for the wrong you do me in denying my prayer.—linquar (sc. a te): i.e. in the predicament I am now in; cf. S. I. 9. 73 me sub cultro linquit, and see Intr. 129.

35. quamquam festinas, you are in haste, I know, but.—non est mora longa: the indicative is similar to that in the phrase longum est ('it would be tedious'); Gr. 311 c.

36. iniecto ter pulvere: to meet the requirements of the gods of the dead, the solemn form of burial in accordance with certain prescribed rules was sufficient; cf. Antigone's burial of her brother, Soph. Ant. 429 sqq. The number three constantly occurs in solemn rites; cf. C. S. 23, Ep. I. 1. 37; Verg. A. VI. 229.

XXIX. Iccius, to whom this ode and Ep. I. 12 are addressed, was a man in whom a taste for philosophy was combined with a restless and discontented spirit, which led him to join, with a view to bettering his circumstances, the expedition of Aelius Gallus into Arabia in B.C. 24. Horace banters his friend good-humoredly on his high hopes, and his desertion of philosophy for the pursuit of wealth. The expedition was a disastrous failure, and Iccius was disappointed. In Ep. I. 12 (written B.C. 20) we find him in Sicily, the agent in charge of Agrippa's estates there,—a sufficiently good place, it would seem,—but still discontented with his condition.—Metre, 176.

1. Icci, What, Iccius!—nunc: in contrast with his former devotion to philosophy and high thinking.—invides, you are coveting?

2. gazis: appropriate here, as an oriental (Persian) word. — acrem militiam, a vigorous campaign.

3. Sabaeae, of Sheba, the western portion of southern Arabia, famous for its wealth in spices and gold and precious stones (Plin. N. H. VI. 161; O. T. Kings I. 10).

4. Medo: see 2. 22 n. There is no probability that any operations against the Parthians were actually contemplated in connection with this expedition, but no doubt at Rome the most extravagant expectations were entertained in regard to it.

5. nectis catenas: implying full assurance of victory. — quae virginum: Intr. 63.

6. sponso necato: sc. by Iccius, who thereby obtains the sponsa as his prize; cf. the picture of the young Roman warrior in battle, III. 2. 6 sqq.

7. puer ex aula, royal page; see Madv. 298. 2.

8. ad cyathum statuetur: i.e. will be appointed to serve you and your guests with wine, dipping it from the cratera with the ladle-like cyathus and pouring it into the goblets.

9. doctus, etc.: the lad whom Iccius is to bring home from the palace of some Arab king, is a captive from the far East, where he had been trained for no such menial service. The possession of such a rare slave as a cup-bearer was a fashionable luxury of the day (S. II. 8. 14 sq.; cf. Juv. 5. 56), but naturally a very costly one, and marks Iccius as a great nabob. — tendere, to speed; lit. to direct towards a goal; cf. Verg. A. V. 508 pariterque oculos telumque tetendit; IX. 606 spicula tendere cornu; V. 489. For the mood see Intr. 101 c. — Sericas: see 12. 56 n. This epithet, in connection with paterno, serves to indicate the nationality of the boy (Intr. 124).

11. pronos: i.e. according to their nature, to which the supposed reversal of their course would do violence; and this is the point of the comparison.

12. montibus, up the mountains; abl. of the way by which. Others regard it as dat. (Intr. 53); but in that case arduis would be an idle epithet. — reverti, reverse his course.

13. coemptos undique, after buying up from every quarter, indicating the zeal with which Iccius had pursued the studies he now abandons. — nobilis : better taken as accusative plural; that he could sacrifice such books shows the completeness of his apostasy.

14. Panaeti : a Stoic philosopher of Rhodes, who came to Rome about 156 B.C. and lived for many years on terms of great intimacy with Scipio Aemilianus and Laelius. — domum, school (cf. lare, Ep. I. 1. 13); i.e. the disciples of Socrates who recorded the teachings of their master, especially Plato, Xenophon and Aeschines. The authors here, of course, by a familiar figure of speech, stand for their works.

15. mutare : i.e. to sell; Intr. 74. — Hiberis : Intr. 65. Spanish steel was famous in ancient as in modern times (Plin. N.H. XXXIV. 144, 149).

16. tendis, are bent upon.

XXX. A hymn to Venus, imploring the goddess to bestow her favor on Glycera. In all probability a study from the Greek. — Metre, 174.

1. regina Cnidi Paphique : cf. 3. 1; Pind. Fr. 99 δέσποινα Κύπρου. Cnidus was a city in Caria, where Venus had three temples. In one of these was the famous statue of the goddess by Praxiteles, of which the Venus of the Vatican is a copy. Paphos, in Cyprus, was a very old seat of the worship of Venus (Odys. VIII. 363) at the spot where she was said to have come ashore on rising out of the sea; cf. Verg. A. I. 415. Her rites are described by Tac. Hist. II. 3.

2. sperne, slight, forsake; cf. deseruit, 19. 10.

4. aedem : here a private chapel (sacrarium) in the girl's own lodgings. The meaning is 'Be ever present to answer her prayers,' which of course were for the enhancement and perpetuation of her own charms.

5. puer : Cupid. — solutis zonis : cf. Sen. Ben. I. 3. 2 tres Gratiae, sorores, manibus implexis, ridentes et virgines, solutaque ac pellucida veste.

—properentque: Intr. 119 b.

7. parum comis: i.e. headstrong and impatient, the unsoftened temper that belongs to the confidence of youth. The description is no doubt Horace's own; only a Roman could treat Iuventas in the retinue of Venus as a personified abstraction.—Iuventas: "Ἥβη; cf. Hom. Hymn. in Apol. quoted at 4. 5 n.

8. Mercurius: the worship of Hermes was associated, in many places in Greece, with that of Aphrodite (Preller-Robert, Gr. Myth. I. 387). In Horace's mind, however, it is perhaps as the facundus deus (cf. 10. 1) that he has a place in her retinue.

XXXI. The poet's prayer. The dedication of the temple of Apollo on the Palatine, October 9, B.C. 28, was an event of great interest in Roman literary circles; for with the temple was united a public library (cf. Ep. I. 3. 17, II. 1. 216 sq.). Horace records his reflections on the occasion in this fine ode, in which, against a background of the various forms of wealth which the multitude crave, he formulates his own simple prayer for the few needs of a happy life. The closing verses of Epode 1 were written in a somewhat similar strain.—Metre, 176.

1. dedicatum, enshrined. For this use of the word, applied to the divinity instead of the shrine, cf. Cic. D. N. II. 61, Ov. F. VI. 637.—poscit: notice the tense, which is to be taken strictly: 'what does (not what shall) he demand.' As to the word itself, we must remember that the Roman idea of the relation between gods and men was that of mutual obligation. On the erection of a splendid temple the people would feel that they could claim some boon of the god in return; cf. 24. 12, III. 29. 59 n.

2. patera: see 19. 15 n.—novum liquorem: i.e. wine of the vintage just gathered. The time was late autumn.

4. Sardiniae: one of the great sources of the grain supply of Rome.—segetes, grain lands. For this use of seges, cf. Ep. II. 2. 161, Verg. G. I. 47.

5. aestuosae: cf. 22. 5 n.—grata: i.e. a pleasing sight.—Calabriae: an excellent grazing country, except in the hot season when the flocks were driven over into the mountains of Lucania and Sabinum; cf. Epod. 1. 27 sq.

6. ebur: very costly; cf. Plin. N. H. VIII. 31 dentibus (tusks) ingens pretium. It was used for household decorations.

8. mordet: cf. lambit, 22. 8. — taciturnus: cf. loquaces lymphae, III. 13. 15.

9. premant Calena, etc.: with a change of form the poet continues the catalogue of objects of desire which he does not covet.—premant, prune; lit. keep back, check luxuriant growth; cf. Verg. G. I. 157 ruris opaci falce preme umbras. — Calena falce: cf. 20. 9 n; Intr. 124. — quibus dedit: sc. eam premere (Intr. 97 d); i.e. 'to whom Fortune has given the control of rich vineyards,' which those of Cales here typify (Intr. 117 a).

11. mercator: see 1. 16 n. — exsiccet, drain. — culillis: properly a kind of earthenware cup used by the pontifices and vestals in religious rites. Here and Ep. II. 3. 434 the name is used for drinking cups of a richer sort.

12. Syra: i.e. brought from the ports of Syria, especially Antioch, which had become the chief emporium for the merchandise of Arabia and the far East. — reparata, purchased. From its meaning, 'to get' (cf. 17 n.) parare with the prefix re- (see 3. 7 n.) denotes 'to get back' in return for something given. The construction is similar to that of mutare in 17. 2. The two pictures of this strophe are designed to go together, — the vine grower living quietly at home in oriental luxury, the more restless trader roving the seas according to his bent (cf. 1. 17) and enjoying the best that life affords. The impression of such enviable happiness is further heightened by the exclamation that follows, in order to point the contrast with the poet's own simple fare and simple wants.

13. quippe revisens: equivalent to quippe qui revisat, the reason for saying dis carus.

14. anno: i.e. between the opening of navigation in the spring (cf. 4. 2) and its close at the approach of winter.

15. impune: Intr. 116 b. — me pascunt, my fare is; cf. 1. 29 n.

16. leves: i.e. easily digested; cf

Epod. 2. 57 gravi malvae salubres corpori.

17. paratis, what I possess; cf. Ep. II. 2. 196 plura parare labores. — et valido, etc.: the construction is as follows: et . . . et connect the two infinitives frui, degere, which depend upon dones (Intr. 97 d), while nec . . . nec, which are subordinate to the second et, connect turpem and cithara carentem; precor is parenthetical. For this use of et . . . nec . . . nec cf. Cic. C. M. 7 moderati et nec difficiles nec inhumani senes. For the purport of the prayer cf. Juv. 10. 356 orandum est ut sit mens sana in corpore sano. — valido mihi, that I in good health may.

18. Latoe: formed after the Greek Λατώος, from Λάτω (Attic Λήτω), Latona; cf. 21. 3. For the form cf. Semeleius, 17. 22 n. — integra cum mente: thought of in closer connection with old age, as valido with bodily comfort (frui paratis); health and strength may fail with years, but the failure of the mental faculties makes a turpem senectam.

20. cithara carentem: i.e. robbed of the poetic gift.

XXXII. The poet to his lyre. The ode appears to be a prelude to another or to other compositions (as IV. 6 is to the Carmen Saeculare), but to which, it would be fruitless to inquire. The lyre is addressed as the lyre of Alcaeus, on which the poet has already played lighter strains (lusimus sub umbra) not without success. As the song he now calls for is characterized in no other way than as Latinum carmen, it is probable that the 'lighter strains' are his studies from the Greek, many of which are preserved, especially in this book, and this ode preludes his undertaking in compliance with the demand of his friends (poscimus), more serious and original lyric composition on strictly Roman subjects,—such odes as I. 2, etc., and the majority of those in the following books.—Metre, 174.

1. poscimus (sc. carmen): the construction is the passive of that of 24. 12 and 31. 1; cf. Ov. M. V. 333 poscimus, Aonides; F. IV. 721 Parilia poscor. — si quid, etc., if ever . . . I have sung with thee in lighter mood some strain that, etc.; cf. IV. 9. 9; S. I. 10. 37

in form is a command; cf. iubeo te salvere, etc.), expressing technically the person who is interested in having the command fulfilled, i.e. the person from whom the greeting proceeds; cf. Verg.
A. XI. 97 salve aeternum mihi, maxime Palla, aeternumque vale.
—cumque vocanti, *whenever I where except as a suffix to a relative pronoun or adverb. It is supposed by some to be an archaic form, corresponding to quandoque =quandocumque (IV. 1. 17 n), quique = quicumque (e.g. Plaut.

Men. 571); or it may be a bold use of the detachable suffix cumque (=‘ever’), the relative notion to which it belongs being implied in the participle, so that mihi cumque vocanti = mihi quandocumque vocabo; cf. quippe revisens = *quippe

XXXIII. To the elegiac poet Albius Tibullus, who, at least in his later years (he died in the same year with Vergil, B.C. 19), was on friendly terms with Horace. The latter does not mention him in the Satires, but Ep. I. 4 is addressed to him, and shows, as does the present ode, a certain degree of intimacy between the two men. The character of Tibullus here represented is quite in keeping with his portrayal of himself in his elegies, but the name Glycera does not occur in any of his extant poems. — Metre, 172.

1. ne doleas: Intr. 87. — plus nimio, overmuch; see 18. 15 n; to be taken with doleas.

3. decantes, keep droning; cf. Ep. I. 1. 62 puerorum nenia Curiis et decantata Camillis. — elegos: poems in elegiac verse, the unit of which is a couplet consisting of a dactylic hexameter and a 'pentameter' (versibus impariter iunctis, Ep. II. 3. 75). It became in the Alexandrine period the verse of sentimental love, and in this use was successfully cultivated by Tibullus and other Augustan poets. — cur, etc.: cf. Ep. I. 8. 9 irascar amicis, cur me funesto properent arcere veterno; Cic. Att. III. 13. 2 me saepe accusas cur hunc meum casum tam graviter feram. This use of cur (quor, qua re) is probably a survival of an original relative use after causa and the like; cf. 16. 19 causae cur perirent and our 'the reason why.' — iunior: Tibullus was born about 55 B.C., and may have been 30 when this ode was written.

4. laesa fide, her plighted faith is broken and. — praeniteat, outshines (sc. ei, 'in her eyes'; cf. 5. 13 quibus nites).

5. tenui fronte: a low forehead was greatly admired by the Romans; cf. Ep. I. 7. 26; Mart. IV. 42. 9. — Lycorida, Cyri: these and the following are probably fictitious persons as well as names.

6. Cyri (objective gen.) torret amor: cf. III. 19. 28. — asperam, waspyish.

7. declinat: sc. from Lycoris.

10. sic visum, such is the will of. Cf. 12. 31 n; Verg. A. II. 428 dis aliter visum.

11. aenea : i.e. that cannot be broken ; there is no escape for her victims. Cf. III. 9. 18.

12. saevo ioco, with grim humor.

13. melior Venus : i.e. a woman of higher social position than a libertina. For Venus cf. 27. 14 n.

14. grata detinuit compede, I lingered, a willing captive, in the fetters of; cf. IV. 11. 23 sq. Compede also occurs Epod. 4. 4, Ep. I. 3. 3; the plural compedibus only Ep. I. 16. 77. The singular is not found in any author before Horace. — Myrtale : a common name of libertinae.

15. fretis acrior Hadriae : concessive; a further reason why he should have followed the dictates of his good sense. Cf. III. 9. 23.

16. curvantis, when it hollows out; i.e. in time of storm, the force of which changes the outline of a sandy shore like that of Calabria; cf. Verg. A. III. 533 portus ab Euroo fluctu curvatus in arcum.

— sinus, bays. The acc. expresses the effect of the action (Lane's Gr. 1135).

XXXIV. For the occasion and subject of this ode see Intr. 8, and cf. S. I. 5. 101 sqq.; Lucr. VI. 400 denique cur numquam caelo iacit undique puro | Iuppiter in terras fulmen sonitusque profundit? The place of the ode in the collection was no doubt determined by the closing sentence, which prepares the reader for the more elaborate portrayal of the attributes of Fortuna in the next ode. — Metre, 176.

1. parcus et infrequens : i.e. coming seldom to the altar and bringing scanty offerings, at that. The time referred to is past (I who was, etc.), as is indicated by the contrasted nunc, 3.

2. insanientis sapientiae : oxymoron.

3. consultus, an adept in; see Intr. 66 b. — erro, I strayed from the truth. Gr. 276 e.

4. iterare, to traverse again; cf. 7. 32. — cursus : see Intr. 128.

5. Diespiter: see I. 25 n.

6. nubila dividens plerumque, who commonly cleaves the clouds. For the emphasis on plerumque see Intr. 116 b, and cf. 3. 12, 31. 2.

7. per purum, across the clear sky. — tonantis egit equos, etc.: the phenomenon described is that of thunder rumbling overhead and passing away in the distance. The two epithets are not to be taken strictly with their substantives, but are designed to give an impression of the whole phenomenon, — the god in his car, with flying steeds, thundering across the sky; see Intr. 121.

9. quo, that car by which; passing from the special incident to a general description. — bruta, heavy, sluggish (cf. terram inertem, III. 4. 45); in contrast with vaga.

10. invisi, repulsive; a frequent epithet of things connected with death; cf. II. 14. 23 invisas cupressos; Verg. A. VIII. 245 regna pallida, dis invisa; Sen. Herc. Fur. 664 Ditis invisi domus. — Taenari: the southern point of the Peloponnesus (Cape Matapan), where, under a temple of Poseidon, tradition placed one of the entrances of the lower world (cf. Verg. G. IV. 467 Taenarias fauces, alta ostia Ditis); here used, like Avernus, for the lower world itself. For the case see Intr. 65.

11. Atlanteus finis: the end of the earth, where Atlas supports the sky on 11 shoulders; cf. τερμύων Ἀτλαντικῶν εἶσω, Eurip. Hippol. 3.

12. valet, etc.: the power of the supreme god is also manifested in the astonishing vicissitudes of fortune in human experience. — ima summis mutare, to reverse high and low. The neuter of the adjectives is used abstractly, comprehending both persons and things (cf. Ep. I. 9. 4 legentis honesta Neronis; II. 2. 178 metit Orcus grandia cum parvis). The plural is that of repeated occurrence. The ambiguity in the construction of the cases with mutare (Intr. 74) here has its natural application, both objects having the same relation to the subject, who neither gives nor receives, but puts each in place of the other. For the mood see Intr. 94 n.

13. insignem, etc.: repeating in detail the idea just expressed collectively, by indicating the visible effect on each of the two classes mentioned. The presentation is also made more vivid by insignem, which brings a person before us, though the abstract recurs in obscura. Horace had in mind Hes. Op. 6 ρεῖα δ' ἀρίζηλον μινύθει καὶ ἀδηλον ἀέξει . . . Ζεὺς ὑψιβρεμέτης. — deus: see 3. 21 n.

 15 Fortuna cum stridore acuto

XXXV.

O diva, gratum quae regis Antium, praesens vel imo tollere de gradu

14. hinc apicem, etc.: in a moment Fortuna makes or un-makes kings. Fortuna is here obviously the minister of Jove, the μοῖρα Διός of Homer (Il. XV. 117); cf. Pind. Ol. 12. 1 παῖ Ζηνὸς, Τύχα, and Paus. VII. 26. 8 ἐγὼ μὲν οὖν Πινδάρου πείθομαι τῇ ῥῳδῇ, Μοιρῶν τε εἶναι μίαν τὴν Τύχην καὶ ὑπὲρ τὰς ἀδελφάς τι ισχύειν.—apicem, the crowm, i.e. kingly power.—rapax: not an epithet of Fortuna, but expressing, in place of an adverb, the zest with which she performs this part of her function. The same idea is expressed in the other case by gaudet, 16.

15. stridore: sc. of her wings; cf. III. 29. 53, and Vergil's stridentibus alis (A. I. 397).

16. sustulit: the perfect here expresses the quick completion of the action, and in posuisse also the tense appears to retain its proper force; but see Intr. 80, 81.

XXXV. A hymn to Fortuna. The powerful goddess, whose sway is owned alike on sea and land, in every nation and in every calling, whose favor is sought by peasant and king, is implored to preserve Caesar in his contemplated expedition to far-off Britain, and the throng of young Romans who were preparing to invade the East. These allusions show that the ode was written B.C. 27, when Augustus set out from the city ὡς καὶ ἐς τὴν Βρεττανίαν στρατεύων, or in 26, when, though detained in Spain, he still cherished the project until diverted from it by risings there and in the Alps (Dio Cass. LIII. 22. 5, 25. 2). The expedition of Aelius Gallus into Arabia (see intr. note to Ode 29) was in preparation at this time.—Metre, 176.

1. diva quae regis: cf. diva potens Cypri, 3. 1; Venus, regina Cnidi Paphique, 30. 1. The designation of a divinity by a favorite haunt or a famous sanctuary, either with or (as here) instead of the proper name, is common in Greek hymns.—gratum: cf. Cic. Att. IV. 8A. 1 (speaking of Antium) nihil quietius, nihil alsius, nihil amoenius.—Antium: the seat of a renowned temple and oracle, which continued to exist to the latest pagan times. There were here two images, Fortunae Antiates (see Baumeister, fig. 606 f.), regarded as sisters (veridicae sorores, Mart. V. 1. 3), by certain motions of which oracular responses were conveyed. See Preller-Jordan, Röm. Myth. II. 192. They were probably consulted in regard to the military expeditions now on foot.

2. praesens: equivalent to po- mortale corpus vel superbos

5 te pauper ambit sollicita prece ruris colonus, te dominam aequoris quicumque Bithyna lacessit Carpathium pelagus carina ;

 regumque matres barbarorum et purpurei metuunt tyranni, tens, because by the 'presence' of a divinity we mean only the manifestation of his power. — imo gradu: cf. our 'lowest round of the ladder.'

3. mortale corpus, our perishable clay; i.e. man in his most helpless state, stripped of all outward show and resources; cf. Liv. XXII. 22. 7 transfugam nihil aliud quam unum vile atque infame corpus esse ratus.

4. vertere, to turn . . . into. It has here the meaning and construction of mutare (Intr. 74). — funeribus triumphos: both in a literal sense, — the conqueror's march to the Capitol and the march to the grave. The Romans could recall in their own history at least one conspicuous example of each of these vicissitudes of fortune, — the rise of Servius Tullius from slavery to the throne, and the pathetic case of Aemilius Paullus, the conqueror of Macedonia, who lost his two sons at the very time of his triumph (Liv. XLV. 41).

5. te: see 10. 9 n. — ambit, courts, as the Roman candidate courted the favor of the voter (hence ambitio, ambitus). — sollicita: Intr. 124.

6. colonus: a type of humble circumstances, as in II. 14. 12. But the farmer was regarded as especially dependent on the favor of Fortuna (cf. III. 1. 29 sqq.); like the mariner, he was at the mercy of the elements. In certain figures of Fortuna (see Baumeister, fig. 605) the goddess is represented with a rudder in one hand (dominam aequoris), and in the other a horn of plenty (cf. 17. 14 n.). — te: sc. ambit, the subject of which is the antecedent implied in quicumque.

7. quicumque, etc.: i.e. any mariner; see Intr. 117 a, and cf. I. 13 sq. — Bithyna: cf. Pontica, 14. 11 n. — lacessit, braves; lit. challenges.

9. te Dacus, etc.: te carries with it the idea of ambit 5, but the strict meaning of the word is lost, as the reader proceeds, in the vaguer notion of a helpless dependence; and without distinctly marking the transition, the poet introduces the idea of fear (metuunt), which is only another aspect of the same feeling. — Dacus: cf. 26. 4 n. — profugi, nomad; cf. III. 24. 10.

10. urbesque, etc.: i.e. collectively, as organized bodies, the cases hitherto presented being those of individual men; the strongest community is helpless against the power of the goddess. — Latium: the Roman state, as in 12. 53. — ferox, dauntless (against all other adversaries); cf. Roma ferox, III. 3. 44.

11. regumque matres: the introduction of the more poignant anxieties of woman adds a touch of pathos, as in III. 2. 7; cf. 15. 34 n. — barbarorum: i.e. in the East. Under the system of polygamy which prevailed there, the succession of a prince to the throne was often due to the influence or intrigues of his mother, who therefore obtained an importance which she did not ordinarily have elsewhere. The nearest approach to it in Roman history was the case of Livia, the mother of Tiberius.

12. purpurei (for purpurati), in scarlet robes. — tyranni: in the proper sense of the word, men who have seized the supreme power (imperium), and whose position is therefore the more precarious. This thought is developed in the next strophe into a picture in which the portrayal of the goddess's power is brought to a climax. See also 2. 7 n.

13. iniurioso, irreverent (from the point of view of the tyrannus), not respecting his just rights (iura); cf. Epod. 17. 34 n; Intr. 124.

14. stantem columnam: figurative, meaning their established power and dignity.

15. ad arma: the repetition has the effect of introducing the actual cry into the verse. Cf. Liv. XXI. 49. 10. — cessantis: i.e. the cooler heads, whose adhesion to the rebellion would mean the fall of the monarch.

17. anteit: Intr. 180. Necessity walking before Fortuna with the symbols of her power, as the lictors with the fasces before the Roman magistrate, declares the fixedness of her decrees.

18. clavos trabalis, etc.: devices employed in building to secure firmness and durability, here symbols of immutability. Clavus in this figurative sense was not uncommon; cf. Cic. Verr. II. 5. 53 ut hoc beneficium, quemadmodum dicitur, trabali clavo figeret. — cuneos: used to tighten imperfect joints. — manu aena: cf. our 'iron grasp.' The characteristic of Necessitas is transferred to her hand. Intr. 124.

19. severus, rigid, unyielding.

20. uncus, plumbum: the iron clamp by which two blocks of stone were held together, and the lead, poured in hot, by which the iron was firmly fixed in the stone (Vitruv. II. 8). Such clamps may be seen in the walls of the Parthenon to this day.

 25 at volgus infidum et meretrix retro ferre iugum pariter dolosi.

21. te Spes et . . . Fides : in this and the following strophe we have a different conception of Fortuna from the one portrayed above, illustrating the confusion which existed in the Roman mind on the subject. Except in the single word inimica, 24, we have no longer the inexorable goddess, dealing out good and evil to men, which was perhaps the character of the Fortunae Antiates, but a more abstract conception of a changeable divinity, a sort of genius (cf. Ep. II. 2. 187 sqq.), attending as well as determining the lives of men,—of a state or city, of a class, or even of a family or an individual. Such a conception was Fortuna Populi Romani, Fortuna Muliebris, Fortuna Caesaris, etc. (Preller-Jordan Röm. Myth. II. 182). This divinity typifies misfortune as well as good fortune,—wears white or black (mutata veste); and to her cling Hope and Fidelity,—the hope that never dies in the heart, and the rare fidelity that can stand the test of adversity.—albo : typical of purity; cf. ‘unsullied faith.’—rara, rare; with the same accessory notion of excellence as in English. For the neutral meaning of fides, see 5. 5 n, and for the personification, 24. 7 n.

22. velata panno : from the custom of the priests in the worship of Fides, as instituted by Numa, who (Liv. I. 21. 4) ‘ad id sacrarium flamines bigis curru arcuato vehi iussit, manuque ad digitos usque involuta rem divinam facere, significantes fidem tutandam, sedemque eius etiam in dextris sacratam esse.’ The cloth by which the priest veils his hand is here transferred to the figure of the goddess.—comitem (sc. se), her companionship; cf. Ovid. A. I. 127 signa comitem negabat; S. II. 8. 2 quaerenti convivam (sc. te).—abnegat : with Spes as well as Fides as its subject.

23. mutata veste : i.e. putting on mourning.—potentis domos, the home of power (Intr. 124). This home the once prosperous man must now leave and go out into the world with his changed fortune; but hope still attends him, and a few faithful friends.

24. linquis : Intr. 129.

25. at volgus, etc. : but the great majority of those who were the devoted friends of his prosperity will not share with him the burden of adversity.—retro cedit, fall back, refuse to follow.

27. cum faece, dregs and all.

28. ferre iugum pariter : to bear, as in true friendship, an equal share of the hardships, as well as the pleasures, of life; cf.

 designation prefixed to the more definite one,—the parts of the East

32. oceano rubro: for mare
Erythraeum, the part of the Indian

33. eheu, ah me.—cicatricum, see 2. 29 n.

34. dura, hardened.—refūgi- mus, shrunk from, i.e. not dared

35. intactum, untried, unattempted; cf. S. I. 10. 66, and Sall.
Jug. 66. 1 nihil intactum pati.—
nefasti: better taken as genitive.

36. unde, from what.

38. o: Intr. 185.—nova: because of the feeling that things were doomed to a certain career in the making, as men at their birth;
 cf. 27. 1. The sword is to be broken under altogether new influences.

39. in (with diffingas): i.e. for use against. The desire to wash out the stain of civil war in the blood of the enemy was no doubt a genuine feeling on the part of Horace's contemporaries, and not merely a happy fancy of the poet;
 cf. the feeling of the soldiers of Germanicus after their mutiny in XXXVI. A welcome to Numida on his safe return from the 'far West,'—possibly as one of the iuvenes nuper sospites (III. 14. 9) in the train of Augustus, B.C. 24. Numida, whose nomen is variously given as Plotius or Pomponius, was a much younger man than Horace, being of the same age with their common friend Lamia (see intr. note to Ode 26); and we may therefore suppose that the sacrifice and banquet with which his return was celebrated were instituted by Lamia, at whose request Horace wrote this ode for the occasion. — Metre, 171.

1. et ture et fidibus: both indispensable accompaniments of a sacrifice. During the progress of the rites, amid the absolute silence of the spectators, a fidicen (or more commonly a tibicen) played a solemn strain to make more sure that no ill-omened sound should reach the ears of the priest; and no sacrifice was acceptable unless the smoke of the victim was fragrant with incense. — iuvat, we will gladly; expressing here, as in Epod. 9. 37, disposition to do the thing rather than, as more commonly, satisfaction or pleasure in doing it; see Intr. 94 c.

2. placare, gratify.—sanguine: i.e. the life. Only the entrails of the victim were consumed on the altar; the flesh furnished forth the banquet which followed. — debito: because the sacrifice had been vowed on Numida's departure, probably by Lamia; cf. obligatam dapem, II. 7. 17.

3. custodes deos: cf. 28. 29, and see Intr. 126 c.

4. Hesperia ultima: probably Spain is meant.

6. plura, a larger share.—dividit, bestows.

8. non alio, under the very same (litotes).—rege, leader (in games); i.e. they had been playmates; cf. Ep. I. 1. 59; Allen's Early Latin Remn. 213 n. Others conjecture that rex here is equivalent to rector in rectores imperatoriae iuventae (Burrus and Seneca), Tac. Ann. XIII. 2. 2, which would make the sentence mean they had been schoolfellows. — puertiae: Intr. 183.

9. mutatae togae: from the toga praetexta of boyhood to the toga virilis. The change was made at about the age of sixteen and was of course a memorable event in a man's life.

10. Cressa: i.e. white, made with creta, which was commonly supposed to stand for Creta (= Cressa) terra, though in fact no chalk was obtained from Crete. The meaning is, 'that the day may be a bright one in our memory'; from the practice of recording especially happy days with a white mark, and unhappy with black; cf. Cat. 107. 6 o lucem candidiore nota. Another method, which Pliny (N. H. VII. 131) attributes to the Thracians, of determining the color of one's life by depositing in an urn at the end of each day a stone, white or black as the day had been happy or the reverse, had also passed into a proverb; cf. Cat. 68. 148 quem lapide illa diem candidiore notat; Pers. 2. 1 hunc, Macrine, diem numera meliore lapillo; cf. also S. II. 3. 246. — ne careat: better taken as a final clause, expressing the purpose of the action urged in the following verses.

11. promptae (proleptic), broached; lit. 'brought out,' sc. from the apotheca; cf. III. 21. 8. — amphorae: dative; cf. 24. 1. — The repetition of neu in the following verses, answering to that of et in vss. 1, 2, gives the impression of lively anticipation and thoughts crowding for utterance.

12. Salium: for the usual Saliarem; cf. Intr. 65. The Salii were a college of twelve priests, instituted by Numa to keep the sacred shield (ancile) which he received from heaven. To baffle any attempt to steal it, he caused eleven others to be made exactly like it, and with these twelve the Salii, at their annual festival in March, dressed in a motley costume, half military and half sacerdotal, moved through the streets and about the altars of the gods, singing and dancing.

13. neu, etc.: i.e. Bassus, who it would seem was ordinarily a moderate drinker, must on this occasion keep it up with the best of them. — multi meri: i.e. a generous drinker. For the construction see Intr. 61.

14. Bassum: otherwise unknown. — Threicia: cf. 27. 2 n. — amystide, bumper; from ἀμυστιν (or ἀμυστι) πίνειν, to drink without closing the lips (μύω).

15. rosae, etc.: for the use of flowers at feasts, see II. 3. 13 n.

16. breve, short-lived (as in II. 3. 13); in contrast with vivax.

17. putris, languishing.

18. deponent, will rest. — nec, but . . . not.

XXXVII. On the good news from Egypt, September, B.C. 30. A year had elapsed since the victory at Actium, when Marcus Cicero, son of the orator, consul suffectus, published at Rome the glad tidings that Alexandria had fallen on the first of August, Antony and Cleopatra were dead, and the war was over. Of Antony the poet is silent, conforming in this to the national feeling, which never permitted a triumph to be celebrated except over a foreign foe. The ode is devoted wholly to Cleopatra, who is presented in two strikingly dissimilar scenes. The burst of exultant joy with which the poem opens is modeled upon an ode of Alcaeus on the death of the Lesbian tyrant Myrsilus, beginning (Fr. 20):

Νῦν χρῆ μεθύσθην καὶ τινα πρὸς βλαν πῶνην, ἐπειδὴ κάτθανε Μύρσιλος.

In this strain the poet portrays the Egyptian queen in her furious onslaught on Italy and her ignominious flight. Then with sudden transition (vs. 21), his aversion and abhorrence give place to admiration as he contemplates the last scene, where she resolutely carries out her determination to die rather than be taken captive to Rome; and the ode, which began as a song of triumph over the fallen foe, fittingly closes with a warm tribute to her courage and lofty spirit. — Metre, 176.

1. libero, unshackled; i.e. no longer restrained by anxieties for the danger which had threatened the state; Intr. 124.

2. Saliaribus: i.e. such as are provided for the Salii (see 36. 12 n), who, with the pontifices (cf. II. 14. 28), were proverbial for the sumptuousness of their banquets; cf. Cic. Att. V. 9. 1 cum epulati essemus Saliarem in modum.

3. ornare pulvinar, etc.: i.e. to celebrate a lectisternium, in which the images of the gods were placed in pairs on rich couches, and banquets served to them for several days in succession; cf. Liv. V. 13. 6, XXII. 10. 9. A banquet for the priests was, as usual, an appendage of the ceremony. For the number of pulvinar see Intr. 127.

time, sc. for the priests; Gr. 311 c, with Rem.

5. antehac: Intr. 180. — Caecubum: see 20. 9 n. The Caecuban was a wine of the richer sort, which would be especially reserved for such occasions as this; cf. Epod. 9. 1 repostum Caecubum ad festas dapes; III. 28. 2 sq.

6. cellis avitis: i.e. made in our fathers' time. The wine was not brought directly from the cella vinaria, where it was fermented in large dolia, but from the apotheca in the upper part of the house (hence de-promere; cf. descende, III. 21. 7), where it was kept in sealed amphorae; cf. III. 8. 10 sqq. — Capitolio: see III. 30. 8 n.

7. regina, a queen; suggesting a worse prospect than the traditional bête noire of the Romans, subjection to a king; cf. Prop. IV. 11. 47 quid nunc Tarquinii fractas iuvat esse secures, | si mulier patienda fuit? — dementis ruinas: Intr. 124. The most extravagant reports of the designs of Cleopatra were believed at Rome, and her absolute power over Antony, as well as her previous influence over Julius Caesar, gave real cause for anxiety.

8. funus et: Intr. 114. — parabat: the imperfect gives dum the sense of 'so long as'; Gr. 276 e, N.

9. contaminato grege: i.e. eunuchs (cf. Epod. 9. 13), a class of persons who often rose to high positions under oriental kings.

10. morbo: i.e. unnatural lust. — virorum: used (rather than hominum) with a touch of irony, to enhance the force of turpium; they have debased their manhood. — impotens (sc. sui), wild enough to. See Intr. 101 a.

12. minuit: sc. ei.

13. vix una sospes, the bare escape of a single; Intr. 105 a. So it was probably reported at Rome in the first news of the battle, and Horace had not yet learned the actual fact, that she took all of her sixty ships safely out of the fight. It was Antony's fleet that was burned.

14. lymphatam, unbalanced, rendered 'flighty'; the word is apparently derived from Lymphæ, water-nymphs (see S. I. 5. 97 n), at the sight of whom in the water, according to the popular belief, the unfortunate beholder was bereft of his senses (νυμφόληπτος).

See Preller-Jordan, Röm. Myth., II. 127, and cf. 'panic fear' (see 17. 2 n) and 'lunatic.'—Mareotico: sc. vino: a sweet, fragrant wine produced at Marea, near Alexandria.

15. veros timores: in contrast with the fanciful hopes with which she had come to the conflict.

16. ab Italia, away from Italy; having been turned back from her journey thither.—volentem: sc. eam.

17. remis adurgens, etc.: a poetical exaggeration, based perhaps on misinformation (see vs. 13 n). Cleopatra was pursued by nothing more than the fear of Octavian, who did not go to Egypt till the next year.—accipiter velut, etc.: cf. Il. XXII. 138 ἥτε κίρκος δρεσφιν, ἐλαφρότατος πετεηνῶν, | ῥηιδίως οἴμῃσιν μετὰ τρήρωνα πέλειαν; Verg. A. XI. 721; Ov. M. V. 605 sq.

19. nivalis: i.e. in winter, the time for hunting hares; cf. S. I. 2. 105 sq.

20. Haemoniae: poetic name for Thessaly.—daret ut: Intr. 114. The clause depends on adurgens 17, which takes its time from redegit 15.

21. fatale, deadly.—monstrum: as a strange being in woman's shape.—quae: a construction according to the sense, which would not permit quod; cf. Cic. Fam. I. 9. 15 illa furia (i.e. Clodius) muliebrium religionum, qui non pluris fecerat Bonam Deam quam tres sorores, impunitatem est adsecutus. The idea of the frantic queen, which dominates in the preceding sentence at the expense of the strict grammatical construction, is understood here as there. See notes on minuit 12 and volentem 16. From this point she is consistently treated as the grammatical subject to the end.—generosius, a nobler death, sc. than that of a captive in chains, which would be the death of a slave.

22. perire: Intr. 94 c.—nec muliebriter expavit, showed no womanish terror of; alluding perhaps to the story (Plut. Ant. 79) that Cleopatra at the sight of Proculeius, whom Octavian had sent to take her prisoner, seized a dagger and was barely prevented from stabbing herself. For expavit see Intr. 51 a.

23. nec latentis, etc.: i.e. she did not seek safety in flight and concealment. There can be here no allusion to the story (Plut. Ant. 69) that Cleopatra attempted to have her fleet transported across the isthmus of Suez with a view to escape to some place on the coast of the Red Sea. Horace wrote in the belief that this fleet had been all but annihilated at Actium (see vs. 13 n), and the fleet he has in mind is one that might have been prepared, in the year that had since intervened, especially for flight. — latentis, some unknown.

24. reparavit, gained; lit. got as a recompense for (the loss of her own); cf. reparata 31. 12 n.

25. et, even. So in the next verse. — iacentem, prostrate, i.e. humbled, stripped of its splendor and prestige as a domus potens (35. 23); cf. Cic. Or. 224 depressam, caecam, iacentem domum pluris quam te et fortunas tuas aestimasti. — visere, to gaze upon.

26. asperas, irritable, violent if touched; cf. III. 2. 10.

27. tractare, to handle. For the mood see Intr. 101 a. — atrum: i.e. deadly; see 28. 13 n.

28. corpore, into (lit. with) her body. — combiberet, absorb. The manner of Cleopatra's death is not free from doubt (Dio Cass. LI. 14. 1); the report which Horace follows, that she died from the bite of an asp, was the one generally believed at Rome; cf. Verg. A. VIII. 697, Prop. IV. 11. 53.

29. deliberata morte ferocior, her courage rising with her resolution to die.

30. Liburnis: fast-sailing craft, small and low-built, modeled on those of the Liburnian pirates. They had won great renown at Actium (cf. Epod. I. 1) where they proved more than a match for Antony's immense, but unwieldy ships. — invidens: personifying Liburnis (cf. also saevis). She begrudged them the honor of bringing her to Rome in triumph. It is said that Cleopatra repeatedly expressed her determination not to be led in triumph (οὐ θριαμβεύσομαι).

31. privata: i.e. no longer a queen. — deduci: Intr. 94 i. — superbo: cf. 35. 3.

32. triumpho: ablative. The triumph is thought of as proceeding all the way from Alexandria to the Capitol.

XXXVIII. The first book closes in a quiet tone with an ode which is singularly simple in form as it is in spirit. The poet in the country, reclining under the deep shade of his vine, with a single slave to fill his cup, each of the two wearing a simple wreath of myrtle,—such is the picture with which Horace has chosen to leave his readers at the close of the first book.—Metre, 174.

1. Persicos odi, etc.: a general expression of dislike for all such elaborate furnishings of a feast, called out by seeing the garland which the slave in his zeal is constructing for him.—Persicos: the Persians were proverbial among the Greeks for their luxury and the splendor of their banquets.—puer: cf. pueri, 19, 14 n.

2. nexae philyra: i.e. elaborately constructed of choice flowers, which the philyra served to hold together (coronae sutiles).—coronae: cf. 4. 9.

3. sectari: Intr. 94 j.—quo locorum: Intr. 63.

4. moretur, lingers; as if the rest had in reality gone away.

5. myrto: see II. 15. 6 n. A simple chaplet would be made by twining the sprigs together (corona plectilis).—nihil, not . . . at all, the negative belonging with curo, as in the familiar idiom with nego, nolo, etc.—adlabores, try to embellish. Adlaborare (= cum labore addere) is found only in Horace.

6. sedulus: with adlabores.—ministrum, as you wait; corresponding to bibentem 12.

7. arta: of the foliage.

LIBER SECVNDVS

I.

Motum ex Metello consule civicum bellique causas et vitia et modos

I. C. Asinius Pollio, who holds the place of honor in this book, was a man whose prominence in the community and services to literature fully entitled him to that distinction. Eleven years older than Horace, Pollio had been a friend and correspondent of Cicero, had fought under Caesar at Pharsalus, and had subsequently held important commands, first under the Dictator and then under Antony. He was governor of Transpadane Gaul in B.C. 43-41, and consul, B.C. 40. The next year he won a triumph over the Parthini, a Dalmatian tribe. With these laurels he withdrew from politics and his public life thenceforth was confined to the senate and the courts, in which he was accounted one of the foremost orators of the day. He declined to accompany Octavian to Actium, pleading his friendship for Antony. By his great ability and energy and a courage of opinion that was tempered with excellent discretion, he maintained a position of independence which Augustus found it prudent to respect. In literature Pollio already had a recognized position both as an author and as a friend of authors. He had written tragedies (S. I. 10. 42) and other poetry. Vergil was indebted to him for substantial aid at a very critical time. From the spoils of his Dalmatian campaign he established a library of Greek and Latin works, with busts of authors, and threw it open to the people,—the first public library in Rome.

It is not certain when he undertook the history of the civil war which Horace heralds in the present ode, nor how far down he actually brought his account; but it certainly included Pharsalus and Thapsus, and probably Philippi. As it was Pollio who introduced the practice of reading new compositions to a company of friends invited for the purpose (recitatio),—a practice which thenceforth became a marked feature of literary life at Rome,—we may infer that Horace had heard portions of the work which he so enthusiastically extols.—Metre, 176.

1. motum: more comprehensive than bellum, and embracing the whole disturbance of the normal order of the state. The actual war did not begin for ten years after the date named.—ex Metello consule: i.e. beginning with the year 60 B.C., when Q. Caecilius Metellus and L. Afranius were consuls. For the construction see Intr. 105 a.—civicum: an archaic form for civile, preserved in the technical phrase civica corona, but otherwise only in poetry. So hosticus for hostilis, III. 2. 6.

2. belli: limiting the three fol-res ordinaris, grande munus Cecropio repetes coturno, lowing nouns (connected by et). — vitia : faults committed in conducting the war, blunders; modos : methods of carrying it on, measures.

3. ludum : Fortuna is here thought of, not as the stern goddess of fate of I. 35, but as delighting, like Mars in I. 2. 37, 28. 17, in the exercise of her power; cf. III. 29. 49 sq. No vicissitudes of fortune could be more striking than those of the three great political leaders, who for a time had the Roman world at their feet, and then one after another came to a violent end. — gravis, momentous (sc. to the state).

4. principum, leaders; i.e. Caesar, Pompey, and Crassus. The genitive limits both of the following substantives. — amicitias: i.e. the so-called ‘first triumvirate,’ which (unlike the second) was merely a personal alliance of the three political chiefs, invested with no legal authority. — arma: i.e. those which they (in this case only Caesar and Pompey) took up against one another.

5. nondum expiatis: cf. I. 2. 29. — uncta, smeared; stronger than the more usual incta. — cruoribus: Intr. 128.

6. plenum aleae: because so many persons still living are affected by the story of events in which either they themselves or their kinsmen took part. — opus: in apposition with the whole sentence (tractas with its objects); cf. grande certamen, III. 20. 7.

7. per, over; cf. per mare, I. 6. 7. — ignis, etc.: i.e. the smouldering passions of the civil war, which burned for a long period after peace was restored on the surface.

9. paulum, etc.: i.e. the theatre must do without tragedy for a time; an extravagant compliment to Pollio, whose tragedies, however, it would appear from this, were actually performed on the stage, and not written merely for the recitatio. — musa tragoediae: equivalent in effect to Tragedy (personified); see note on Clio, I. 12. 2.

10. desit: denoting a lack of something needed; stronger than absit, which would denote mere absence; cf. Cic. Brut. 276 hoc unum illi, si nihil utilitatis habebat, afuit; si opus erat, defuit. — pub- licas res (with emphasis on publicas), public events, the history of the state; in contrast with the remoter interests that form the ordinary subjects of tragedy.

11. ordinaris, have set in order, brought out of the confusion of inaccurate and contradictory reports. The expression is a somewhat extravagant substitute for ordine narraveris, the usual phrase for giving a complete and connected account of an occurrence. — munus, calling, function.

12. Cecropio: i.e. Attic; cf. IV. 12. 6. The greatest writers and, according to tradition, the inventor (cf. Ep. II. 3. 275 sqq.) of tragedy, were Athenians. — repetes, return to. — coturno, with the buskin, i.e. wearing it. The high shoe worn by the tragic actor to give him a more imposing appearance, and used by the poets as the symbol of tragedy (e.g. Ep. II. 3. 80), is here assigned to the author, as the soccus of comedy to Plautus in Ep. II. 1. 174; cf. Milton L'Allegro 132 'If Jonson's learnèd sock be on.'

13. insigne, etc.: with the exception of the political prosecution of one C. Cato with which Pollio, after the usual manner of aspiring politicians at Rome, began his career, all his orations of which we have any notice were for the defense.—praesidium, safeguard, reliance; cf. I. 1. 2 n.

14. curiae: for the senate itself, as we say 'the House.' For its case and that of reis, see Intr. 59.

17. iam nunc: i.e. in lively anticipation. Although Horace had probably heard portions of the work, he here makes himself the spokesman of the general public, to express the great expectations with which they awaited its appearance. The scene in this strophe is the cavalry fight in the battle of Pharsalus. For the word-painting cf. Intr. 131.—cornuum . . . litui: both used by cavalry. The cornu had the shape of a semicircle or even a larger arc. For the lituus, see I. 1. 23 n.

19. fugacis: proleptic.

20. equitumque voltus: i.e. 'and paints terror on the faces of the riders.' The vivid picture instead of the plain fact (equites terret) is quite in Horace's manner; but it was no doubt suggested by the actual circumstances. The battle was decided by the rout of Pompey's inexperienced cavalry, who were terrified by the blows which the Gallic and German troopers, by Caesar's order, aimed at their faces; cf. Plut. Caes. 45, Florus IV. 2. 50 (vox Caesaris) cruenta, sed docta et ad victoriam efficax, 'miles, faciem feri!'

Audire magnos iam videor duces et cuncta terrarum subacta praeter atrocem animum Catonis.

25 Iuno et deorum quisquis amior Afris inulta cesserat impotens tellure victorum nepotes rettulit inferias Iugurthae.

21. audire : to hear with my own ears, not merely read. The word is placed first for emphasis and to continue the thought of the preceding strophe: I am transported to the presence of the events themselves instead of reading of them as cold facts. This distinction, with disregard of the precise meaning of audire (as in III. 10. 5; cf. vides I. 14. 3), is carried on to the second half of the strophe: I learn of the subjection of the world as a living fact accomplished before my eyes.—magnos duces : i.e. their voices (in battle, as the next verse shows). He means Caesar and Pompey themselves.

23. cuncta terrarum : Intr. 64.

24. atrocem, stern.—Catonis : see I. 12. 36 n.

25-40. The mention of Cato suggests the battle of Thapsus, in which the poet sees the impressive fact that just there, on the very soil where Rome had gained her most signal victories, she was doomed to witness a costly sacrifice of her own sons. This leads him on to some general reflections on the enormous outpouring of Roman blood in the civil war, till he suddenly checks himself and recalls his muse from the pursuit of so mournful a theme to her own proper sphere of love and mirth.

25. Iuno : the patron-goddess of Carthage; cf. Verg. A. I. 15 sqq. —et deorum quisquis, etc., and every (other) divinity who, though disposed to be friendly to the Africans, had retired from the land, powerless to avenge it. It was the common belief that the gods of a doomed city abandoned it before its fall; cf. Verg. A. II. 351 excessere omnes adytis arisque relictis | di; Silius Ital. II. 365 et iam damnata cessit Karthagine Mavors. It is said that in the third Punic war Scipio instituted certain rites to transfer Juno from Carthage to Rome (Serv. on Verg. A. XII. 841). —deorum : Intr. 63. —quisquis, whoever else. Alius is usually omitted in such phrases; cf. Liv. IX. 18. 13 mirabiliores quam Alexander aut quisquam rex.

26. impotens : here in its literal sense, which is unusual; cf. I. 37. 10. The helplessness is of course not general, but only relates to one object, implied in inulta.

27. victorum : sc. in the Jugurthine war. That this war was more prominent in Horace's mind than the greater, though more remote, Punic wars, was perhaps due to the recent publication of Sallust's monograph on the subject.—nepotes : among the slain at Thapsus there may well have been actual grandsons of those who fought in the Jugurthine war; the Pompeian commander himself, Metellus Scipio, was the grandson of Metellus Numidicus, who had earned his surname by victory over Jugurtha.

28. rettulit, have offered up (by way of atonement); see I. 3. 7 n. For the number, see Intr. 77.

29. quis non, etc.: two questions compressed into one: What plain is not more fertile, and does not bear witness, etc.?—pinguior: cf. Verg. G. I. 491 nec fuit indignum superis bis sanguine nostro | Emathiam et latos Haemi pinguescere campos.

30. impia: as fought by 'brothers' (cf. I. 35. 34) against one another.

31. Medis: see I. 2. 22 n.; for the case, Intr. 54. It was a sore aggravation of the calamity to think of the glee with which the great enemy of the empire watched the Romans cutting one another's throats. Cf. II. I. 255 sqq.

32. Hesperiae: here an adjective (= Italiae); see III. 6. 8 n.—ruinae, the downfall; cf. I. 2. 25 n.

33. gurgēs, flood, open waters, in contrast with running streams. In the following questions we have another contrasted pair, sea and shore. It is noteworthy how skilfully the poet, without monotony, keeps the reader's attention fixed through two strophes on the one thought that holds for the moment his own fancy,—the battle ground of the civil war, stretching from one end of the empire to the other. Allowing for poetic license, the picture is a true one; cf. Flor. IV. 2. 3 sqq.

34. Daunia: see I. 22. 14 n.; here used as a special type to represent the Roman soldier in general; cf. III. 5. 9 and see Intr. 117 a.

35. decoloravere, deeply dyed. The de- is here intensive as in dealbare, denigrare; cf. I. 9. 11 n.

36. For the assonance see Intr. 131.

37. sed ne, etc.: cf. I. 6. 10 and 17 sqq. (with intr. note); III. 3. 69.

38. Cae retracts, etc., take up again the function of the Cean dirge, i.e. undertake the service in poetry once performed by Simonides of Ceos, whose elegies (θρήνοι; cf. lacrimis Simonideis, Cat. 38. 8; here neniae),—for example those in honor of the warriors who fell at Marathon and at Thermopylae,—were the best of their class.

39. Dionaeo : i.e. of Venus, daughter of Dione. Venus herself was sometimes called Dione; cf. Dionaei Caesaris (as descendant of Venus), Verg. E. 9. 47; Ov. F. II. 461. — sub antro : cf. I. 5. 3 n.

40. levioꝛe plectro : i.e. of a lighter strain (descriptive abl.); cf. IV. 2. 33 n; Ov. M. X. 150 cecini plectro graviore gigantas | ... nunc opus est levioꝛe lyra. For the plectrum see I. 26. 11 n.

II. C. Sallustius Crispus was the grandnephew and adopted son of the historian Sallust, and at the death of the latter, B.C. 34, inherited his enormous wealth. Like Maecenas, he abstained from the usual pursuit of political honors, but under the affectation of indolence and lack of ambition exercised an influence beyond that of the most powerful senators; and by his intelligence and sagacity he won a place in the secret counsels of Augustus second only to that of Maecenas himself. He maintained his influence to the end of Augustus' life and through the first years of Tiberius, and died at an advanced age A.D. 20 (Tac. Ann. III. 30). In regard to his style of living Tacitus calls him diversus a veterum instituto per cultum et munditias, copiaque et affluentia luxu propior. Horace's testimony in this ode, on the contrary, distinctly credits Sallustius with moderation and liberality in the use of his wealth. The poem was probably written in B.C. 27, when the restoration of Phraates was still fresh in the public mind. — Metre, 174.

1. color, lustre; cf. Plin. N. H. XXXIII. 58 color in argento clarior est (sc. quam in auro), magisque diei similis. — avaris : the disposition of the miser is attributed to the earth, in which he hoards his money; Intr. 124.

2. abdito terris : cf. S. I. 1. 41 quid iuvat immensum te argenti pondus et auri | furtim defossa timidum deponere terra? terris may be either abl. (Intr. 69) or dative (Intr. 53; cf. Verg. A. II. 553 lateri abdidit ensem). — inimice : apodosis to the condition nisi temperato, etc., — (who wouldst be) a foe . . . unless, etc. — lamnae : probably a colloquial expression, used here in disparagement for money as mere metal, — bullion. For the form see Intr. 183.

3. Crispe Sallusti : such inversion of the nomen and cognomen (with omission of the praenomen) appears to have been common in colloquial language from early times. It is frequent in Cicero's letters, and is much affected by Tacitus.

5. vivet : i.e. in fame, as indicated in the following verses. — extento aevo, a prolonged life (sc. beyond its natural limits). — Proculeius : C. Proculeius Varro Murena, brother of Terentia, the wife of Maecenas. Like Maecenas and Sallustius he remained in the equestrian order, but Augustus held him in such high esteem and confidence (see I. 37. 22 n) that he at one time thought of him as a husband for his daughter Julia (Tac. Ann. IV. 40. 8).

6. in, towards. — animi paterni : he divided his own property in equal shares with his two brothers, who had lost theirs in the civil war. For the case see Intr. 66 d.

7. aget, will waft. — penna, wing; cf. Verg. A. IX. 473 pinata Fama. — metuente : i.e. that refuses (Intr. 94 l); not implying that there is any danger of it (cf. Intr. 95).

9. regnes : the indefinite second person subjunctive in apodosis, the protasis being expressed in domando. For the thought cf. O. T. Prov. 16. 32 'He that ruleth his spirit (is better) than he that taketh a city.'

11. iungas : i.e. under your sway, as explained by the following clause, which repeats the same idea in another form. — uterque Poenus : i.e. the Carthaginians of Africa and those of Spain, where there was a Carthago nova with other Punic colonies.

12. uni : sc. tibi (implied in iungas).

13. crescit, is aggravated; Intr. 116 b. The subject is still, in thought, the avidus spiritus, but it is merged, in Horace's favorite manner, in the figure which he employs to describe its nature; cf. Ep. II. 2. 28 sqq., and see Intr. 123. — indulgens sibi, by self-indulgence; joined loosely to hydrops, which is in a manner personified and confused with the hydropicus, the disease with the patient.

14. nec sitim pellit, etc. : i.e. covetousness is not cured by gratifying it, but rather increased; the only cure is to root out the desire. The patient is sick; if you give him to drink he will only want more; you must make him well, and then his thirst will cease. The comparison was not uncommon; cf. Polyb. XIII. 2. 2, Ov. F. I. 215, Stob. Flor. X. 46; Cic. Cat. 1. 31.

15. venis, corpore : Intr. 70.—aquosus : i.e. due to the water settling under the skin.—albo : the unhealthy whiteness of disease.

17–24. This subjection of the desires, and not the gratification even of the very highest of human wishes, constitutes true happiness and true power; cf. IV. 9. 45 sqq.

17. Cyri solio : the throne of Parthia is properly so called, because the Arsacidae succeeded to the power of the Persian kings (see I. 2. 22 n), which in the popular estimate was the summit of earthly happiness; cf. III. 9. 4.—Phraaten : see I. 26. 5 n.

18. plebi : i.e. from the popular judgment; cf. III. 14. 1 n. For the case see Intr. 57.—beatorum : for the synapheia see Intr. 174 b.

19. Virtus, etc. : cf. S. I. 3. 41 vellem . . . isti | errori nomen Virtus posuisset honestum. He means virtue as set forth by its expounders, the philosophers, especially the Stoics, whose doctrine on the present subject falls in with Horace's own views, so that he even employs, though only in a figurative sense, their favorite paradox that the wise man alone is king, in which elsewhere (S. I. 3. 124 sqq.) he finds rich material for his satire. See Intr. 8 (end).—falsis, wrong; the opposite of vera vocabula rerum, Sal. Cat. 52. 11.

21. tutum : intimating the defect in the earthly crown, as exemplified in the recent experience of Phraates.

22. propriam, which shall not be taken away from him; cf. Ep. II. 2. 171 sqq.; S. II. 6. 4 nil amplius oro, | Maia nate, nisi ut propria haec mihi munera faxis; Lucilius 664 L. cūm sciam nihil esse in vita proprium mortali datum; and see note on tutum, above.

23. quisquis, whoever he be, that,—whether peasant or king.—oculo inretorto spectat : i.e. merely glances at them as he passes by, but does not keep rolling his eyes back to see them as long as possible; gives them no further thought; cf. respicio and 'regard.'

24. acervos : sc. of money; cf. S. I. 1. 44.

Aequam memento rebus in arduis servare mentem, non secus in bonis ab insolenti temperatam laetitia, moriture Delli, 5 seu maestus omni tempore vixeris, seu te in remoto gramine ^{on} per dies

III. Although Horace puts at the head of this ode his favorite maxim of the golden mean (II. 10, S. I. 1. 106 sqq.), he devotes the main part of it to only one side of that doctrine. The warning against over-confident joy in prosperity is left as a mere parenthetical remark in the first strophe, and the poet proceeds to teach at length the maxim, sapiens finire memento tristitiam vitaeque labores (I. 7. 17). 'There is nothing to be gained by brooding over the troubles of life; death will come all the same, and the brief time given us for enjoyment will be irrecoverably spent.' Q. Delli, to whom the ode is addressed, had attained a questionable reputation in the recent political struggles, and had been wittily dubbed by Messala desultor bellorum civilium from the happy faculty he had displayed of jumping at the right moment and always lighting on his feet in the successful party (Sen. Suas. I. 7). He was now among the more intimate friends of Augustus, and being a man of literary tastes and a writer,—he prepared a history of Antony's Parthian campaign, in which he had himself commanded part of the forces,—he was no doubt brought into more or less familiar relations with Horace in the circle of Maecenas. — Metre, 176. a dactyl

1. aequam, unruffled.—arduis: in prose, adversis (cf. 10. 13 n); 'when the way is steep.'

2. servare: (not parare, as in Ep. I. 18. 112) implying that he has the aequus animus now, and putting the res arduae into the future,—'when hardship comes.' —non secus: sc. memento servare.

3. insolenti, extravagant; see I. 5. 8 n.

4. moriture: Intr. 104 b. It is the apodosis of the two conditional clauses which follow: 'since you will die just the same whether . . . or . . .' It expresses the reason for the preceding injunction (cf. I. 28. 6 n), but has more special reference to the first part, which continues to be the text through the rest of the ode; see intr. note.

6. remoto gramine, some grassy nook; cf. I. 1. 21 sq., Epod. II. 23 sq. — per dies festos: in contrast with omni tempore. The alternative is 'always melancholy, or sometimes (on proper occasions) seeking relaxation.' per is distributive: on those days as they come round; cf. per autumnos. 14. 15.

8. interiore: i.e. older. The jars farther back in the apotheca would be those which had been left undisturbed the longest.—nota, brand; properly the stamp or inscription on the amphora, or on a tag attached to it, recording the name and date (consuls of the year) of the vintage; hence used in general for quality of wine; cf. S. I. 10. 24.—Falerni: cf. I. 20. 10 n.

9. quo, what does it mean that; lit. what (is all this beauty) for?—ingens albaque: Intr. 122.

10. hospitem, inviting.—consociare: Intr. 94 c. The object umbram expresses the result of the action, as if it were consociando facere; cf. sinus, I. 33. 16 n.

11. quid, why, in the same sense as quo 9.—obliquo, zigzag, winding, always oblique in reference to the direct course.—laborat trepidare, struggle and bustle; cf. Ep. I. 10. 21 (aqua) per prorum trepidat cum murmure rivum. For the construction see Intr. 94 h.

12. rivo: ablative of the 'way by which.'

13. huc, etc.: the poet proceeds

as if the answer to the preceding question were obvious.—vina . . . unguenta . . . flores: the three essentials of a Roman convivium. The ointment was for the hair, the flowers for garlands; cf. 7. 21 sqq., I. 4. 9.—et . . . et: repeated in vs. 15.—brevis: cf. breve lilium, I. 36. 16 n.

15. res, circumstances.—aetas: cf. I. 9. 16 sq.—sorum: the Fates, Clotho, Lachesis and Atropos, of whom the first spun (κλώθω) the thread of life, the second determined (λαγχάνω) its length, the third, 'the Inexorable' (ἀ+τρέπω) cut it off.

16. atra: cf. I. 28. 13 n. Although the thread is the symbol of life, the whole conception relates to death; the purpose of the allegory is to represent not the giving of life, but the ending of it.

17. coemptis saltibus: extensive mountain pastures, formed by buying up (co-) a number of contiguous tracts from small owners. Great incomes were derived from the flocks and herds raised on such pastures.—domo: in the

18. villa, country-seat. A villa on the Tiber was especially desirable, and the banks of the river were thronged with them (Plin. N. H. III. 54).—flavus: see I. 2. 13 n.—lavit: in the Odes and Epodes Horace uses the forms of lavere only; in the Satires and Epistles those of lavare as well.

19. cedes: Intr. 116 f.—exstructis in altum: cf. ingentis acervos, 2. 23.

21. dives natus ab, a wealthy descendant of.—Inacho: first (mythical) king of Argos, here typical of very ancient as well as illustrious ancestry; Intr. 117 a.

23. sub divo moreris, you linger in the light of day, i.e. live, but suggesting that our life is but a brief sojourn on earth. For divo cf. I. 18. 13 n. The subject is no longer Dellius, but the indefinite 'you.'

24. victima, etc.: i.e. 'since you are a victim (all the same),' etc.; cf. moriture, 4 n.—nil miserantis, pitiless; cf. 14. 6.

116 g. omnium (limiting sors) would more naturally have been cuiusque.

26. urna: another conception of the allotment of death to the individual. Necessity (cf. III. 1. 14 sqq.) holds in her capacious urn a sors (a small piece of wood or similar material, with distinguishing marks) for every man; the urn is continually shaken (versatur), and when a lot flies out the man is doomed to die. For this method of determining by lot cf. Il. VII. 175 sqq.—serius ocus: between two words or phrases which are opposite in meaning and together form a complete idea the conjunction is commonly omitted, as communus eminus, a tergo a fronte, velit nolit, etc.

27. exitura, impositura: Intr. 104 b.—in, for; cf. I. 7. 8.—aeternum: Intr. 176 b.

28. exsilium: the suggestion in moreris, that life is only a temporary sojourn and not a home, is abandoned again, and the poet recurs to the thought of the preceding strophe, cedes, etc.—cumbae: Charon's; cf. Verg. A. VI. 303.

IV. To 'Xanthias of Phocis,' on his having fallen in love with his maid-servant. Whether Xanthias here stands for a real person or is a mere creature of fancy it is impossible to say with certainty, in spite of the allusion to the poet's own age at the close. The air of reality that pervades the poem and the quality of the humor certainly give the impression that Horace is here chaffing, under an assumed name, one of his own acquaintances; but it is quite possible that his only aim was to give an impression of reality to a situation wholly fictitious. He points out with mock gravity that there is illustrious precedent for being enamoured of a slave girl, and further comforts his friend with the assurance that one so noble and so disinterested must be a princess in disguise at least. — Metre, 174.

1. ne sit tibi pudori, you needn't be ashamed of. The clause is perhaps best taken as a parenthetical clause of purpose (Gr. 317 c), explaining the poet's motive in citing the following examples; cf. IV. 9. 1 sqq. Others take it as hortatory.

2. Xanthia Phoceu : cf. Opuntiae Megillae, I. 27. 10. — prius : i. e. before you. — insolentem, haughty (see I. 5. 8 n), and hence likely to hold himself high above a serva; see Intr. 116 a.

3. Briseis : see II. I. 346 sqq., IX. 342 sq. — niveo colore : cf. III. 27. 25; I. 19. 5 Glyceræ nitor, splendidis Pario purius marmore. The ablative is instrumental.

4. movit, touched. For the anaphora, with change of rhythm, cf. I. 2. 5; Intr. 116 g.

6. captivæ dominum : cf. insolentem serva, vs. 2 n. — Tecmessæ : the daughter of a Phrygian king whom Ajax slew in single combat in one of his raids during the siege of Troy; Soph. Aiæx 210, 487 sqq.

7. arsit : sc. with love. — Atrides : Agamemnon. — medio in triumpho : with arsit, suggesting much the same contrast as insolentem 2.

8. virgine : Cassandra, who at the fall of Troy became the prize of Agamemnon. For the case see Intr. 72. — rapta : by Ajax, the son of Oileus, from the altar of Athena; cf. Verg. A. II. 403 sqq., I. 39 sqq.

9. barbarae, etc.: an amplification of triumpho, to relieve the monotony of the list of examples; see I. 2. 7 n. — barbarae: (from the Greek point of view), those of the Trojans and their allies; cf. Ep. I. 2. 7 Graecia barbariae lento collisa duello. — cecidere turmae: the allusion is probably to the time when Achilles came out to battle with his Myrmidons (Thessalo) after the death of Patroclus, routed the Trojans with great slaughter, and finally killed Hector (Il. XX.-XXII.).

10. Thessalo: used collectively; cf. Poeno, I. 12. 38. — ademptus Hector, the loss of Hector; Intr. 105 a. Cf. Il. XXIV. 243 ῥήϊτεροι γὰρ μᾶλλον Ἀχαιῶσιν δὴ ἔσεσθε | κείνου τεθνηῶτος ἐναίρμεν.

11. tradidit, delivered . . . into the hands of; in what sense, is defined by leviora tolli (= 'an easier prey'). — tollit: for the infinitive see Intr. 101 e.

13. nescias an, etc.: continuing in the same vein, the poet plays on the well known fact that children of good families were sometimes kidnapped and sold into slavery. — nescias an, very likely, — you can't tell; with the usual affirmative implication of nescio an. The meaning is: You must look up her parents, and no doubt it will turn out that you will make a distinguished match with your Phyllis. — beati, rich, well to do; cf. I. 4. 14 n.

14. flavae: see note on Pyrrha, I. 5. 3. — te decorent, will be an honor to you.

15. regium genus et penatis, etc., she mourns (the loss of) royal ancestry, — i.e. she is no longer accounted their descendant, a slave being filius nullius, — and the unkindness of household gods (Intr. 105 a). The two objects of maeret correspond accurately to fidem mutatosque deos, objects of flebit, I. 5. 5.

17. crede, rest assured. — non illam: cf. non ego, I. 18. 11 n. — tibi: cf. Iovi, I. 21. 4; Intr. 54. — de plebe: sc. esse.

19. aversam: the strong expression betrays the irony. — potuisse: emphatic; Intr. 116 b.

22. integer, dispassionately; cf.

III. 7. 22. — suspiciari: sc. eum (one). For the mood see Intr. 94 k.

23. cuius, etc.: Horace was 40 in B.C. 25. — trepidavit claudere, has fluttered to the verge of; Intr. 94 g.

V. Counsel and encouragement to an impatient lover. 'She is too young still, — a frolicsome heifer, an unripe grape. Wait patiently: by and by she will come to you of herself.' As it is Horace's practice to name the person he addresses, the ode is regarded by some as a soliloquy, like III. 12. — Metre, 176.

1. nondum valet: the subject (iuvenca tua) is postponed to the beginning of the positive description, vs. 5, and there expressed in a modified form, animus tuae iuvencae; cf. I. 37. 14 mentemque (eius) . . . redegit, . . . ab Italia volantem

remis adurgens. This vagueness and the absence of any direct intimation in the whole description that a young girl is the real subject, — quite in contrast with III. 11. 9 sqq., — shows that though the offensive form of the comparison was tolerable to Roman taste, the poet is not insensible to its grossness, and uses some skill to keep it from coming in too close contact with the subject; see vs. 9 n. — ferre: Intr. 94 n.

2. munia comparis aequare: equivalent to ferre iugum pariter, I. 35. 28. Her strength (valet) 'is not equal to' the task of a yoke-fellow.

5. circa: cf. I. 18. 2 n.

8. ludere: Intr. 94 c. — cum vitulis: i.e. (stripped of the imagery) she has still the feelings of a child, and loves best to play with other children.

9. tolle: cf. I. 27. 2 n. The new figure enforces the exhortation to patience, and serves the further purpose of throwing the former comparison somewhat into the background, as we approach the name and person of Lalage.

10. lividos: the color of the half-ripe grapes,—a leaden blue spreading over the green; cf. Prop. V. 2. 13 variat liventibus uva racemis.

11. distinguet, will tint.

12. purpureo colore (with distinguet): denoting a further stage of ripening; cf. Ov. M. III. 484 ut variis solet uva racemis | ducere purpureum nondum matura colorem. Apparently a deep wine color that precedes dead ripeness (which is expressed by niger) is intended.—varius: as clothing the face of nature in many hues. For the order of words in this sentence see Intr. III.

13. ferox, headstrong; cf. invida aetas, I. II. 7.

14. quos tibi dempserit annos: i.e. the time you 'lose' by waiting will bring her to maturity. annos is used in a pregnant sense, the years of our life with all they bring or take away. In this sense the years that bring us to the prime of life are thought of as coming, those after our prime as passing away; cf. Ep. II. 3. 175 multa ferunt anni venientes commoda secum, | multa recedentes adimunt; Ep. II. 2. 55 singula de nobis anni praedantur euntes.

16. fronte: index of the feelings, as the cheek with us; cf. frontis urbanae, Ep. I. 9. 11.—maritum, a mate.

17. dilecta quantum non, a greater favorite than. dilecta takes its time from petet.—fugax, capricious.

18. albo, etc.: descriptive of Chloris.

19. pura, unclouded; cf. I. 34. 7.

20. mari: Intr. 69.—Cnidius Gyges: cf. Xanthia Phoece, 4. 2 n.

21. quem si, etc.: cf. I. 2. 7 n. The poet has in mind here the story of Achilles at the court of Lycomedes; see I. 8. 13 n.—choro, a bevy.

23. obscurum, disguised (as it is).—solutis, flowing; cf. III. 4. 62.

VI. Of the trusty friend to whom the poet here confides his longings for a quiet old age nothing further is known with certainty. It is probable, however, that he is the same Septimius to whom Horace gave a letter of introduction to Tiberius (Ep. I. 9), in which he commends him as 'fortem bonumque,' and also identical with the friend mentioned by Augustus in a letter to the poet which Suetonius has preserved: 'tui qualem habeam memoriam poteris ex Septimio quoque nostro audire.' The ode was probably written in B.C. 27 or 26, when the recently conquered Cantabrians rebelled, and Augustus went to Spain to conduct the war against them in person. That it was not among the earliest odes is shown by the last verse: Horace would not have called himself vates unless he had felt sure that his friends at least already recognized his success in lyric poetry. Some years later he expresses (Ep. I. 7. 44) the same preference for the two resorts whose attractiveness he here extols.—Metre, 174.

1. Gadis: i.e. to the end of the world; cf. 2. 11.—aditure: see Intr. 104 e.—et . . . et: the conjunctions serve to bridge over the pauses between the verses, with an effect similar to that of elision (Intr. 174 b).

2. Cantabrum: cf. Thessalo, 4. 10 n. The Cantabrians were first reduced by Statilius Taurus B.C. 29, and after successive rebellions finally subdued by Agrippa B.C. 19.—iuga: Intr. 128.—ferre: Intr. 101 c.

3. barbaras, wild. The epithet shows that by Syrtis is probably meant here, as in I. 22. 5 and Verg. A. IV. 41 inhospita Syrtis, the coast rather than the adjacent waters. The thought, however, is not of travelling there but of the dangerous voyage thither. The three objects of aditure indicate by special examples the fatigues and dangers expressed in general terms by maris et viarum militiaeque, 7 sq.—Maura: most of the Roman poets betray a certain vagueness in their geographical notions; cf. Verg. G. I. 490 sqq.

reference, however, to the quality of the oil it yields; cf. S. II. 4. 69 pressa Venafranae quod baca remisit olivae.—Venafro: an old Samnite town on the eastern slope of the hills between the lower Liris and the upper Volturnus, now Venafro; famous for the excellence of its olive oil; cf. S. II. 8. 45; Varro R. R. I. 2. 6 quod vinum (conferam) Falerno, quod oleum Venafro? For the case see Intr. 57.

18. amicus, favored of; cf. dilectus in the quotation from Statius below, and see I. 26. 1 n.—Aulon: 'locus contra Tarentinam regionem' (Porphyrio); whether a mountain (as Acro says) or not is uncertain. Cf. Mart. XIII. 125 nobilis et lanis et felix vitibus Aulon | det pretiosa tibi vellera, vina mihi.

19. fertili: the quality conferred by the god is attributed to him; cf. modici Liberi, I. 18. 7, and Intr. 125.—Falernis uvis: cf. I. 20. 10 n., and Varro's words, 17 n.

20. invidet: see note on decedunt 15. This passage has been imitated by Statius Silv. II. 2. 4 qua Bromio dilectus ager collesque per altos | uritur et prelis non invidet uva Falernis.

21. et beatae arces, those favored heights; nearer definition of locus. For arces cf. I. 2. 3.

22. postulant, call for; a sort of personification, as in our expression 'an inviting place.'—ibi tu, etc.: i.e. there we will live till death shall part us, taking me away,—a delicate expression of the sincerity of his affection: he wishes to be spared the pain of losing his friend.—calentem favillam: i.e. my ashes, when you gather them warm from the pyre and put them in the urn.

23. debita: sc. to me as your friend.

VII. The poet's greeting to his old friend and comrade in arms, Pompeius Varus, on his return to Rome after long years of absence. Of Pompeius nothing is known beyond what is indicated in the ode itself,—that he had made the campaign of Philippi with Horace, and afterwards persisted in the struggle against the triumvirs, serving presumably under Sex. Pompeius (Intr. 12). The mention of ciboria (vs. 22 n) has been conjectured to be an allusion to his having served also under Antony, but that point as well as the time of his return must remain undetermined, except that the latter, on the general evidence of the date of the odes, must be placed after the end of the war of Actium.—Metre, 176.

VII.

O saepe mecum tempus in ultimum deducte Bruto militiae duce, quis te redonavit Quiritem dis patriis Italoque caelo, 5 Pompei, meorum prime sodalium, cum quo morantem saepe diem mero fregi coronatus nitentis malobathro Syrio capillos?

1. saepe: Horace's service under Brutus extended through the greater part of the two years 43 and 42, B.C. — tempus ultimum, extreme peril; lit. 'the last extremity,' like extremae res (e.g. Caes. B. G. II. 25. 5); cf. Cat. 64. 150 potius quam tibi supremo in tempore deessem.

2. deducte . . . duce: regarded by some as a reflection on Brutus; but the play on words is probably not intentional; cf. fregi . . . fracta, vss. 7, 11; adduxere . . . ducere, IV. 12. 13 sq.

3. quis: not necessarily implying that Pompeius owed his restoration to the favor or mediation of any particular person. The question refers not to permission to come home, which Pompeius had under the general amnesty after Actium, but to the circumstances which brought him or enabled him to come. The question is an expression of surprise, and quis may have for answer a god as well as a man; cf. vss. 13 and 17. — redonavit: stronger than reddidit. The word is found only in Horace. — Quiritem, a citizen, in double contrast with his former condition; no longer a soldier nor an outlaw and exile. The singular is archaic and is used only by the poets.

4. dis patriis: i.e. to the home of your fathers; cf. III. 27. 49 liqui patrios penatis. — Italo: for the prosody see Intr. 178.

5. Pompei: dissyllabic; Intr. 180. — prime, first; probably in the sense of earliest.

7. fregi: with reference to morantem, which indicates a persistent monotony that yields to the treatment named; the monotonous day is 'broken' as we speak of 'breaking up' a cold or 'killing' time. The idea is not of 'making shorter,' but of destroying; cf. Cic. de Or. I. 265 nunc et Scaevola paulum requiescet dum se calor frangat; Verg. A. IV. 569 rumpe moras; Lucan, I. 204 moras solvit belli. — coronatus: see 3. 13 n.

8. malobathro: a Greek word corrupted from the Indian name, tamalapatram (= 'leaf of the tamala'), — of the fragrant leaf of the laurus cassia; here used for the oil of cassia. — Syrio: cf. Syra merce, I. 31. 12 n. — capillos: Intr. 42. With the whole description cf. Tib. III. 6. 63 iam dudum Syrio madefactus tempora nardo | debueram sertis implicuisse comas.

Tecum Philippos et celerem fugam 10 sensi, relictæ non bene parmula, cum fracta virtus et minaces turpe solum tetigere mento.
 Sed me per hostis Mercurius celer
 denso paventem sustulit aere ; 15 te rursus in bellum resorbens unda fretis tulit aestuosis.

9. Philippos, etc.: i.e. the battle and the flight; not a case of hendiadys.

10. sensi, I experienced. — relictæ parmula: whether Horace is here recalling a literal fact or merely employs the familiar Greek phrase in a figurative sense, it is difficult to say; but the latter is much more probable. The Greek ideal of 'returning with one's shield or on it' was foreign to the more business-like Roman, and belonged to war on a smaller scale, with simpler organization, and where personal prowess counted for more. It is true that as tribune Horace would have immediate charge of his men in battle, and might have occasion to use a shield (cf. Ennius Ann. 450 sqq. M), but it was no part of his duty to expose himself to personal danger. That, however, would not prevent him from using the stock phrase, — which is at least as near the reality as vss. 13 sq., — especially as he found in each of his great models in Greek lyric, Archilochus, (Fr. 6), Alcaeus (Herod. V. 95), and apparently Anacreon (Fr. 28), a similar confession of the loss of his shield in battle. — non bene: not a confession of cowardice, as some too seriously take it; the phrase is entirely colorless and not only says nothing that is not already implied in relictæ parmula, but rather breaks the force of that confession, as a man disarms criticism by anticipating it with a frank avowal that he does not defend his conduct. The diminutive parmula is in keeping with this deprecatory tone.

11. fracta (sc. est) virtus, etc.: i.e. when brave men went down in the crash, and braggarts (minaces) were humbled to the dust.

12. turpe: Intr. 125. — solum tetigere mento: i.e. in prostrating themselves before the victors; cf. Caesar's description of his prisoners at Pharsalus, B. C. III. 98. 2 passis palmis proiecti ad terram flentes ab eo salutem petiverunt.

13. sed me, etc., but (at this point we were separated;) I, etc. — Mercurius: Horace in effect calls his safe escape to Italy, through what were doubtless very real dangers (cf. paventem), 'providential'; cf. III. 4. 26, 28; Intr. 13. Mercury as διάκτορος conducted him as he did Priam unseen through the Greek camp (I. 10. 13 sqq.). See, however, 17. 29 n.

14. denso aere: ἥρι πολλῷ, as Aphrodite rescued Paris, Il. III. 381. The device occurs frequently in Homer, and was borrowed by the Latin poets, as Verg. A. I. 411, etc.

16. unda: the surging sea of Ergo obligatam redde Iovi dapem, longaue fessum militia latus depone sub lauru mea, nec 20 parce cadis tibi destinatis.

Oblivioso leviam Massico
 ciboria exple, funde capacibus public life (cf. mensor civilibus undis, Ep. I. 1. 16). When Pompeius seemed to be so near the shore (of peaceful private life) that like Horace he would actually gain a footing, the receding wave drew him back (resorbens) and carried him once more out to sea. — fretis: instrumental ablative.

17. ergo: i.e. since in spite of all this you are safely home at last; referring back to vs. 3. — obligatam (sc. votis; cf. 8. 5), pledged; cf. debito, I. 36. 2 n. — Iovi: as the universal source of help and blessing (Iuppiter Opitulus, Conservator, Custos), and particularly as protector of strangers; cf. I. 28. 28 n. — dapem: here in its proper sense of a sacrificial feast; see, further, note on sanguine, I. 36. 2.

18. latus: often used, as here, in a wider sense, for the whole body or person, or for any part of it, in reference to external contact or influence; cf. III. 10. 20; 27. 26; S. I. 3. 59 nulli malo latus obdit apertum; II. 6. 34 aliena negotia centum circa saliunt latus; Mart. VI. 76. 1 sacri lateris custos (i.e. the emperor's body-guard).

19. lauru: a favorite shade-tree on account of its thick foliage; cf. 15. 9 n. — nec parce: Intr. 88, 89 n.

20. cadis: Intr. 128. — tibi destinatis: i.e. as the event has proved; the wine was set apart for keeping high holiday (cf. Epod. 9. 1) and Pompeius' unexpected return has brought the fitting occasion.

21. oblivioso: cf. Tib. II. 1. 46 seculo mero; Intr. 125. — Massico: see I. 1. 19 n.

22. ciboria: cups of polished metal (levia) shaped, according to Porphyrio, like the leaves of the Egyptian bean after which they were named. — exple, fill high. The chiasmic asyndeton (exple, funde) marks the poet's eagerness, as he hastens forward, in imagination, to the enjoyment of the feast.

23. conchis: shell-shaped vessels for ointment. — quis: sc. puer; cf. II. 18, I. 38. 1.

24. deproperare: a compressed expression for propre conficere or the like; cf. III. 24. 62. For the prefix de- see I. 35 n, I. 9. 11 n. For the infinitive see Intr. 94 b. — apio: cf. I. 36. 16.

25. curat, will see to. — -ve: Intr. 119 b. — Venus: i.e. the iactus Veneris, the highest throw of the tali, in which the faces turned up were all different. — arbitrum bibendi: see I. 4 18 n.

dicet bibendi? Non ego sanius

VIII.

Vlla si iuris tibi peierati poena, Barine, nocuisset umquam, dente si nigro fieres vel uno
 turpior ungui,
 5 crederem; sed tu simul obligasti perfidum votis caput, enitescis pulchrior multo, iuvenumque prodis publica cura.

27. Edonis: a Thracian tribe;
 cf. I. 27. 2 n.—recepto, found again.

VIII. Barine, 'the Maid of Barium,' is a heartless coquette. The poet declines her professions of devotion with ironical compliments on the impunity and success with which she plays her perfidious game. — Metre, 174.

1. ulla . . . umquam, uno . . . ungui: the alliteration (Intr. 131) aids the emphasis. — iuris peierati: formed from peierare after the analogy of ius iurandum from iurare, the perfect being naturally used, especially with poena, to express the accomplished fact which the punishment should follow. The phrase is not found elsewhere.

2. poena nocuisset: strictly either poena fuisset or ius peieratum nocuisset would have expressed the idea sufficiently. The more pregnant expression marks the poet's earnestness, which takes two points for the emphasis to rest on.

3. dente, ungui: abl. of measure of difference. The predicate fieres turpior is divided (Intr. 120), and with it the two adjectives uno nigro, both of which belong with each substantive (Intr. 121). — si fieres: i.e. if ever.

5. simul: see I. 4. 17 n. — obligasti: cf. 7. 17 n. There the victim (implied in dapem) was pledged, to be forfeited in case the prayer for a safe return was granted; here the caput is put in pawn, to be offered up to the vengeance of the gods if Barine should break her oath.

6. perfidum: Intr. 124. The perjury was committed in the very act of swearing. — votis, imprecations, prayers to the gods to shower curses on her head should she prove false; cf. Hannibal's oath, Liv. XXI. 45. 8.

7. prodis: sc. into the streets.

8. cura: cf. I. 14. 18 n.

9. expedit, it pays (with emphasis). — opertos, buried.

10. fallere: by swearing falsely by them; cf. Prop. II. 20. 15 ossa

Expedit matris cineres opertos 10 fallere et toto taciturna noctis signa cum caelo gelidaque divos morte carentis.

Ridet hoc, inquam, Venus ipsa, rident

 15 semper ardentis acuens sagittas
 cote cruenta.

Adde quod pubes tibi crescit omnis, servitus crescit nova, nec priores impiae tectum dominae relinquunt, 20 saepe minati.

Te suis matres metuunt iuvenis, virgines nuptae, tua ne retardet aura maritos.

*tibi iuro per matris et ossa parentis;
 | si fallo cinis heu sit mihi uterque gravis.* For the assonance of this verse and the next see Intr. 131.

13. ridet . . . rident: Intr. 116*g*.
 —Venus ipsa: who has lovers especially under her protection.

14. Nymphae: to whose nature (simplices) such duplicity is utterly foreign. They are in the retinue of Venus here as in I. 4. 6, 30. 6. — Cupido: with his arrow fresh from the bleeding hearts.
 All the powers of love feel Barine's fascination, and can only smile when she defies their authority.

15. ardentis, burning. The attribute properly belongs to Cupid (Intr. 124).

16. cruenta: from the arrow-tip. Observe how, by a skilful disposition of epithets (ferus, cru- enta, ardentis), the picture (cf. I. 2.
 7 n) is made more full and graphic.

17. adde quod, etc.: further reason for expedit 9.

18. servitus crescit nova: explaining the somewhat vague tibi crescit. servitus nova is used concretely: a new set of slaves.

19. impiae: recalling the main theme, her ready perjury, and indicating the reason of minati.

21. te . . . te . . . tua: in mock eulogy; cf. I. 10. 9 n. — iuvenis:
i.e. their sons; cf. 5. 6.

22. parci: such a person would be impotens, procax, magnifica, sumptuosa, nobilis (Ter. Heaut. 227) at the expense of her lovers.

23. virgines: used by the poets, like puella, of young wives.

24. aura: see I. 5. 11 n. The metaphor is here used more consciously, — 'the breeze that draws to you'; cf. Cic. Sest. 101 quem neque honoris aura potuit umquam de suo cursu demovere.

IX. To C. Valgius Rufus, begging him to dry his tears for the loss of his favorite slave-boy Myses, and turn from his incessant elegies to sing the triumphs of Augustus. Valgius was one of the group of Horace's literary friends named in S. I. 10. 81 sqq., a writer of elegies and epigrams and perhaps of epic (Paneg. Messal. 180), as well as of works in prose. He was consul B.C. 12, and therefore probably considerably younger than Horace. The ode was written between B.C. 27, when Octavian received the title of Augustus (cf. vs. 19), and 23, the year of publication of these books. The allusions in vs. 20 sqq. do not fix the date more definitely. They refer to triumphs of diplomacy only, brought about by internal dissensions in oriental monarchies, especially Armenia and Parthia, which led one or other of the rival princes to appeal to Rome (cf. I. 26. 5 n); but of the details we are not accurately informed. The allusion in vs. 23 may be to a Scythian embassy which came to Augustus when he was in Tarraco, B.C. 26 or 25. — Metre, 176.

I. non semper, etc.: for the arrangement of words in this ode see Intr. 116 b. — imbres, procellae, glacies, Aquilonibus: the gloomy aspects of nature, types of human tears and grief, do not last always. The examples are grouped by non . . . nec in two pairs, each connected by aut: brief showers or squalls, protracted cold or storm. In the last example et merely connects the two kinds of trees named, and is subordinate to aut. — nubibus: Intr. 70. — hispidos, squalid, as they appear at the end of the winter, after long neglect and exposure to the rain; in contrast with their trim and cheerful aspect when under cultivation. The epithet is therefore necessary for the present comparison.

2. Caspium: Intr. 117 a. The Caspian was described as atrox, saevum, sine portibus, procellis undique expositum (Mela III. 38).

3. inaequales, fitful.

4. Armeniis: cf. Caspium, 2 n. It is clear that Armenia was much in the thoughts of the Romans when Horace wrote this ode. See also vs. 20 n.

5. stat: more expressive than (e.g.) manet; cf. I. 9. 1 n.

7. Gargani: exposed by its situation, with the sea on three sides of it, to the fury of the winds.—laborant: see I. 9. 3 n.

9. urges, pursue, dwell upon.

10. Mysten ademptum: Intr. 105 a. — Vespero: the planet Venus.

11. surgente: i.e. in the evening. The planet was said to 'rise' when it began to be visible as evening star.—decedunt, abate. — amores: the plural (Intr. 128) is used with reference to the repeated expression of his love.

12. rapidum: apparently a standing epithet of the sun (cf. Verg. G. I. 92, 424), which appears to have been used originally of his fierce, consuming heat (rapio); cf. Verg. G. IV. 263 rapidus ignis, 425 rapidus Sirius, E. 2. 10 rapido aestu; but here it perhaps refers to the rapidity with which he seems to move at his rising. — fugiente solem: i.e. at dawn, when Venus is morning star (Lucifer); rising before the sun, she is visible while he is still below the horizon, but vanishes as he advances.

13. ter aevo functus senex: i.e. Nestor; aevum here, like aetas

hominum in Cic. C. M. 31 (tertiam iam aetatem hominum vivebat) is the ordinary or average life of man; cf. 2. 5. The phrase is a reproduction of the familiar description, Il. I. 250 τῷ δ' ἤδη δύο μὲν γενεαὶ μερόπων ἀνθρώπων | ἐφθιαθ' . . . μετὰ δὲ τριτάτουσιν ἀνάσσειν. cf. Odys. III. 245.

14. Antilochum: son of Nestor, one of the most charming characters in the Iliad. He was killed in battle, while defending his father, by Memnon.

16. Troilon: a stock instance of premature death; cf. Cic. Tusc. I. 93. He was slain by Achilles; cf. Verg. A. I. 474 sqq. The examples of Antilochus and Troilus, both cut off in their youth, are cited as parallel to that of Mystes. — Phrygiae: cf. Phrygum, I. 15. 34 n.

17. desine querellarum: see Intr. 67. — mollium, tender, with a suggestion of unmanliness.

19. tropaea: probably referring to the Roman victories in Spain in 26 or 25; see Ode 6, intr. note.

20. rigidum: sc. with snow and ice. — Niphaten: a mountain in the interior of Armenia, mentioned also by Vergil, G. III. 30. Later poets supposed it to be a river (Luc. III. 245, Sil. XIII. 765, Juv. 6. 409, etc.).

21. Medum flumen: the Euphrates; cf. Scythicum amnem (the Tanais), III. 4. 36; amnis Tusci (the Tiber) S. II. 2. 32. For the form of the adjective see Intr. 65.

22. minores: indicating humbled pride; cf. Verg. A. VIII. 726 Euphrates ibat iam mollior undis. — volvere: for the acc. with inf. joined with the simple acc. of the object cf. Prop. IV. 2. 7 et cecini Curios fratres et Horatia pila | . . . Hannibalemque lares Romana sede fugantes, | anseris et tutum voce fuisse Iovem.

23. praescriptum: sc. by conditions of peace imposed upon them. — Gelonos: a Scythian tribe; here used for the Scythians in general; cf. Sithoniis, I. 18. 9 n.

24. equitare: cf. I. 2. 51 n. — campis: Intr. 69.

X. Licinius Murena, to whom this ode is addressed, was probably the son of Cicero's client of that name, but was adopted by Terentius Varro, the father of Proculcius and Terentia (see 2. 5 n). He reduced the Salassi in 25 B.C., and established in their territory the colony now called Aosta. In 23 he was the colleague of Augustus in the consulship, an evidence of high esteem on the part of the emperor; but in the same year he was convicted of complicity in the conspiracy of Fannius Caepio and executed. The present ode is one of the most finished of Horace's poems, and consists, like much of his best work, of a chain of pithy epigrammatic sententiae on the conduct of life, presenting in various forms and under various figures his favorite doctrine of the golden mean, with its corollary, μηδὲν ἄγαν, or, as he expresses it in Ep. I. 6, nil admirari, — the aequam memento servare mentem of Ode 3. — Metre, 174.

1. rectius: not used in a moral sense, but with reference to the practical ordering of one's life. — altum urgendo, by pressing out to sea. The 'voyage of life' is a favorite figure with Horace; cf. vs. 23 sq., I. 34. 3 sq., III. 29. 57 sqq., Ep. II. 2. 200 sqq., etc.

3. premendo, hugging.

6. diligat, cherishes.—tutus caret, is secure from.—obsoleti, etc.: i.e. not merely poverty, but the slovenly poverty of the slug-gard. The man who aims at mediocritas is sure to rise above this low state, because his aim is not too high to attain, nor will he be in danger of falling down to it, because he does not climb so high as to risk a fall.* On the other hand, his temperateness (sobrius) will save him from ever becoming the mark of envy as the lord of a palace.

7. caret: Intr. 116 h.

9-12. The suggestion in invidenda is developed in three striking illustrations of the danger of rising too high. For the position of the emphatic words see Intr. 116 b.

13. sperat, etc.: the wise man will observe the same moderation in dealing with the conditions of his life which are beyond his control, refraining from both extremes of despair in adversity and over-confidence in prosperity.—infestis (for the more commonplace adversis), secundis: neut. pl., with abstract force; cf. the apodosis, — which may perhaps prove to be true, — but the validity of the inference ; equivalent to 'it doesn't follow that, if, etc.' — male (sc. est), things go ill. — et, also. — olim, by and by ; see IV. 4. 5 n.

18. quondam : usually restricted to the past or (rarely) to the future ; here general, sometimes. — tacentem : music is silent in times of pestilence, which Apollo sends with his arrows ; cf. Il. I. 44 sqq. The same god who brings disease and suffering brings songs and gladness.

22. sapienter, if you are wise. — idem, yet you.

23. contrahes, etc. : closing with the metaphor with which he began. — nimium : with secundo.

XI. Of Quinctius Hirpinus nothing is definitely known, not even whether he is the 'optimus Quinctius' to whom Ep. I. 16 was written. In the present verses the poet represents himself as talking to his friend on one of his favorite themes, the folly of taking too much thought for the morrow. We may suppose the two to be walking together in the country or in a park, with the streets not far away. The allusions in the first strophe assign the ode to the years 27–25 B.C. — Metre, 176.

1. Cantaber : see 6. 2 n. — Scythes : the allusion is probably to some disturbance that occasioned the Scythian embassy to Augustus at Tarraco ; see Ode 9, intr. note (end).

2. Hirpine Quincti : see 2. 3 n. — Hadria divisus : a ground for security, added only in the case of the Scythians, because there was nothing to be feared from the Cantabrians but stubborn resistance. On the other hand, a successful incursion of a barbarian horde into Moesia or Pannonia would expose Italy itself to the danger of invasion.

3. obiecto, the barrier of. — remittas quaerere : Intr. 87, 94 j.

4. nec : Intr. 89 N. — trepides, fret yourself ; cf. III. 29. 32. — in,

(‘in reference to’), about. — usum aevi, the use of a life, i.e. the way to live it. For the thought cf. I. 9. 13 sqq., II. 1 sqq.

5. pauca: Intr. 116 b. — fugit, etc.: reason for the advice just given; cf. I. 11. 7.

6. lêvis, smooth-cheeked, as in IV. 6. 28 (of Apollo).

8. facilem: i.e. that comes readily; cf. III. 21. 4 and III. 1. 21 n.

9. nôn semper, etc.: reminders that everything is transitory are all about us; cf. IV. 7. 7 sqq. — semper idem: i.e. changeless, imperishable; it fades away. — honor, beauty.

10. neque uno, etc.: i.e. it waxes or wanes and changes its hue (rubens).

11. aeternis: i.e. reaching out into the unlimited future: cf. spem longam, I. 4. 15, II. 7. — minorem, which is unequal to them, unable to cope with them.

12. consiliis: with both minorem and fatigas; Intr. 76.

13. alta, hac: to be taken together with each substantive; Intr. 121. — platano: the oriental plane tree (sycamore), with leaves more jagged and of a darker green, but otherwise closely resembling our occidental species (buttonwood). Its stately form and heavy foliage made it a favorite shade tree; cf. 15. 4.

14. sic temere, just as we are, offhand; the Homeric $\mu\alpha\psi\ \omicron\upsilon\tau\omega$ (e.g. II. II. 120); cf. Verg. A. IX. 329 tris iuxta famulos temere inter tela iacentis. temere has its proper meaning of sine consilio, without premeditation. — rosa, nardo: see 3. 13 n. For the singular rosa see Intr. 127.

15. canos: Horace at least began to grow gray early (Intr. 29). The word adds significance to dum licet. — odorati: i.e. ‘wreathed with fragrant,’ etc. — capillos: Intr. 42.

16. dum licet: cf. 3. 15 sq. — Assyria: really Arabian or Indian, but imported from Syria, with which Assyria is often confused by the poets; cf. 7. 8, I. 31. 12 n; Tib. I. 3. 7 Assyrios odores. — nardo: here fem.; elsewhere in Horace (Epod. 5. 59, 13. 9) neuter.

17. potamus: the present in a hortatory question, common in colloquial language, especially with quin (as Liv. I. 57. 7 quin conscendimus equos), and frequent in comedy. See Intr. 78. — Euhius: see I. 18. 9 n.

18. edacis: cf. mordaces sollicitudines, I. 18. 4. — quis puer: cf. 7. 23. — ocus, quickly.

19. restinguet: i.e. dilute its strength. The word is chosen with reference to ardentis (fiery), for which cf. Juv. 10. 27 lato Setinum ardebit in auro. — Falerni: cf. I. 27. 9 n.

21. devium: i.e. living apart, not consorting with the common herd; cf. I. 17. 6, III. 25. 12.

22. eburna: i.e. decorated with ivory, as in S. II. 6. 103 eburnos lectos. — age: with dic, as III. 4. 1, S. II. 7. 92.

23. maturet: sc. venire; cf. deproperare, 7. 24 n. — in comptum nodum: cf. Ov. M. VIII. 319 crinis erat simplex, nodum collectus in unum. The toilet of the music girl was to be neat but simple, in keeping with the whole spirit of the occasion, which was a protest against elaborate preparation for enjoyment; and she was not to keep them waiting. — Lacaenae more: cf. Prop. IV. 14. 28 (of the Spartan women) est neque odoratae cura molesta comae.

24. comam religata: Intr. 41.

XII. In this ode, as in I. 6, Horace declines to undertake epic themes with his imbellis lyra, and tells Maecenas that his own prose will serve better to record the achievements of Augustus. He then turns to a fit subject for his lyre, the beauty and accomplishments of Licymnia, who is undoubtedly Terentia, Maecenas' wife (Intr. 21). From the last strophes it would appear that the ode was written during their honeymoon. In the assumed name Horace has followed the usual practice of the Latin poets, selecting a Greek name metrically equivalent (υ υ υ) to Terentia, as Catullus' Lesbia (for Clodia), Tibullus' Delia (for Plania), etc. (Apuleius, Apol. 10). — Metre, 172.

1. nolis (standing emphatically at the head of the sentence), you surely would not have, etc.—longa: the siege of Numantia lasted from 141 to 133 B.C.—ferae: the Numantines after their long and stubborn resistance finally set fire to their city, and in large numbers put themselves to death rather than surrender.

2. nec: carrying on the negative in nolis; see Madv. 458 c, Obs. 2.—Siculum mare: the scene of the most important battles of the first Punic war.

3. mollibus, etc.: i.e. to have such themes presented in a form so unsuitable and inadequate; cf. I. 6. 9 sqq.

5. nec saevos, etc.: the same objection applies to mythological subjects. These are grouped together by et and -que, subordinate to nec; cf. et, 9. 8, and note on 9. 1.—Lapithas: see I. 18. 8 n.—nimum, elated, insolent; cf. Tac. Hist. IV. 23 rebus secundis nimii.

6. Hylaeum: one of the Centaurs; cf. Verg. G. II. 457 et magno Hylaeum Lapithis cratere minantem.—domitosque, etc.: in their battle with the Giants (Telluris iuvenes, γηγενεῖς) the gods were assisted by Hercules. Gaea had made her sons proof against the weapons of the gods, so that they could be conquered only with mortal aid; see Preller-Robert, Gr. Myth. I. p. 73.—Herculea manu: cf. I. 3. 36.

7. unde (for a quibus; cf. I. 12. 17 n) periculum: cf. aliunde fata, 13. 16; metu insidiarum a meis, Cic. Rep. VI. 14; Madv. 298 b. 2. Usually a participle, ortum, or the like, would be inserted.

8. fulgens domus: cf. III. 3. 33 lucidæ sedes (sc. deorum).—contremuit: Intr. 51 a.

9. Saturni: i.e. of the gods, who were Saturn's descendants.—tuque: a third subject, which was more than once suggested to him (see S. II. 1. 10 sqq.), Horace puts away with a compliment to Maecenas. Hence the change to an affirmative conjunction, and the emphasis on tu.—pedestribus, prose. The word, so far as appears, was first used by Horace in this sense (S. II. 6. 17 musa pedestri) in imitation of the Greek πεζὸς λόγος. With a similar figure he calls his hexameters sermones repentis per humum in contrast with the lofty style in which the exploits of Augustus should be sung (Ep. II. 1. 250 sq.). Whether Maecenas actually wrote or proposed to write such a work as is here suggested we do not know. See Plin. N. H. VII. 148.

10. dices: for the force of the future see Intr. 79.

Num tu quae tenuit dives Achaemenes

11. per vias : sc. of Rome, in the triumphal procession.

12. regum colla : instead of reges, because they were led by the neck ; cf. Prop. II. 1. 33 (canerem) regum auratis circumdata colla catenis (also referring to the triumphs of Augustus).—minacium : cf. 7. 11 n, IV. 3. 8. The epithet sets off by contrast their present humbled state ; cf. Ep. II. 1. 191 mox trahitur manibus regum fortuna retortis.

13. dulcis : accusative.—dominae, my lady. Married ladies were regularly addressed by this title.

14. lucidum fulgentis : Intr. 48.

15. bene fidum : like 'bien fidèle' ; cf. bene sano, S. I. 3. 61, bene firmum, Enn. Ann. I. 105 M ; and the opposite, male fida, Verg. A. II. 23. Cf. I. 9. 24 n.

17. quam nec dedecuit, who could with perfect grace, i.e. keeping within the bounds of what was becoming and womanly.—ferre, move ; cf. Verg. G. I. 11 ferre simul Faunisque pedem Dryadesque puellae.—dedecuit : cf. I. 38. 7. The perfect has its proper force, referring to the time when Maecenas became fascinated with her charms.—choris : dances at home or in private companies, which at this time were permissible for women within certain limits ; cf. III. 6. 21.

18. certare ioco : i.e. in conversation ; cf. Sall. Cat. 25. 5 (of Sempronius) posse versus facere, iocum movere, sermone uti vel modesto vel molli vel procaci.—dare bracchia : graceful movements of the arms were carefully studied in training for the dance.

19. ludentem : i.e. dancing, as in Verg. E. 6. 27 tum vero in numerum Faunosque ferasque videres ludere.—nitidis, spruce, in holiday attire.—virginibus : dative with dare.

20. Dianae celebris die : for die quo Diana celebris est, i.e. when her temple is thronged (August 13) ; cf. Tib. IV. 4. 23 Phoebe fave, . . . iam celeber, iam laetus eris. Terentia as virgo ingenua could take part in this public religious dance.

21. Achaemenes : mythical founder of the Persian dynasty (Herod. I. 125, VII. 11) ; cf. III. 9. 4.

XIII.

✓ Ille et nefasto te posuit die,

22. Mygdonias : æ. of Midas, the mythical Phrygian king, whose touch turned all things to gold. Mygdonia was a district of Macedonia, which was associated with the legends of Midas and the Bryges, who were supposed to have migrated from that region into Asia Minor (Herod. VIII. 138, VII. 73). Another legend, however, told of a Phrygian king Mygdon (Æ. III. 186).

23. permutare : see Intr. 74.

24. Arabum : see I. 29. 3 n.

25. flagrantia, passionate.—detorquet cervicem : æ. turns away (de-) so as to expose her neck to the kiss. For the caesura of this verse see Intr. 149.

26. negat : sc. ea (oscula), the antecedent of quae.

27. quae gaudeat, occupet : subjunctive to express the reason for calling her saevitia 'facilis.'—poscente : see Intr. 75, 103.

28. rapere occupet, snatches them first herself; cf. Liv. I. 30. 8 cum bellum utrimque summa ope pararent, occupat Tullus in agrum Sabinum transire. Intr. 94 g.

XIII. On the first of March B.C. 30 Horace had a narrow escape from the fall of a tree on his farm, an incident which he mentions repeatedly (17. 27, III. 4. 27, III. 8. 7) and makes the subject of the present ode. After roundly abusing the tree for so nearly causing his death, he proceeds to reflect on man's incapacity to foresee the fate which is closest at hand, and then on the great dead whom he would have met in the lower world,—a thought suggested perhaps by the famous passage in Plato's Apology of Socrates, but worked out in the form of a tribute to the power of lyric song. For the date of the accident see III. 8, intr. note.—Metre, 176.

1. ille : repeated with savage emphasis in the poet's outburst of wrath, which softens into reproach in te . . . te, vs. 11; cf. Tennyson's The Fleet 1 'You, you, if you should fail to understand, What England is and what her all-in-all, On you will come the curse of all the land.'—nefasto die : properly a day on which nefas est praetori, apud quem lege agitur, fari tria verba 'do dico addico' (Fest. p. 165). There was the same superstition about beginning anything quicumque primum, et sacrilega manu perniciem opprobriumque pagi;

 5 illum et parentis crediderim sui fregisse cervicem et penetralia

 Quid quisque vitet, numquam homini satis cautum est in horas. Navita Bosporum on such a day that many people nowadays feel in regard to Friday.

 —posuit, planted.

2. quicumque: sc. posuit. — primum: belonging in sense with posuit, although placed in the relative clause. Translate, whoever it was in the first place.

3. produxit, reared. — in, to the; expressing the purpose or destiny of both acts. — nepotum, posterity.

4. pagi, the countryside.

5. et . . . et, both . . . and, corresponding to et . . . et in the first strophe. 'He was capable of both of the two heinous forms of impietas named.' — sui: emphatic.

6. fregisse cervicem (sc. laqueo), strangled; cf. Epod. 3. 2, Sall. Cat. 55. 5 laqueo gulam fregere. — penetralia, his very hearthstone; properly the shrine of the household gods, under whose protection the life of the guest was sacred.

7. nocturno, at dead of night.

8. Colcha: i.e. such as Medea concocted; cf. Epod. 17. 35. For the form, see Intr. 65.

9. quicquid: here used adjectively as in S. II. 1. 60 quisquis color; cf. Verg. A. X. 493 quisquis honos tumuli, quicquid solamen humandi est.

10. tractavit, dabbled in. There is at most a very slight zeugma, nefas being the class of things to which venena are assigned.

11. te . . . te: cf. ille, vs. 1 n. — triste lignum, dismal log. — caducum, ready to fall; to be taken with statuit, as if this result was contemplated in 'setting up' the tree.

13. quid vitet: representing the 'question of doubt' (quid vitem?) of the man who is on the lookout for danger. — homini, man (in the abstract); the fact is stated as characteristic of the race.

14. cautum est, is . . . on his guard. Grammatically the subject is the clause quid vitet, and the perfect has its proper force ('has been provided against'). homini is ethical dative; cf. tibi cautum volo Plaut. Pers. 369. — in horas: formed after the analogy of in dies

—Bosporum Poenus: Intr. 117 a. The Thracian Bosporus is meant; cf. III. 4. 30.

15. perhorrescit: transitive, as often in Cicero.—ultra: with timet; when the danger of the sea is past, he feels no further fear.

16. caeca: here in a passive sense, hidden.—timet: for the prosody, see Intr. 179.—aliunde fata: cf. unde periculum, 12. 7 n.

17. miles: the Roman legionary, whose massive array (cf. robur, 19) was ill adapted to meet the stratagem referred to.—sagittas, etc.: i.e. the arrows of the Parthian in full flight; see I. 19. 11 n.

18. catenas et Italum robur: he is afraid to face the solid strength of Italy, and runs away to save himself from chains.

21. furvae, dusky, as queen of the lower world. The word was originally used (Gell. I. 18. 4) in the sense of ater, on which see I. 28. 13 n.—regna: Intr. 128.—Proserpinae: Intr. 178.

22. iudicantem, sitting in judgment.—Aeacum: son of Zeus and Aegina, and grandfather of Achilles; in his lifetime renowned for his righteousness, and after his death made a judge in the lower world.

23. discriptas, allotted.

24. Aeoliis: the dialect of Lesbos.—querentem: because of their coldness.

25. Sappho: Greek accusative (Σαπφώ). See Intr. 26.

26. sonantem: Intr. 51 c.—plenius, in richer strain, sc. than the love songs of Sappho.—aureo: implying his preëminence in song; cf. I. 5. 9 n, II. 1. 40; Quintil. X. 1. 63 Alcaeus in parte operis aureo plectro merito donatur, qua tyrannos insectatus multum etiam moribus confert.

27. plectro: see I. 26. 11 n.—dura, etc.: cf. I. 32. 6 sqq. Intr. 116 g.—navis, of the sea.

28. fugae, of exile; cf. fugeret, I. 7. 22 n.

 35 auris et intorti capillis
 Eumenidum recreantur angues ?
 Quin et Prometheus et Pelopis parens

29. utrumque : emphatic ; in contrast with sed magis, etc. — sacro silentio : i.e. profound silence, such as was enjoined during the performance of a religious ceremony. See I. 36. 1 n ; III. 1. 2. For the ablative, which influences both digna and mirantur, see Intr. 76.

30. mirantur, listen in wonder. — dicere : depending on the notion of hearing contained in mirantur. The present infinitive here, as often, expresses a direct perception of the words spoken (not indirect through report) ; cf. Cic. Mur. 58 saepe hoc maiores natu dicere audiui ('I have heard them say,' not 'that they said'). For the meaning see I. 6. 5 n.

31. pugnas, etc. : the themes sung by Alcaeus. — exactos tyrannos : Intr. 105 a.

32. densum (= stipatum) umeris : in their eagerness to get near the singer. — bibit aure : cf. Prop. IV. 6. 8 suspensis auribus ista bibam ; Verg. A. IV. 359 vocemque his auribus hausi.

33. quid mirum : sc. that the happy shades in Elysium should be entranced, when (ubi) even the monsters of the lower world are charmed, and the wicked in Tartarus forget their torments. For the construction of the verbs see Intr. 85.

34. demittit : as a watch-dog he keeps his ears usually pricked up. — atras : see I. 28. 13 n. — belua : Cerberus. — centiceps : like the Hydra, Cerberus was pictured with an indefinite number of heads. Hesiod (Theog. 312) describes him as κύνα πεντηκοντακάρηνον. In the Latin poets he usually has three, as in 19. 31 ; cf. Verg. A. VI. 417.

36. recreantur, are relieved (as in III. 24. 16), i.e. by the softening influence of the music on the temper of the Furies. — angues : masculine, as it more commonly is in prose ; in poetry the feminine is more frequent.

37. quin et, nay even ; passing to the stronger case of the soothing of pain. For similar descriptions of the power of music in the lower world ; cf. III. 11. 15 sqq., Verg. G. IV. 481. — Prometheus : usually represented as having been released from the under-world. Horace alone of extant authors (here, 18. 35, and Epod. 17. 67) represents him as still suffering in Tartarus. — Pelopis parens : see I. 28. 7 n, and cf. Epod. 17 65.

XIV.

Eheu fugaces, Postume, Postume,

38. laborem, suffering. For the case see Intr. 50. (For the genitive laborum, which has the support of some good manuscripts, and is perhaps right, see Intr. 67.)—decipitur: i.e. loses the sense of it, under the spell of the music; cf. S. II. 2. 12 molliter austerum studio fallente labore.

39. curat agitare: Intr. 120. For the construction, see Intr. 94 i.—Orion: a mighty hunter, killed by Diana. He is devoted to his favorite pursuit even in Hades. (Odys. XI. 572); cf. Verg. A. VI. 653 quae gratia curram | armorumque fuit vivis, quae cura nitentis | pascere equos, eadem sequitur tellure repositos.

40. lynx: more commonly feminine.

Horace preaches to him on one of his favorite themes, the swift flight of time and the inevitable approach of death, but the moral which he is fond of drawing, that not possession, but enjoyment, is the end to be sought, is here rather implied than distinctly expressed.—Metre, 176.

2. labuntur, glide by.

3. rugis, senectae, morti: notice the climax.

4. indomitae, inexorable. Death is here personified, the Ἀίδης ἀμείλιχος ἢ δ' ἀδάμαστος of II. IX. 158.

5. non si, no, not if. The apodosis is contained in non, which repeats nec adferet.—trecentis tauris: three hecatombs; an intentional hyperbole to make the assertion as strong as possible; cf. vs. 26. Such enormous sacrifices, however, were not unknown, as, for example, after the battle of Lake Trasimenus; see Liv. XXII. 10. 7.—quotquot eunt dies, every day that goes by; a paraphrase for quotidie. For eunt (more expressive than sunt) cf. IV. 5. 7 gratior it dies; Ep. II. 2. 55 anni cunies.

XIV. Whether the Postumus of this ode is a friend of the poet or merely a convenient name we can only guess. In him Horace addresses a man of wealth, surrounded by all the comforts that can contribute to the enjoyment of life, but perhaps a trifle over-careful in the use of his means.

fractisque rauci fluctibus Hadriae,

15 frustra per autumnos nocentem

corporibus metuemus Austrum.

6. places: conative. — inlacrimabilem: 'inaccessible to tears,' either in an active sense, 'incapable of weeping,' tearless, as here, or passively, 'incapable of being wept for,' as IV. 9. 26; cf. flebilis, IV. 2. 21 (active) and I. 24. 9 (passive).

7. ter amplum, threefold huge; referring both to his triple form (forma tricorporis umbrae, Verg. A. VI. 289) and supernatural size.

8. Geryonen: a gigantic monster of the island of Erythia, in the far West, killed by Hercules, who had been sent to take his cattle; Verg. A. VIII. 201 sqq. — Tityon: a giant, son of Gaea, killed by Apollo and Diana for insulting Latona. His body lay in the underworld porrectus novem per iugera terrae (Tib. I. 3. 75), with a vulture ever feeding on his liver; cf. Verg. A. VI. 595 sqq.

9. compescit, confines. — unda: the Styx. — scilicet omnibus, yes, all of us; passing from the particular examples of the irresistible power of Hades to the general fact; cf. sed omnis, I. 28. 15,

10. quicumque, etc.: a phrase for 'all mankind,' formed after the Homeric οἱ ἀρούρης καρπὸν ἔδουσιν, II. VI. 142. — munere, bounty. The plural is more usual; cf. IV. 9. 48, 10. 1, 15. 26.

11. enaviganda: not found in this sense before Horace. Enavigare (= traicere navigando) is like evadere (= traicere vadendo), e.g. angustias evadit, Liv. XXI. 32. 13. — reges: see I. 4. 14 n.

12. inopes coloni: cf. I. 35. 6 n. — erimus: i.e. when our time shall have come.

13. frustra, etc.: no precautions are of any use; cf. 13. 13 sqq. — carebimus, keep away from; cf. 10. 6.

14. fractis, breaking; sc. on the rocks or the beach, (breakers). — Hadriae: Intr. 117 a.

15. frustra: Intr. 116 g. — per autumnos: a very hot and unhealthy season at Rome; cf. III. 23. 8; S. II. 6. 18 plumbeus Auster autumnusque gravis; Ep. I. 7. 1 sqq.

16. corporibus: Intr. 76. — Austrum: the hot south wind (Sirocco) prevailing especially in August and September.

17. ater: see I. 28. 13 n. — flumine, current. — languido: cf

Visendus ater flumine languido

 infame damnatusque longi

20 Sisyphus Aeolides laboris.

Linquenda tellus et domus et placens pontificum potiore cenis.

Verg. G. IV. 478 limus niger et deformis harundo | Cocyti tarda-que palus inamabilis unda.

18. errans, meandering. — Danaï genus: see III. II. 25 n.

20. Sisyphus: mythical founder of Corinth, of extraordinary cunning and wickedness; killed by Theseus and condemned to roll to the top of a hill a stone, which always slipped from his hands and rolled down again; Odys. XI. 593 sqq. — laboris: Gr. 220.

21. linquenda, etc.: for a similar picture cf. Lucr. III. 894 iam iam non domus accipiet te laeta, neque uxor | optima nec dulces occurrent oscula nati | praeripere et tacita pectus dulcedine tangent. — placens, sweet; cf. III. 7. 23.

23. invisas, detested; see I. 34. 10 n. — cupressos: a tall evergreen common in southern Europe, in growth like a cedar, in shape not unlike a Lombardy poplar. Cypress was associated with death from the custom of placing it before the house of mourning and around the funeral pyre, and was regarded as sacred to Pluto.

24. brevem, short-lived, like breve lilium, I. 36. 16; but here, with dominum, contrasting his brief ownership with the longer lives of the trees.

25. Caecuba: see I. 20. 9 n; for the number, Intr. 128. — dignior: because knowing better how to use the wine. In this single ironical expression is contained the only intimation of the moral which Horace usually draws from his discourses on the shortness of life and the gloominess of death, — that we must make the most of the brief space that is given us for enjoyment; cf. I. 4, I. 9. 13 sqq., I. 11, II. 3, II. 11.

26. centum: cf. trecentis, vs. 5 n.

27. tinguet, etc.: implying reckless extravagance; cf. Cic. Phil. 2. 105 natabant pavimenta vino, madebant parietes. — superbo: attributing to the wine a consciousness of its excellence and a feeling of humiliation under such unworthy treatment.

28. pontificum cenis: see I. 37. 2 n. For the case of cenis see Intr. 75.

XV. A protest against the growing extravagance of the day, which spends immense sums in building luxurious palaces and turns useful land into pleasure grounds, in contrast with the spirit of the fathers, who were poor for themselves and rich only for the state. The ode is singular in containing no personal allusion whatever. — Metre, 176.

1. iam, soon. — regiae (here for regales), regal.

2. moles, piles ; cf. III. 29. 10.

3. visentur, will meet our gaze ; cf. I. 37. 25. — Lucrino lacu : a sheet of salt water near Baiae, separated from the gulf of Pozzuoli by a natural dike about a mile long. By strengthening this dike and opening a passage through it into Lucrinus and thence into Lake Avernus, Agrippa formed the Portus Iulius (cf. Ep. II. 3. 63) in 37 B.C.

4. stagna, ponds, artificially constructed both for ornament and as fish preserves. — platanus ; cf. II. 13 n. — caelebs : the familiar figure of the vine 'wedded' to the tree on which it twines ; cf. Epod. 2. 9 adulta vitium propagine | altas maritat populos ; Cat. 62. 54 (vitis)

ulmo coniuncta marito. The denser shade of the platanus unfits it for this service. The meaning is that shady lawns will take the place of vineyards.

5. evincet, will crowd out ; cf. Plin. N. H. XVIII. 185 fabā evincit herbas. — ulmos : the unexpressed epithet, maritatas or the like, is suggested by caelebs ; cf. Intr. 122. Elms and poplars were the trees chiefly used for training vines upon. — tum : i.e. when the state of things prophesied in the preceding lines has come to pass. — violaria, etc. : i.e. flower beds and ornamental shrubs will supplant the olive orchards.

6. myrtus : a bushy shrub, with small, lustrous, dark-green leaves, and pinkish white flowers, not unlike the apple blossom. — omnis copia narium, all the wealth of the nostrils, a somewhat contemptuous expression for 'every variety of fragrant flower.'

7. olivetis : ablative ; Intr. 69.

8. fertilibus, which bore fruit. — domino : Intr. 58 a. — With this whole passage cf. Quint. VIII. 3. 8 sterilem platanum tonsasque myrtos quam maritam ulmum et uberes oleas praeoptaverim ?

9. laurea (sc. arbor): for laurus; the bay, an evergreen, bush-like tree, growing often to a height of sixty feet, with rich, dark-green foliage, small yellowish blossoms, and a dark-purple berry.

10. ictus (sc. solis, suggested by fervidos), rays; cf. Lucr. I. 147 lucida tela diei, and our word 'sun-stroke.'

11. praescriptum: sc. est. — intonsi: see I. 12. 41 n. — Catonis: the Censor, prominent in his day for his uncompromising hostility to all corrupting innovations, and to posterity a typical Roman of the olden time.

12. auspiciis: i.e. while those men guided the state. The auspicia could be taken only by those highest in authority; cf. I. 7. 27 n. — veterum norma: the old Roman maxims on the requirements of good citizenship, which he proceeds to set forth.

13. census: properly the man's list of possessions returned to the Censor; hence brevis.

14. commune: neuter used substantively, equivalent to res publica, the common wealth. — nulla decempedis, etc.: i.e. no private portico on a great scale, the latter being indicated by the unit of measurement (decempedis). For the indirect use of the epithet privatis, cf. Intr. 124.

15. opacam: as the side on which the shadows fall. Strictly the epithet belongs to the portico itself.

16. excipiebat, lay open to; cf. Juv. 7. 183 argentem rapiat cenatio solem, of a winter dining-room. — Arcton, the North.

17. fortuitum, the chance, i.e. the first that presented itself; in contrast with novo. — caespitem: for building private altars (cf. I. 19. 13 n), where marble and other costly material had now begun to be used.

18. leges: probably referring to the rules of Roman ritual, which strictly prescribed the use of certain traditional forms and materials. What Horace points out is that under those old laws even the sod under our feet had its honorable use, for which no man could reject it as common and cheap. — oppida: sc. with public buildings, etc. — publico, of the people in common, who spent their means for this end instead of for their personal luxury.

 otium Medi pharetra decori,

19. iubentes decorare: divided between the two objects, and so uniting publico sumptu and novo saxo, both of which belong to oppida as well as to templa; Intr. 120, 121.

20. novo: see I. 2. 6 n.—saxo: i.e. marble, which in Horace's day was brought in great variety from different parts of the empire for the decoration of private houses as well as of public buildings; cf. 18. 3 sq.

XVI. To Pompeius Grosphus, a Roman knight, the owner of extensive estates in Sicily, in the neighborhood of those which Iccius managed for Agrippa. See I. 29 (intr. note) and Ep. I. 12. 22 sq., where Grosphus is recommended to Iccius as a man who would not take advantage of his friendship to ask improper favors. The subject of the ode is peace of mind, which is never overtaken by those who restlessly pursue it, but dwells with those who take home to themselves the truth that no man's lot can be entirely perfect, and who find their happiness in the contented enjoyment of the blessings they have. — Metre, 174.

1. otium, peace, in its widest sense, freedom from care, anxiety and passion. The subjects of rogat are types of men restless by nature and fond of excitement: even they pray for peace. For the first instance cf. I. 1. 15.—patenti, open, i.e. not near any island where he could take refuge in a harbor.

2. prensus: sc. by a storm. The nautical term was deprensus (Schol. on Verg. G. IV. 421); see Intr. 129. For the use of the participle see Intr. 103.—Aegaeo: Intr. 117 a. — simul: see I. 4. 17 n.—atra, etc.: see I. 2. 7 n. The picture is of the inky darkness of a stormy night, when the mariner without a compass was peculiarly helpless.

3. certa, sure (sc. as guides to the mariner), such as the Great and Little Bear (Cic. Arat. 37 sqq.); cf. Tib. I. 9. 10 ducunt instabiles sidera certa rates.

5. otium: Intr. 116 g. — bello furiosa: concessive; they are warriors at heart, and love fighting with a passion that amounts to frenzy.—Thrace: the country for the people; cf. IV. 14. 49.

6. Medi: see I. 2. 22 n.—pharetra: associated in the Roman mind with their dashing cavalry (cf. I. 19. 11 n, II. 13. 17), and suggesting the restless and adventurous spirit of the raider (I. 2. 51).

7. non, etc., peace, which no . . . can buy.—purpura: used (as in English) for purple robes, tapestries, etc., which are named with precious stones and gold as the costliest things that a man could offer.—ve-nale: Intr. 174 b.

8. neque: the only instance in which Horace has admitted elision in the Adonic verse.

9. non gazae neque . . . lictor: i.e. no wealth nor power.

10. submovet tumultus: a figure borrowed from the progress of the magistrate through the streets, the lictors making the disorderly crowd give way to let him pass undisturbed. submovet is the technical term for this, and there is a zeugma with gazae.

11. curas . . . volantis: included in the figure: another annoying crowd against which the consul's power is helpless.—laqueata tecta, panelled ceilings, i.e. those of rich and splendid houses. Such a ceiling in its simplest form was made by inserting cross-pieces between the joists which supported the floor above, thus dividing the whole space into square or oblong panels (lacunaria), which could be decorated at pleasure. This simple device was imitated in stucco and elaborated with panels of divers shapes, richly ornamented with gold and ivory (cf. 18. 1 sq.) and various tints.

13. vivitur: sc. ab eo, the antecedent of cui.—parvo: abl. neut., as in S. II. 2. 1.—cui, etc., on whose modest board, etc.; i.e. who lives in the aurea mediocritas of 10. 5, above the slovenly neglect of indigence, but free from the worry of wealth. For the suggestion of contentment in paternum see I. 1. 11 n.

14. splendet, etc.: in his plain table service only one vessel, and that the smallest, is of silver; but it is an heirloom, ever kept bright, and it gives a certain tone of elegance to his humble board.—salinum: cf. Plin. N. H. XXXIII. 153 (Fabricius) bellicosos imperatores plus quam pateram et salinum habere ex argento vetabat.

15. nec, and whose . . . no. cui is understood here in substantially the same construction as above.—timor aut cupido: accompani temperet risu : nihil est ab omni parte beatum.

ments of wealth, fear of losing what one has, and greed for more. Cupido, always masculine in Horace, is usually feminine in other authors, except as the name of the god.

17. brevi aevo: to be taken with iaculamur, but brevi, contrasted by its position with fortes, suggests the folly of our confident projects; cf. I. 4. 15.

18. multa: the emphatic word of the sentence (Intr. 116 b); cf. II. 5 poscentis aevi pauca. — terras alio calentis sole: i.e. foreign countries; cf. Verg. G. II. 512 alio patriam quaerunt sub sole iacentem. The omitted ablative after mutamus (patriā or nostrā) is implied in this description, and the next sentence assumes that it is already understood. For the construction see Intr. 74.

19. patriae, from his country; cf. exsul mundi, Ov. M. VI. 189.

20. se quoque fugit: cf. Sen. Ep. 28. 2 quaeris quare te fuga ista non adiuvet? Tecum fugis; Lucr. III. 1053 sqq. For the tense of fugit see Intr. 80.

21. scandit, etc.: amplification of the preceding: a man cannot run away from his own discontent, though he take the swiftest ship or the fastest horse; cf. III. 1. 37 sqq.; Ep. I. 11. 27 sqq.; Lucr. II. 48 sqq. That Horace himself had his periods of restless discontent, he confesses S. II. 7. 111 sqq., Ep. I. 8. 3 sqq. — aeratas, brass-bound. — vitiosa, morbid; included in the personification; cf. I. 24. 7 n.

22. relinquit, falls behind; cf. deseruit, III. 2. 32.

23. ocior: Intr. 116 b.

25. laetus in praesens: to be taken with the predicate, in the same sense as III. 8. 27 dona praesentis cape laetus horae. — quod ultra est: i.e. the future; cf. I. 9. 13.

26. oderit: stronger than nolit; Intr. 94 l. — lento risu, with a quiet smile.

27. nihil, etc.: reason for the preceding; the wise man will cheerfully accept the disagreeable along with the good, and not run away from it in a futile chase after unalloyed happiness.

29. abstulit, etc.: two contrasted examples of the drawbacks

- Abstulit clarum cita mors Achillem, 30 longa Tithonum minuit senectus, et mihi forsan tibi quod negarit porriget hora.
- Te greges centum Siculaeque circum

 35 apta quadrigis equa, te bis Afro murice tinctae vestiunt lanae : mihi parva rura et attending the most coveted blessings: a brilliant career, cut short by an untimely death; eternal life, an infinitely prolonged bodily decay.

30. Tithonum : see I. 28. 8 n. — minuit : perfect.

31. et mihi, etc.: a slight shifting of the point of view, suggested by the two examples just cited, each of whom possessed what the other lacked. But the underlying thought remains unaltered. On the basis of the truth 'nil ab omni parte beatum' the poet boldly compares his own humble lot with that of his wealthy friend, and points out that he may perhaps be more happy in some respects than one who, according to ordinary standards, was in every way more fortunate.

32. hora, the hour; i.e. any given hour in which our fortunes may be compared.

33. greges Siculaeque vaccae: equivalent to greges Sicularum vaccarum (hendiadys). — centum: for an indefinitely large number; cf. 14. 26, III. 11. 17. — circum: Intr. 115 c.

34. tollit: cf. risum tollant, Ep. II. 3. 381, and our phrase 'lift up their voice.' — hinnitum: for the synapheia, see Intr. 174 b.

35. apta, fit for; implying a fine breed and a high market value. — quadrigis: i.e. for the chariot race. — equa: mares were preferred for this purpose; cf. Verg. G. I. 59. — bis tinctae: a translation of the technical term dibapha (δι-βαφα, 'twice dipped'); cf. Plin. N. H. IX. 137. — Afro: i.e. from the island of Girba, in the Syrtis Minor.

37. mihi parva rura, etc.: cf. 18. 1 sqq. and Bacchylides Fr. 28 οὐ βοῶν πάρεστι σώματ', οὔτε χρυσός, οὔτε πορφύρεοι τάπητες, ἀλλὰ θυμὸς εὐμενής, | μῦσά τε γλυκεῖα καὶ Βοιωτοῖσιν ἐν σκίφοισιν οἶνος ἡδύς.

38. spiritum, inspiration, as in IV. 6. 29; cf. spiro, IV. 3. 24. — Graiae Camenae: cf. I. 12. 39 n and note on lyricis vatibus, I. 1. 35. — tenuem, fine, delicate.

39. Parca: Intr. 127. — non mendax: a permanent attribute; cf. C. S. 25; Pers. 5. 48 Parca tenax veri.

40. spernere, a contempt for

XVII.

 Nec dis amicum est nec mihi te prius

5 A, te meae si partem animae rapit maturior vis, quid moror altera, nec carus aequae nec superstes integer? Ille dies utramque

(Intr. 97 d'); i.e. a capacity to hold himself above their envy (invidia maior, 20. 4). — volgus: the unrefined 'rabble' of readers and critics who were incapable of appreciating the finer spirit of Greek poetry (cf. III. 1. 1), and pursued Horace with ridicule and detraction (S. I. 10. 78 sqq.), due partly to envy of his social advancement, until his success was established beyond cavil (IV. 3. 16).

XVII. Maecenas was a confirmed invalid, suffering constantly from fever and insomnia (Intr. 21; Plin. N. H. VII. 172); and at the same time he had a passionate attachment to life (Sen. Ep. 101. 10) which made his frequent sicknesses occasions of gloomy forebodings. Horace here consoles him with the assurance of his devotion, which will not permit death to separate them, with appeals to astrology (to which Maecenas was addicted), and by recalling their common escape from imminent death, for which thank-offerings were still due. This allusion shows that the ode was written not long after B.C. 30 (see Ode 13, intr. note). — Metre, 176.

1. exanimas, kill; i.e. torment, by suggesting such distressing thoughts; cf. Epod. 14. 5 occidis saepe rogando; Ter. Andr. 660 quor me enicas?

2. amicum est (equivalent to placet), it is the pleasure of; cf. Il. IX. 23 οὕτω που Διὶ μέλλει ὑπερμενέει φίλον εἶναι. In point of fact Horace survived his patron only a few months (Intr. 35).

4. decus columenque: see I. 1. 2 n.

5. partem animae: cf. I. 3. 8 n. — rapit . . . moror: for the tense see Intr. 78.

6. vis: used properly of premature death; cf. 13. 20 (where it is joined, as here, with rapere) and Cic. C. M. 71 vitam adolescentibus vis aufert, senibus maturitas. — altera: sc. pars.

7. carus: sc. mihi, as the context implies; cf. Ep. I. 3. 29 si patriae volumus, si nobis vivere cari. — aeque: sc. as before. — superstes: to be taken with carus as well as with integer; Intr. 119 a.

8. integer: repeating the thought of te meae partem animae 5. — utramque (sc. nostrum; cf. vs. 21 n), of both of us. Vtriusque

ducet ruinam. Non ego perfidum

Seu Libra seu me Scorpios adspicit nostrum would be more usual, but utramque is quite in accord with the Latin mode of thought, which conceives of two ruinae in this case : cf. IV. 14. 19.

9. ducet ruinam : a phrase suggested in its literal use by the appearance of a falling building, where one part gives way and 'draws' the rest after it ; cf. Verg. A. II. 465 elapsa repente (turris) ruinam cum sonitu trahit. — non ego : see I. 18. 11 n. non qualifies perfidum only, on which cf. 8. 6 n.

10. dixi, pronounced ; the technical term ; cf. Caes. B. C. I. 86. 3 neu quis invitus sacramentum dicere cogatur. — sacramentum : the soldier's oath, by which he bound himself to follow wherever his general might lead : cf. Liv. XXII. 38. 3. — ibimus, ibimus : Intr. 116 d.

11. utcumque : cf. I. 17. 10 n.

13. Chimaerae : see I. 27. 23 n. — igneae : properly an attribute of spiritus ; Intr. 124.

14. si resurgat : i.e. from Tartarus. — Gyas : son of Uranus and Gaea, brother of Briareus (Hes. Theog. 149).

15. sic, etc. : i.e. such is the just and immutable decree of heaven.

16. Iustitiae : here not the personified virtue of I. 24. 6, but the powerful goddess Δίκη, daughter of Themis and sister of the Fates (Hes. Theog. 902), whose authority she shares. — placitumque : Intr. 119 b.

17. seu . . . seu, if . . . or if ; cf. I. 23. 5 sq. The meaning is : If our destinies are governed by the stars, there is a marvelous agreement in the influences that rule our two lives. Horace had no faith in astrology (see I. 11), but he adopts its language to express more emphatically to his patron, who did believe in it, his confidence that their friendship was not to be severed by death. — adspicit : cf. IV. 3. 1. sqq. The astrologers held that a man's destiny was determined by the constellations and planets which looked down upon him at his birth. These constituted, grouped as they were at that moment, his 'nativity' (natalis hora), each member (pars) of which exerted its own influence, good or ill, but only so far as it was not counteracted by some other member. Libra and Jupiter were held to be salutary in their influence ; the others here mentioned, baleful. The present adspicit expresses the continuing influence of the constellation.

 25 tardavit alas, cum populus frequens laetum theatris ter crepuit sonum ;
 me truncus inlapsus cerebro
 sustulerat, nisi Faunus ictum

18. pars violentior : referring to any of the three constellations. It means the influence which tends to bring violence and danger into his life.

19. tyrannus, etc.: cf. I. 3. 15 n. Certain constellations were held to have a dominant influence in certain parts of the earth ; cf. Manil. IV. 791 tu, Capricorne, regis quidquid sub sole cadente | est positum gelidamque Helicen quod tangit ab illo, | Hispanas gentes et quot fert Gallia dives.

21. nostrum : gen. pl., substantive ; cf. note on utramque, 8. For the caesura of the verse see Intr. 155.

22. consentit : i.e. (as appears from what follows) the pars violentior has in both cases been thwarted just before the fulfilment of its fatal influence. This whole passage has been imitated by Persius, 5. 45 sqq.—Iovis tutela: Intr. 126 b. — impio : the character of the Kronos of Greek mythology, with whom Saturn was identified.

23. refulgens : cf. I. 12. 28 n.

24. volucris : better taken with alas ; cf. III. 29. 53 si celeris quatit pennas (of Fortuna).—fati, i.e. of death. This conception of the approach of death is similar to that of I. 3. 32.

25. cum populus, etc.: see I. 20. 4 n.

26. theatris : Intr. 69, 128.—ter : apparently the usual number, like our three cheers ; cf. Prop. IV. 10. 4 Camenae . . . manibus faustos ter crepuere sonos ; cf. also I. 28. 36 n.—sonum : see Intr. 45 a, and cf. Prop. l.c.

27. truncus, etc.: see Ode 13, intr. note.—inlapsus cerebro sustulerat : Intr. 82.

28. Faunus : as the accident took place on his farm, he naturally attributes his escape to the god of the woods and fields (cf. I. 17. 1 sqq., III. 18) who had moreover a natural interest in poets, as the protégés of his father Mercury (see vs. 29 n). Cf., however, III. 8. 7.

29. levasset, had averted.—Mercurialium virorum : Horace here appropriates the name familiarly applied to successful business men (cf. S. II. 3. 25) for poets, who also stand under the protection of Mercury as the god of

30. reddere, pay (see I. 3. 7 n), sc. to Jove.

2. lacunar: cf. laqueata tecta, 16. 11 n.

3. trabes Hymettiae: i.e. architraves of marble from Mt. Hymettus in Attica (6. 14 n), which was of a light bluish tint.

4. premunt, rest upon. — columnas: the reference is to the atrium, which being the public room of the house, was decorated with the greatest splendor; cf. III. 1. 45 sq. The columns supported the roof, around the impluvium. — ultima, far; cf. 20. 18. — recisas, quarried.

XVIII. The poet illustrates his favorite maxim of the aurea mediocritas by contrasting his own happy lot, in which small means are united with character, talent, and a contented spirit, with the folly and blindness of those whose grasping ambition and love of show set at defiance the bounds of nature and of right. He gives the ode a slightly dramatic character by singling out one of this class for reproach, but he names no name, and probably had no particular person in mind. The reference to his own position in life will remind the reader of I. 31 and II. 16. 33 sqq., and is similar to the fragment of Bacchylides quoted at 16. 37 n. Cf. also Tib. I. 1, Prop. IV. 2. 9 sqq. — Metre, 167.

1. ebur: used, like the gold, in decorating the ceiling. In prose it would be neque eburneum neque, etc.

5. Africa: the yellow Numidian marble (giallo antico) is meant. The Romans were fond of combining marbles of various colors in their buildings, and the innumerable fragments of these dug up at the present day bear striking testimony to the former magnificence of the city. — neque, etc.: i.e. nor have I unexpectedly come into possession of enormous wealth, — a proverbial result of which is extravagant expenditure. — Attali, of an Attalus. ance of great fortunes by insignificant persons unconnected by kindred with the testator,—often adventurers who had ingratiated themselves by flattery and baser means,—was a familiar feature of Roman life in Horace's day. See S. II. 5, intr. note.

7. Laconicas: the purple-fish (murex) was found especially at Gythium on the Sinus Laconicus and on the coast of Cythera.

8. trahunt, spin; standing here, however, for the whole process of manufacture.—honestae, respectable, well-born. Horace says, in effect, that he is not a powerful patron whose dependents are not merely slaves and freedmen, but well-to-do families, who court his favor with rich presents; cf. Cic. Verr. II. 4. 59.—purpuras, purple stuffs; cf. III. 1. 42.

10. benigna, generous.—vena: cf. divite vena, Ep. II. 3. 409. The figure is probably taken from the underground water-course (vena aquae; cf. Hirt. B. G. VIII. 43. 4, venae fontis intercisae sunt) rather than veins of metal; cf. Ovid, Tr. III. 14. 33 ingenium fregere meum mala, cuius et ante fons infecundus parvaque vena fuit.—est: sc. mihi.—

pauperemque dives, poor as I am, the rich man; Intr. II 6 a. dives is used collectively (Intr. 127). A number of rich men were among Horace's friends.

11. me petit: i.e. is attracted to me, seeks my society.

12. lacesso, I importune, with two accusatives, as a verb of asking.—amicum: Maecenas, as vs. 14 shows.

14. beatus: in its participial sense, made rich; cf. Epod. I. 31 satis superque me benignitas tua ditavit.—unicis, my one, the only one I possess; cf. unicus filius.—Sabinis, Sabine farm; Intr. 24. An estate in a given territory is sometimes designated by the plural of the name of the people,—Sabini for fundus Sabinus; cf. III. 4. 22; Plin. Ep. V. 6. 1 Tuscos meos.

15. truditur dies die, day crowds upon day; cf. Epod. 17. 25.

16. novae lunae: not in the narrower technical sense, but as new phenomena coming with each successive month; cf. Cat. 5. 4 soles occidere et redire possunt.—pergunt: sc. as they always have done; the order of nature goes on. keeping the lesson ever before us. Cf. IV. 7. 7 sqq.—interire: i.e. to wane.

17. secanda marmora: sc. into slabs for pavements and walls; Plin. N. H. XXXVI. 50.

18. locas, are giving contracts for; the technical term. The corresponding word for the contractor's part was redimere (cf. III. 1. 35). The work to be done is expressed by the gerundive construction with either verb.—sub: see I. 8. 14 n.—sepulcri: the 'house' to which you must soon inevitably remove, in contrast with earthly houses (domos); see 29 n.

20. Bais: the favorite watering-place of Rome at this time (Ep. I. 1. 83, 15. 2 sqq.), situated on the gulf of Pozzuoli, about ten miles west of Naples. The word is dative after ob-strepentis.—urges submovere litora, you press on the work of pushing out the shore, for the purpose of building a house close upon the water; cf. III. 1. 33 sqq., and Martial's description (X. 30) of the country-house of Apollinaris at Formiae. Horace, however, represents the rich builder as fretting within the narrow bounds of the shore, which he pushes away (submovere) as an obstacle in his path.

22. continente ripa, while the shore confines you; cf. Caes. B. G.

I. 2. 3 undique loci natura Helvetii continentur. For ripa see I. 2. 14 n.

23. quid quod: a phrase frequently used by the orators in passing to a stronger point; in this case it is from the folly to the wickedness of the rich man. quid, without suggesting any particular verb, calls attention to the fact expressed by the quod-clause.—usque, one after another. usque proximos is equivalent to proximum quemque, the one which on each occasion is nearest.

24. revellis: stronger than the usual term exarare or movere, expressing, like salis 26, the man's unscrupulous violence.—agri terminos, landmarks, boundary stones. Such a stone was sacred, and a curse was pronounced on one who should remove it.

25. clientium: the wickedness was aggravated when the man he wronged was his own client, whom it was his sacred duty to protect against aggression. The laws of the Twelve Tables took cognizance of this crime in the clause: PATRONVS SI CLIENTI FRAVDEM FECERIT, SACER ESTO.

26. salis, stride; see note on revellis, 24, and on transiliunt, I. 3. 24.—pellitur: Intr. 77.—pater nos deos: i.e. the little images of their household gods, their only remaining possessions; cf. Juv. 8. 110. The acquisition of the angulus proximus qui nunc denormat agellum (S. II. 6. 8) was usually a slower and safer process than in the poet's graphic picture, but was effected no less surely by gradually involving the poor neighbor in debts which in the end drove him from his farm utterly impoverished.

28. sordidos, ragged; indicating the poverty of the parents.

29. nulla, etc.: a fuller expression of the suggestion in vs. 18: the rich lord builds palace upon palace, but there is none he can count on so surely as the palace of Death. The construction is: nulla aula divitem erum certior manet (aulā) rapacis Orci fine destinata (for quam aula r. O. f. destinata; Intr. 75).

30. Orci fine: the limit which Orcus (Pluto) sets, i.e. death, the limit of life (mors ultima linea rerum est, Ep. I. 16. 79); cf. fine libidinum, I. 18. 10n. The ablative is instrumental. Some editors take fine as feminine (as in Epod. 17. 36; elsewhere in Horace it is masculine), and (with destinata) as ablative after certior. In either case fine is similar to modus, 6. 7. — destinata: sc. ei.

32. ultra: i.e. beyond the finis Orci; why do you make plans that reach far out beyond your brief span of life? cf. I. 4. 15, 11. 7, II. 11. 11 sq., 16. 17. — aequa tellus: cf. aequo pede and the whole passage, I. 4. 13 n.

34. pueris: for the prosody see Intr. 138. — satelles Orci: Charon.

36. revexit captus, was enticed ... to ferry back; cf. hunc capit argenti splendor, S. I. 4. 28. The story of such an attempt does not occur elsewhere; see 13. 37 n. — hic: Orcus. The meaning is: Death, the great leveler, comes to all alike, — tears the rich man inexorably away from his luxurious life, and relieves the poor man of his heavy burden.

37. Tantalum: see I. 28. 7 n. — Tantali genus: Pelops and his powerful line; see I. 6. 8 n.

38. levare: depending both on vocatus (see Intr. 97 a and cf. Lucr. V. 945 at sedare sitim fluvii fontesque vocabant), and on audit, which from the context acquires the meaning of exoratur; Intr. 76. — functum laboribus: equivalent to defunctum laboribus, III. 24. 15 (cf. Intr. 129); but the phrase is used here, on the analogy of (de)functus vita (cf. 9. 13), to denote the close of a life that is all toil, and is equivalent to functum vita laboriosa; cf. IV. 15. 29.

40. non vocatus audit: oxymoron.—audit, gives ear.

XIX. A hymn to Bacchus. The main part of the poem, which is devoted, like I. 10, to the attributes and achievements of the god, is introduced by two strophes in the spirit of the dithyramb (cf. IV. 2. 10 n). The poet represents himself as having come unexpectedly, while strolling in the woods, upon the god himself, in whose overpowering presence he feels a touch of the frenzy of the bacchanal; and when the first tumultuous emotions have subsided his mind is left in a fit state of exaltation to sing the praises of the god.—Metre, 176.

1. in remotis rupibus: the gods when they visited the earth always sought solitary places, far away from the paths of men; cf. note on imminente luna, I. 4. 5. The haunts of Bacchus were in the hills and woods, hence the epithets ὄρειος, ὄρειφοῖτης frequently applied to him.—carmina docentem: the dithyrambic hymns were attributed to the inspiration of Bacchus himself (cf. III. 25), who is here represented as training the nymphs and satyrs, as Apollo inspires and trains the muses (cf. 10. 18).

2. credite posteri: parenthetical, asserting the truth of the story against its inherent improbability, which will tell against it with greater force when the narrator's personal authority is no longer felt; cf. Epod. 9. 11. The appeal shows that the poet is not here telling of a vision, but represents himself as having actually seen the god.

3. Nymphas . . . Satyrorum: both always represented as musical; cf. I. 1. 31; Lucr. IV. 580 sqq.—auris Satyrorum: a poetical variation of Satyros audientis (parallel to nymphas discentis); cf. umerum, I. 21. 12 n, and Intr. 126 b.

4. capripedum: so also in Lúcretius (l. c.) and in some of the later Greek poets. The attribute is borrowed from Pan and the Panisci. The Satyr was generally represented with pointed ears, conspicuous against his bald head, a tuft of hair on his neck, and a tail; in other respects his figure was human.

5. euhoe: the cry of the bacchantes (εὐοὴ) in their orgies (cf. I. 18. 9); here interjected and repeated to express vividly the poet's complete possession by the divine enthusiasm. — recenti: i.e. not yet quieted. — metu: the sight of a god was always a strain on human nerves (χαλεποὶ δὲ θεοὶ φαίνεσθαι ἐναργεῖς, II. XX. 131); cf. Verg. A. IV. 279 sqq.

6. pleno Bacchi: cf. III. 25. 1 sq. — turbidum: Intr. 48.

7. parce: sc. from the full force of his inspiration, which would drive the poet to frenzy; cf. Verg. A. VI. 77 sqq.

8. gravi, dread, because its touch brought on madness. — metuende: cf. I. 12. 23.

9. fas, vouchsafed; cf. I. 24. 20. He feels the assurance of this in the revelation with which the god has favored him. — pervicacis, untiring, persevering, i.e. in their fanatical orgies, which were kept up day and night. — Thyiadas: θυιάδες (cf. θυῶ, 'rave') was another name for the maenads (μαινάδες; cf. μαινομαι) or Bacchae (βάκχαι), the women who took part in the orgies of the god.

10. vinī fontem, etc.: these miracles, effected by the stroke of the thyrsus, are described in Eurip. Bacch. 704 sqq.; cf. also 141 ὁ δ' ἔξαρχος Βρόμιος εὐοῖ. βεῖ δὲ γάλακτι πέδον, βεῖ δ' ὄνυξ, βεῖ δὲ μελισσᾶν νέκταρι. — et: Intr. 114.

11. truncis lapsa: Intr. 70. Cf. Epod. 16. 47; Verg. E. 4. 30.

12. iterare: to go over in words, equivalent to narrare; cf. Plaut. As. 567 tua malefacta iterari multa et vero possunt.

13. fas: Intr. 116 h. — et, too. — beatae, blessed, i.e. by being received into heaven. — coniugis: Ariadne.

14. honorem: i.e. the golden crown, her wedding present from Bacchus, which the god, on receiving her into heaven, placed among the stars (the 'Northern Crown'); cf. Ov. M. VIII. 176 sqq., F. III. 459 sqq. For the form of expression cf. umerum, I. 21. 12 n. — Penthei: grandson of Cadmus and his successor as king of Thebes. For resist ing the worship of Bacchus he was torn to pieces by his own mother Agave and other women, who in their frenzy mistook him for a wild beast, and his house was destroyed; Ov. M. III. 513 sqq. For the form cf. Vlixæi, I. 6. 7 n.

16. Lycurgi: a king of the Edoni (7. 27 n) who attempted to suppress the bacchanalian orgies and the cultivation of the vine. He was driven mad by Bacchus, and after killing his own wife and son was himself devoured by panthers (Hygin. Fab. 132). There are, however, other versions of his punishment, as Il. VI. 130 sqq.; and later writers (as Nonnus, Dionys. XX. 149 sqq.) make him an Arab prince.

17. tu: see I. 10. 9 n. — flectis, dost subdue to thy will (cf. IV. 1. 6); alluding to the miracles of his Indian expedition, and particularly to his crossing the Hydaspes without wetting the feet of his panthers, and reducing the rebellious river to obedience (Nonn. Dionys. XXIII. 125 sqq., XXIV. 7 sqq.). That he exercised a similar power over the waters of the Indian ocean (mare barbarum) is implied by Seneca, who calls him Lycurgi domitor et rubri maris (Herc. Fur. 903).

18. separatis: cf. remotis, I n. — uvidus: sc. vino; see IV. 5. 39 n.

19. nodo viperino: i.e. with a snake instead of a ribbon; cf. Cat. 64. 258 (bacchantes) pars sese tortis serpentibus incingebant.

20. Bistonidum: i.e. Thracian bacchantes, the Bistones being a Thracian tribe; cf. Sithoniis, I. 18. 9 n. — fraude, harm (sc. to them); an archaic use of the word, borrowed from certain legal formulas; cf. Liv. I. 24. 5 rex respondit: quod sine fraude mea populi que Romani Quiritium fiat, facio.

21. tu, cum, etc.: according to one form of the tradition, Bacchus as well as Hercules was summoned to the aid of the gods in their battle with the giants; see I2. 6 n. — parentis, thy father (Jove). — regna: Intr. 128. — per arduum, up the steep path to.

22. impia: as attacking the gods.

23. Rhoetum: one of the Giants; cf. III. 4. 55. — leonis, etc.: this feature of the story is not found elsewhere, but in his adventure with the pirates Bacchus turned himself into a lion to frighten his captors; Hom. Hymn in Dionys. (7). 44.

 pacis eras mediusque belli.
 Te vidit insons Cerberus aureo 30 cornu decorum, leniter atterens caudam, et recedentis trilingui ore pedes tetigitque crura.

26. dictus: a present passive participle, if the language possessed one, would here be in place, to express what was true up to and during the time of ferebaris. The perfect, however, is in keeping with the feeling of the language, which tends to express the cause as preceding the effect in time as well as logically.

27. idem, etc.: i.e. thou wast (as the event proved) quite as well qualified for war as for peace. idem is predicate; (medius) pacis and medius belli belong to the subject. For the position of -que, showing that medius is to be understood with pacis, and hence excluding the meaning 'half-way between peace and war,' see Intr. 119 b. The use of the genitive with medius for in media pace, etc., is poetical, and is not found elsewhere. It is used in a different sense in Ep. I. 18. 9.

29. te vidit, etc.: the hymn concludes, like I. 10, with the visit of the god to the lower world, where he went to bring away his mother Semele and take her to heaven.—insons: to be closely connected with vidit.

30. cornu: apparently not here attributed to Bacchus as the symbol of strength and courage (cf. III. 21. 18 n), as it often is (e.g. Tib. II. 1. 3, Prop. IV. 17. 19), but the drinking horn with which he is sometimes represented in vase-paintings, the κέρας, βεβυσμένον ἡδέος οἴνου, χρύσεον εὐπολήτρον, which he carried in his left hand (the thyrsus in his right) as he marched at the head of his army to India (Nonn. XIV. 240). With the wine from this he quiets Cerberus.—atterens, wagging.

31. recedentis: genitive. The first part of the strophe referred to the entrance of Bacchus into Hades.—trilingui ore: equivalent to linguis triplicis oris. There is no good reason to suppose that Horace intended to present a conception of Cerberus different from the prevailing one; it was necessary to mention the tongue, and it was obviously desirable here to keep the number of heads so far as possible in the background, as the picture of a fawning dog with three heads is at best a difficult one to manage. Where it suits his purpose (13. 34) he makes the monster hundred-headed.

32. tetigit: i.e. licked.—-que: see Intr. 119 b.

XX. The poet foretells his own immortality in the form of an allegory based on the familiar fancy of the Greeks that the souls of poets after death passed into swans and in this form continued to exercise their gift of song (Plat. Rep. X. 620 A). Such outspoken appreciation of his own merits, though foreign to our habits, was not offensive to Roman taste, and perhaps the same is true of the extremely realistic description of the transformation, though some editors have doubted this and would strike out the third strophe as at least unworthy of a man of Horace's taste. Its realism certainly goes beyond the passage of Euripides (Fr. 911) by which perhaps it was suggested:

Χρύσσαι δὴ μοι πτέρυγες περὶ νώτῳ καὶ τὰ Ζευρῆνων πτερόεντα πέδιλ' ἄρμόζονται,
 βάσσω μάλ' τ' εἰς αἰθέρα πολλὸν ἀερεῖς, Ζηνὶ προσμύξω.

The ode is not improbably the result of Horace's first attempt to write an epilogue for the three books, and was relegated to its present subordinate position when he had composed the much superrior poem which now worthily fills that place. — Metre, 176.

1. non usitata: signifying that his fame rests on a new kind of poetry (cf. III. 30. 13); nec tenui: i.e. strong, signifying that his fame is secure.

2. biformis: i.e. first a man and then a bird. Others, however, following Porphyrio, understand it to refer to Horace's achievements in two departments of poetry (quod et lyrica scribat et hexametros).

4. -que: see I. 27. 16 n; the negatives in vs. 1. belong to the adjectives, and neque morabor conveys an affirmative idea (= discedam). — maior, raised above, superior to; the result of success which can no longer be questioned.

5. urbis: more picturesque than terram; cf. I. 35. 10, III. 4. 46. — non ego: cf. I. 18. 11 n; Intr. 116 g. — pauperum sanguis parentum: a fact of which Horace was never ashamed even in his younger days (cf. S. I. 6. 71 sqq.), and which he brings into prominence here as adding lustre to his fame, because it shows that he owed his success solely to his own merits.

6. quem vocas (sc. ad te), whom you invite. i.e. admit to your society; the converse of me petit, 18. 11 n; cf. revocas, S. I. 6. 61. The present expresses customary action. This appears to be the most probable explanation, but the expression is vague, and the suggestion of Bücheler (Rhein. Mus. XXXVII. p. 238) that vocare is the technical word for the relation of patron to client (is qui cluet) is plausible. In either case Horace's clear purpose is to recall, in contrast with his present position (invidia maior) and prospective immortality, his humble origin and the envy and detraction to which as the friend of Maecenas he was subjected in the earlier part of his career (Intr. 23).

9. residunt, is settling, owing to the limbs growing slimmer.—cruribus: Intr. 69.—asperae: with residunt.

10. pelles: Intr. 128.—album alitem: see intr. note.

11. supernē: referring especially to album. The -e is short also in Lucr. VI. 544 and 597.—lèves: in contrast with asperae; Intr. 116 b.

13. Daedaleo Icaro: cf. Semeleius Thyoneus, I. 17. 22 n. The adjective here virtually includes the father in the comparison, which would have been a more fortunate one if the mention of the son could have been omitted altogether; the reader can hardly help remembering the unhappy end of his flight.—notior: for the reading ocior, which has the support of some good manuscripts, see Intr. 185.

14. visam, etc.: signifying that his poems will be read and sung in the remotest parts of the earth.—gementis Bospori: cf. rauci Hadriae, 14. 14.

15. Gaetulas: for 'African'; cf. Intr. 117 b.

16. Hyperboreos campos: originally a mythical happyland situated 'beyond Boreas' (ultra Aquilonem gens felix, si credimus, quos Hyperboreos appellavere, Plin. N. H. IV. 89), and hence not exposed to his cold blasts, a paradise of innocence and peace. The myth was variously located by different authors, but mostly, in accordance with the name, in the far North, so that hyperboreus came to be a poetical term for 'northern,' as here; cf. Verg. G. IV. 517 hyperboreas glacies; III. 381.

17. me Colchus, etc.: the converse of the same idea: 'I shall visit the remotest lands (13-16), and their peoples shall learn to know me (17-20).' Observe further that the nations named represent two classes, the barbarians beyond the frontier and the peoples who have already come under the influence of Roman civilization; and the verbs (noscent, discet) are chosen with reference to this distinction.—dissimulat metum: i.e. is afraid, in spite of his bold front.

18. Marsae: cf. I. 2. 39 n.—Dacus: see I. 26. 4 n.—ultimi: see 18. 4 n.

19. Geloni: see 9. 23 n.—peritus, accomplished. That literature was already cultivated at this time in Spain is shown by the number of poets and prose writers whom that country began to produce in the next generation. The Senecas, Quintilian, Lucan, and Martial were the most prominent.

20. Rhodani potor: the Gaul. The importance of a great river to the communities through which it flows makes the phrase an appropriate one; cf. 9. 21 sq.

21. absint, etc.: cf. the epitaph of Ennius (Cic. Tusc. I. 34):

Nemo me lacrimis decoret nec funera fletu | faxit! Cur? Volito vivus per ora virum.—inani: because there will be no body to burn.—funere: Intr. 70.—neniae: formal dirges, chanted usually by women hired for the purpose (præficiae); cf. 1. 38.

22. luctus: plural, of various forms of mourning.—turpes, unseemly, such as tearing the hair or face, beating the breast, etc.; Intr. 125. This, too, was done by hired mourners.—querimoniae: of friends and relations.

23. compesce: addressed to Maecenas, as the chief mourner.—clamorem: the clamor supremus (Ov. Tr. III. 3. 43) or wail of sorrow raised by those present at a deathbed when life was extinct.

24. supervacuus: because his fame was secure without any material monument; cf. III. 30. 1. Horace always uses this form instead of the Ciceronian supervacaneus.

LIBER TERTIVS

I.

✓ Odi profanum volgus et arceo.

Favete linguis ! Carmina non prius audita Musarum sacerdos virginibus puerisque canto.

The six odes with which this book opens are marked by certain characteristics which unite them together as a group and give them a unique and conspicuous place in the collection. In contrast with Horace's usual method of arrangement, they are all in the same metre; they are addressed, not to any individual, but to all patriotic Romans; they are furnished with a common introduction, which sets the key for a discourse of unusual dignity and earnestness; and throughout them all, with whatever license of poetic digression and embellishment, the thought pursues one main theme, — the moral qualities that are indispensable alike to the happiness of the individual and to the strength of the state. For these reasons some critics, ancient and modern, have regarded them, not as separate odes, but as parts of a single poem, and have sought, with much ingenuity, to trace a connection of thought between the close of each and the opening of the next. In this, it must be said, they have not been completely successful: the odes bear the appearance of having been written separately; but they were probably all written about the same time,—the internal evidence points to the period immediately following the political settlement of B.C. 27, when Octavian, with the title of 'Augustus,' was definitely invested with the principate, and Horace's mind was full of visions of the coming regeneration of the state. And there can be no question that Horace designedly arranged the odes, as we find them, in a lyrical sequence, as poems with a common subject and purpose, and gave them here a position worthy of their dignity and importance. Not less certain is the design of the first strophe, in which, with almost startling impressiveness, he steps forward as the priest of the Muses, and, warning off the 'uninitiate herd,' makes his appeal, with solemn earnestness, to those who have ears to hear, and especially to the young, whose hearts are not yet hardened by the vices he is about to attack. Clearly, this is an introduction to the whole series, and does not belong to the first ode alone.

I. After the opening strophe, the poet sets forth the futility of seeking happiness in wealth and power. First, he raises his hearers to a higher point of view, from which the human distinctions we make so much of are seen in truer perspective: kings sink to the level of their meanest subjects before the supreme might of Jove; riches, high birth, fame, influence count for nothing against the inexorable allotment of death. Wealth cannot buy, nor power create, the peace of mind which belongs to him alone who has learned contentment.—Metre 176.

1. profanum volgus: i.e. all the uninitiated, whose mere presence would defile the holy rite which the bard is (figuratively) about to perform (cf. Verg. A. VI. 258). They typify the ignorant multitude, whose stolid minds are incapable of receiving his teaching.

2. favete linguis: addressed to those who remain. It means properly 'Speak only words of good omen' (cf. 14. 11), but practically (like εὐφημεῖτε) 'Keep reverent silence' (cf. sacro silentio, II. 13. 29 n), since laymen could not be sure what words might have an unlucky significance. Cf. Aristoph. Thesmoph. 39 εὐφημος πᾶς ἔστω λαός, στόμα συγκλήσας.—non prius audita: the poems belong to the class called gnomic, for which the Greeks (e.g. Theognis) commonly used the elegiac metre. In his use of the Alcaic for this purpose, as well as in his manner of dealing with his subject, Horace might fairly lay claim to originality.

3. Musarum sacerdos: i.e. the inspired mouthpiece of their teachings. For Horace's view of the office of the poet as instructor of youth (virginibus puerisque) see Ep. II. 1. 126 sqq.

5. regum, etc.: sc. imperium est; but timendorum is virtually part of the predicate. The whole clause is in the nature of a concession: 'Dreadful is the might of kings to their own subjects, who tremble as cattle before them; but' etc.—in: with the accusative expressing the object on which power or influence is exercised; cf. Plaut. Men. 1030 si quid imperist in te mihi; Tac. Ann. III. 24. 2 valida divo Augusto in rem publicam fortuna.—greges: not to be confused with the Homeric figure of kings as 'shepherds of the people'; the thought here is quite the reverse, being complementary to that of timendorum.

7. Giganteo triumpho: cf. II. 1. 16. The unapproachable superiority of Jove's physical power is summed up in this allusion: To him whose arm has subdued the portentous strength of the Giants, what are the puny kings of men?

8. cuncta, etc.: the figure is Homeric (Il. I. 528 sqq.); cf. Cat. 64. 204 sqq.; Verg. A. IX. 106.

9. est, it is true; a meaning given to it by its emphatic position, making the sentence concessive,—just as we say 'He was (no doubt) at fault, but etc.,' and the like. The apodosis begins with aequa lege, 14. For the construction of est ut, see Gr. 332 a 3.—viro vir: Intr. 75. The juxtaposition was a favorite one; cf.

Verg. A. XI. 632 implicuere inter se acies legitque virum vir; Liv. XXII. 14. 14, etc.—latius ordinet, etc.: i.e. is a more extensive land-owner.

10. arbusta: i.e. vineyards, in which the vines were trained on trees planted at regular intervals (ordinet sulcis); cf. II. 15. 4 n.

11. descendat: sc. from the hills, where the houses of the better class were situated.—Campum: sc. Martium, where the elections were held. Observe that the thought here is concerned with the distinctions among men, and not with the political contest, which is introduced only as the scene in which these distinctions are conspicuously displayed.

12. meliorque: Intr. 119 b.

13. turba clientium: in his atrium at the salutatio, or morning reception, when the clients were expected to call and pay their respects to their patron, or in public, when they escorted him on his way to or from the Forum or the Campus.

14. aequa: see I. 4. 13 n, II. 18. 32; expressing the main point of contrast with what precedes, it naturally comes to the front in its own clause.—Necessitas: personified, as in I. 35. 17, where she appears as the minister who executes the decrees of Destiny; here and in 24. 6, with special reference to the decree of death to man.

15. sortitur, dooms.—insignis: cf. I. 34. 13

16. urna: see II. 3. 26 n.

17. destructus ensis, etc.: i.e. this ever-impending presence of death hangs over the godless man like the sword of Damocles, and robs him of all enjoyments in the midst of luxury. The well-known story of Damocles is told by Cicero, Tusc. V. 61.—cui: Intr. 114.—super: cf. I. 9. 5 n.—impia: Intr. 124.

18. Siculae: i.e. such as those served to Damocles. The high living of the Sicilian Greeks was proverbial.

19. elaborabunt: implying that his natural appetite is gone. For the prefix, cf. I. 5. 8 n.

20. avium citharaeque: artificial devices to induce sleep; cf. Ep. I. 2. 31. Aviaries were kept in many wealthy establishments.

Maecenas, who suffered from insomnia, resorted to the device of soft music played at a distance (Sen. de Prov. 3. 10).

21. reducent: implying that it has deserted him; cf. reponi, 5. 30. Sleep is half personified here, as in the next sentence.—agrestium virorum: limiting domos, although felt also ἀπὸ κοινοῦ with somnus (Intr. 76). The words are drawn away from their grammatical connection towards the head of the sentence for more emphatic contrast with the preceding. Cf. Epod. 2. 25 sqq. This brings us to the other side of the poet's subject, the contented man, whose happier lot he sets forth in the next two strophes; cf. Verg. G. II. 458 sqq.

24. tempe: see I. 7. 4 n; here it is an appellative, as it had already come to be used by the Greeks (e.g. Theocr. 1. 67); cf. Cic. ad Att. IV. 15. 5, Verg. G. II. 469.

25. desiderantem, etc.: cf. Ep. I. 2. 46 sqq. The man who bounds his desires by his wants is free from the harassing anxieties of avarice, as exemplified in the trader (25-28) and the great landowner (29-32). Vss. 27, 28 might also refer to the latter (see Verg. G. I. 204 sq.), but non (29) clearly divides the two instances.

27. Arcturi cadentis: near the end of October; cadentis for occidentis, as in Epod. 10. 10; Intr. 129.

28. impetus: with reference to the violent storms which accompanied (and were supposed to be caused by) the setting of the constellation.—orientis Haedi: in the middle of October; also regarded as a source of storms; cf. nimbosis Haedis, Ov. Tr. I. 11. 13.

29. verberatae vineae: Intr. 105 a. Cf. Ep. I. 8. 4 sq.

30. fundusque mendax: the exasperated cry of the disappointed planter, whose abuse of the farm, as if it were a living thing, is thoroughly human. Cf. Ep. I. 7. 87. Personification of the farm, with which the farmer's life was so closely bound up, was very common, as it was very natural; cf. Cic. de Sen. 51.—arbore: the personification is still kept up: the tree, speaking for itself and its fellows, is always offering some excuse for their shortcomings. arbore may stand for the vine (see

I. 18. 1 n), but as this has just been mentioned, the poet no doubt has in mind here simply fruit-bearing trees, and in particular the olive. — aquas: i.e. excess of wet weather.

31. torrentia, etc.: i.e. drouth, attributed, like all other meteorological conditions, to the influence of certain constellations. Cf. 29. 17 sqq.

33. contracta, etc.: cf. II. 18. 20 sqq.; III. 24. 3 sq. — pisces sentiunt: i.e. they find their realm encroached upon by creatures of another element. The hyperbole has been condemned as extravagant by rod-and-line critics, but it adds a telling stroke to the picture of wealth making its elaborate and costly provision for a life of pleasure: even the bounds which nature has set offer no check to these ambitious projects.

34. molibus: of stone, to serve as foundations for the house. — huc: i.e. in altum. — frequens: singular for plural; cf. Plin. N. H. IX. 180 ibi frequens hic piscis, and the corresponding use of rarus, IV. 1. 34. The use is similar to that of multus (I. 5. 1), plurimus (I. 7. 8 n), etc.

35. caementa: broken stones (cf. caedo) of irregular size and shape, used to fill the spaces between the larger blocks. — redemptor: here builder; see II. 18. 18 n.

36. famulis: i.e. his workmen, who would naturally be slaves. — dominus: he too is present, hurrying on the work, — showing his impatient eagerness to realize his dream of pleasure. — terrae: with fastidiosus; Intr. 66 a.

37. timor et minae: hendia-dys; the menaces are those which he sees in the object of his fear. The thought is the same as that expressed by the sword of Damocles, above.

38. scandunt eodem: he cannot take refuge from them in his lofty sea-castle.

39. aerata, etc.: see II. 16. 21 n, where the whole thought is the same as here. — triremi: usually a war vessel, here the large private yacht of the rich man; cf. Ep. I. 1. 93 quem ducit priva triremis. For the case, see Intr. 70.

40. atra: in II. 16. 21, vitiosa; but the uppermost thought here is that of death (see I. 28. 13 n).

 rich marbles (see II. 18. 5 n) used by the Romans in their more splendid edifices. It was mottled with red. For this and the following epithets, see Intr. 117 a.

 atrium (sublime). With the establishment of peace and security under Augustus came a great flow of capital to the city and a great impetus to the building of ornate private houses as well as public edifices.
 We have here grammatically an ablative of manner combined with one of characteristic; but novo

ritu is practically a qualifying adjunct of sublime, which is parallel with invidendis postibus.

46. moliar, build; suggesting a massive, laborious structure;
 cf. II. 15. 2; III. 29. 10.—atrium:
 see note on columnas, II. 18. 4.

47. valle Sabina: Intr. 24. For the construction, see Intr. 74.

II. In the first ode, the poet's aim was mainly negative,—to strip of their glamour the two most coveted objects of human endeavor, honor and, more particularly, riches; to show that the possession of them is but vanity and vexation of spirit. In the present ode, he assumes a positive attitude and proposes a more excellent way. In the cultivation of character and, in particular, of the sterling Roman virtues of manliness and loyalty (virtus and fides), he points out to the young Roman the worthy object of a nobler ambition, and one that brings its own sure reward.—Metre, 746.

f. angustam, etc.: he takes up the thought where he left it in the preceding ode: For this life of contented poverty, let the young

Roman train himself in the hardships and perils of warfare, where his ambition is to be a terror to our foes, and his glory to die, if need be, for his country. Cf. IV. 9. 49 sqq. — amice, cheerfully, gladly, as something to be welcomed. Cf. clementer ferre, molliter ferre in Cicero, and our 'take kindly.' For the alliteration in this verse, see Intr. 131.

2. robustus, grown sturdy, i.e. through the sturdiness he has acquired. — militia : with robustus. — puer : see I. 9. 16 n.

3. condiscat : subjunctive of wish. — ferocis, bold ; said with a touch of depreciation : our lad shall humble their pride.

4. eques, as a, etc.

5. sub divo : see I. 1. 25 n.

6. illum : notice the emphasis, — 'my aspiration for him is,' etc. The scene which follows is modeled upon Il. XXII. 25 sqq., where Priam and Hecuba, watching Achilles from the walls, entreat Hector not to expose himself to a combat with him. — hosticis : cf. civicum, Il. 1. 1 n.

7. tyranni : the king whose city is besieged by the Romans. The queen and princess, like the women in the Iliad (III. 141 sqq., XXII. 460 sqq.), watch the battle from the ramparts.

9. eheu : expressing the woman's sigh ; but what follows is not a quotation of her words. — ne, etc. : depending on the notion of fear conveyed by suspiret. — agminum, of battalions, i.e. of warfare in general.

10. sponsus regius : the son of some neighboring king, betrothed to the princess. — asperum tactu : see I. 37. 26 n.

11. leonem : the young Roman warrior. — cruenta ira : see Intr. 124.

13. dulce, etc. : the connection of thought is this : 'And if such heroic conduct should cost him his life, it is a joyful and glorious privilege ; for death comes to every man, whether he face it or flee from it.' Cf. Cic. Phil. 14. 31 o fortunata mors, quae naturae debita pro patria est potissimum reddita !

 nec sumit aut ponit securis 20 arbitrio popularis aurae ; virtus recludens immeritis mori

 coetusque vulgaris et udam spernit humum fugiente penna.

14. et, as well. — persequitur : the prefix denotes the persistency of the pursuit, — death is ever at his heels, no matter how fast he may run away (cf. vs. 32), and despatches him at last with a wound in the back. Horace had doubtless read in his Simonides (Fr. 65) ὁ δ' αὖ θάνατος κίχεν καὶ τὸν φυγόμαχον.

15. imbellis, faint-hearted.

16. poplitibus, etc. : cf. Liv. XXII. 48. 4 aversam adoriuntur Romanam aciem, tergaque ferientes ac poplites caedentes stragem ingentem . . . fecerunt.

17. virtus, true manhood, the character of the ideal man (vir). The clauses that follow are not designed to describe the attitude of the man of character towards political honors, but to express the inherent nobility of character itself, and the figures borrowed from the political arena are used to mark the superiority of the power which character confers over the coveted prizes of political life : The success of character is sure, with no risk of humiliating defeat ; its 'honors' are unsullied by any base practices used in winning them ; its power is permanent, and not held for a brief space by the favor of the fickle populace. The same figure is used still more boldly in IV. 9. 39. — repulsae : the technical term for defeat as a candidate for office.

18. fulget : cf. 16. 31 fulgentem imperio. — honoribus : cf. I. 1. 8 n.

20. aurae : see I. 5. 11 n.

21. virtus : Intr. 116 g. — recludens, etc. : it is manhood, in its highest development, that, at the end of his earthly career, exalts the hero to heaven and makes him a god. The third ode is an expansion and illustration of this text. — mori : Intr. 101 d.

22. negata : sc. as a rule, — not open to common men ; cf. indocili collo, 3. 14. — temptat iter : the conception is here shifted a little ; virtus, which in vs. 21 is the power that opens heaven to the hero, is now merged in the personality of the hero himself, as the immortal part of him which rises above earth and death, and finds a way to heaven.

23. udam : referring to the rain and fogs of the lower air, and suggesting by contrast the fine, pure quality of the aether above, the abode of the gods.

25. est et, etc.: another maxim from Simonides (Fr. 66), ἔστι καὶ σιγᾶς ἀκινδυνον γέρας, which is said to have been adopted by Augustus (Plutarch Moral. 207 D). The virtue of loyalty is coupled with virtus, as its complement in those whose lot or whose gifts do not call them to great achievement. There can be no doubt that Horace had Maecenas here chiefly in mind; cf. Prop. IV. 8. 33 Caesaris et famæ vestigia iuncta tenebis; | Maecenatis erunt vera tropaea fides. Being merely a negative virtue, the importance of loyalty is best appreciated by contemplating its opposite, the wicked betrayal of trust, on which the poet accordingly dwells, expressing in a vivid way his abhorrence of it, and the certainty that sooner or later it will be overtaken by the just retribution of heaven. Cf. I. 18. 11 sqq.

26. Cereris sacrum : i.e. the Eleusinian mysteries, used simply as an illustration; Intr. 117 a.

27. arcanæ, mystic. Intr. 125.

28. sit the subjunctive without ne after veto is suggested, perhaps, by the familiar form of prohibition, cave sis. — trabibus : i.e. roof. — fragilem : suggesting the opportunity offered to the deity to inflict the merited punishment.

29. phaselon, yacht, as in Catullus 4; a long, narrow, fast-sailing craft of Egyptian origin, named from its resemblance in shape to the kidney bean (φάσηλος). — Diespiter : see I. i. 25 n, 34. 5.

30. neglectus : cf. 6. 7. The neglect might consist either of failure to recognize his supremacy by due worship and sacrifice (cf. I. 34. 1) or of indifference to his commandments; more commonly the two would go together. — incesto, impure, polluted by sin, and hence offensive to the god; cf. I. 12. 59. — addidit, involves . . . with; sc. in the same punishment, such as the fall of the building or the capsizing of the boat. For the tense, see Intr. 80. — integrum, the holy man; in meaning (from in and root of tango) it is the opposite of incesto.

31. raro : with deseruit. — antecedentem : i.e. though punishment does not instantly follow the crime; implying (with pede claudo) a feeling of security in the offender.

32. deseruit : i.e. is left behind and gives up the pursuit; cf. II. 16. 22. — pede claudo : concessive, whether taken as ablative absolute or ablative of characteristic.

Iustum et tenacem propositi virum non civium ardor prava iubentium, non voltus instantis tyranni mente quatit solida, neque Auster, 5 dux inquieti turbidus Hadriae, nec fulminantis magna manus Iovis :

III. The poet now reverts to the praise of strong manhood, and develops the thought embodied in the strophes on virtus in the preceding ode, the transition from which is so natural that the two odes have been regarded as one, and are so written in some good manuscripts. What was there said of manly character in the abstract is here restated with concrete illustrations. In the fine climax of the first two strophes we see the man of upright character and resolute will stemming the tide of popular passion, braving the threats of power, facing calmly the most violent convulsions of nature. This is the quality, the poet exclaims, which carried the great benefactors of our race through their trials and enabled them to attain heaven at last,—a Hercules, a Pollux, a Bacchus, a Romulus. The last illustration tempts him away from his subject, and he follows his fancy in describing the scene in heaven, when the gods in council consented to admit the founder of Rome to their company. This long description, which occupies the greater part of the ode, is at the end treated playfully by the poet as an unwarranted digression, for which he rebukes his muse; but it is quite in keeping with the patriotic purpose of these odes, and it serves, like the episode of Regulus in the fifth, to break the monotony of his long moral discourse. The use of the title Augustus in vs. 11 shows that the poem was not written before B.C. 27. — Metre, 176.

1. iustum et tenacem propositi, upright and steadfast, i.e. steadfast in the right; for of course the propositum of a iustus vir must itself be iustum. The quality described (hac arte, 9) is constantia, one of the cardinal Roman virtues, based on rectitude,—the man who first makes sure the course of action he proposes is right, and then consistently adheres to it.

2. civium ardor: Horace may have had in mind the conduct of Socrates at the trial of the nine generals (Xen. Mem. I. 1. 18).

3. tyranni: the word implies irresponsible, and hence arbitrary power. It is possible that Socrates (under the Thirty Tyrants) was the model for this part of the picture also.

4. mente: ablative of respect. — neque Auster, etc.: i.e. if right impels him, he will go undaunted through storm and flood. What is, audacia in I. 3. 9 sqq. is here fortitudo.

5. dux Hadriae: cf. I. 3. 15 arbiter Hadriae; II. 17. 19. — turbidus, boisterous.

si fractus inlabatur orbis, impavidum ferient ruinae.

Hac arte Pollux et vagus Hercules 10 enisus arcis attigit igneas, quos inter Augustus recumbens purpureo bibet ore nectar;
hac te merentem, Bacche pater, tuae vexere tigres indocili iugum

7. fractus, should break and.—orbis: here used in a wider sense (= mundus), the sphere of the heavens; cf. vs. 53, where mundus (like our 'world') is used for the earth only.

9. hac arte: see vs. 1 n.—Pollux: suggesting also his inseparable twin brother; cf. 29. 64; Verg. G. III. 89; Prop. IV. 22. 26.—vagus: in reference to the long journeys which his labors entailed.

10. enisus: in its literal sense of struggling out of difficulties and hindrances to a position where one is free from them. Cf. Tac. Ann. I. 70. 6 Vitellius in editiora enisus eodem agmen subduxit.—arcis, heights; cf. aetherias arcis, Ov. Tr. V. 3. 19.—igneas: in reference to the stars (called ignes, I. 12. 47). Cf. Cic. Somn. Scip. 15 sqq. 'iustitiam cole et pietatem . . . ; ea vita via est in caelum et in hunc coetum eorum qui iam vixerunt et corpore relaxati illum incolunt locum quem vides'—erat autem is splendidissimo candore inter flammis circulus . . . 'Nonne aspicias quae in templa veneris? Novem tibi orbibus vel potius globis conexasunt omnia, quorum unus caelestis est extimus . . . in quo sunt infixi illi quivolvuntur stellarum cursus sempiterni.

11. quos inter, etc.: i.e. like Pollux and Hercules, the great benefactor of the world in our day will be received, when his work is done, among the gods. Cf. Verg. G. I. 24, 503 and Ep. II. 1. 5 sqq., where Horace makes the same comparison, writing at a time when the worship of Augustus was already an accomplished fact. However extravagant the compliment may seem to us, and however perfunctory it may have been on Horace's part, there was nothing in it repugnant to Roman religious notions. See the curious discussion of the subject in Tacitus, Ann. IV. 38. 4 sqq.—recumbens: i.e. at a banquet: cf. Ep. I. 5. 1.

12. purpureo ore, with rosy lips; the hue of eternal youth, the lumen iuventae purpureum (Verg. A. I. 590) proper to a god. Cf. Verg. A. II. 593.

13. hac . . . hac: ablatives of cause (unlike hac arte, 9), the first with merentem, the second with merens (with Quirinus), suggested by the anaphora.—Bacche pater: cf. I. 18. 6 n.

14. vexere: sc. in caelum, as the anaphora and merentem sufficiently imply.—tigres: so, too, Vergil (A. VI. 805) and Ovid (Ars Amat. I. 550, Am. I. 2. 48); in Greek poetry and art Bacchus is drawn by panthers. His control of wild beasts typifies his civilizing influence.—indocili: cf. negata, 2. 22 n.

- 15 collo trahentes ; hac Quirinus Martis equis Acheronta fugit, gratum elocuta consiliantibus Iunone divis : ' Ilion, Ilion fatalis incestusque iudex 20 et mulier peregrina vertit in pulverem, ex quo destituit deos mercede pacta Laomedon mihi castaeque damnatum Minervae cum populo et duce fraudulento.

16. equis: i.e. in his chariot (though the abl. is instrumental); cf. conscendit equos Gradivus, Ov. Met. XIV. 820, where the apotheosis of Romulus is described. See also Liv. I. 16.

17. gratum (with divis): implying that all the rest were ready to welcome the hero. The poet's object is obviously to show how Rome now enjoys the unanimous favor of the gods, divided as they had been in feeling towards Rome's mother city. Juno voices the sentiments of those who had hated the Trojans. Her speech is thoroughly natural: in yielding all that was desired, she is at great pains to show that she yields nothing at all. Her righteous enmity was against Troy and its perjured people,—her rekindled wrath breaks out in a savage repetition of the name, Ilion, Ilion; but Troy has perished, and her vengeance is satisfied. Let the remnants of the accursed race live and prosper,—if only in exile; let them extend their sway over the farthest lands and people,—but they must not rebuild Troy. That she dwells at such length and recurs again to this condition, which saves her dignity and her consistency, is sufficiently explained by the poet's desire to make the scene true to life. Cf. her speech in Verg. A. XII. 823 sqq.

19. fatalis: i.e. an instrument in the hands of fate; referring to iudex only.—incestus: cf. 2. 30 n. His sin was in giving his verdict for a bribe in dealing with the gods.—iudex et mulier: Paris and Helen. The goddess in her lofty scorn cannot take their names on her lips; so again below, vss. 25 sq.

20. vertit: cf. Verg. A. I. 20; Intr. 129.

21. ex quo, ever since; defining the time of damnatum.—deos: Poseidon and Apollo, who served him for a year, one building the walls of the city, the other keeping his flocks, according to Il. XXI. 446 sqq. According to another myth, which Horace appears to have in mind in vs. 66, Apollo built the wall; cf. Verg. G. III. 36 Troiae Cynthia auctor.

23. damnatum, forfeited, given over to our vengeance. See Roby 1199.—Minervae: against whom, with Juno, the judgment of Paris had gone.

24. duce: Laomedon, at the time; but the doom actually fell on his son Priam.

ordinibus patiar deorum.

25. adulterae : dative ; cf. quibus nites, I. 5. 12.

26. famosus, notorious (sc. as a hospes).—nec, no longer (from the influence of iam, which belongs to both clauses).

28. opibus : here equivalent to viribus ; cf. IV. 4. 60.—refringit, shatters ; more commonly used in prose of breaking down an obstacle ; here, of presenting so firm a resistance that the assailing force is shattered upon it. Cf. the use of debilitat, I. 11. 5, and Prop. IV. 3. 44 Teutonicas Roma refringit opes.

29. ductum, prolonged.

30. resedit : a very expressive word : the 'storm of war' has given way to a calm.—protinus : rather logical than temporal in meaning,—she is completely satisfied and waits for nothing further.

31. nepotem : Romulus, as son of her son Mars ; invisum, for the reason given in the next verse ; she will not make him suffer for the sins of his race, but she cannot love him.

32. Troica : see I. 2. 17 n.—sacerdos : as a Vestal.

33. redonabo : see II. 7. 3 n. The word is here employed, however, in the sense of 'giving up' rather than 'giving back' (cf. I. 3. 7 n), and is made to serve for both objects, iras and nepotem : she will give up, in favor of Mars, her displeasure, and she will give up to him her grandson, whom she might withhold.—illum : emphatic ; against him she harbors no resentment.—lucidas : see vs. 10 n.

34. discere, to taste ; lit. to become acquainted with (an object previously unknown), as in II. 20. 20.—nectaris : genitive of nearer definition ; Gr. 214 f.

35. sucos : Intr. 128.—et : connecting the second and third infinitives, as expressing what took place after Romulus had entered heaven, more closely with one another than with the first, which expresses the entrance itself. Cf. Ep. I. 7. 53 and 55.—adscribi ordinibus : both words are borrowed from the Roman political and military systems.—quietis : their normal condition. In contrast with seditionibus, above, it expresses the goddess' desire for peace. The beautiful rhythm enhances the impression of serene existence which the words convey.

37. inter saeviat: Intr. 115 c.

38. exsules, in exile; limiting the concession in qualibet.

39. regnanto: concessive; cf. occupato, 29. 44 n.

40. busto: ablative of place (Intr. 69) with insultet (used absolutely; cf. Verg. A. XI. 599 fremit aequore toto insultans) and celet. When these lines were written, Vergil had not yet published the Aeneid and fixed for all time the legend of the death of Priam (iacet ingens litore truncus | avolsumque umeris caput et sine nomine corpus, A. II. 557); so that there was no preconceived notion in the minds of Horace's readers (as there is in ours) to deter him from introducing a crumbling tomb of the Trojan king to complete his picture of desolation and to make a more striking contrast with the splendor of the Capitol.

42. stet Capitolium: see 30. 8 n.

43. fulgens: in reference to its gilded roof; cf. Verg. A. VIII. 347 Capitolia . . . | aurea nunc, olim silvestribus horrida dumis. — triumphatis, to lead in triumph and; Intr. 51 e. — possit, have the power to; the event had not yet justified prophecy in going any further than this.

44. dare iura: the act of an absolute sovereign; cf. Liv. I. 8. 1 (of Romulus) vocata ad concilium multitudo, quae coalescere in populi unius corpus nulla re praeterquam legibus poterat, iura dedit. — Medis: see I. 2. 22 n.

45. horrenda, spreading terror. — late: with horrenda. — nomen: i.e. her political power; cf. Latinum nomen, IV. 15. 13.

46. qua . . . qua, where, on the one side, . . . where, on the other; so qua parte . . . qua, below (55 sq.). — medius liquor: the straits of Gibraltar.

47. Afro: the name of the inhabitant standing for the country. The plural is more common in this use; cf. IV. 4. 63; Intr. 127.

48. tumidus rigat: referring to its annual inundation, on which the fertility of Egypt depends.

49. aurum, etc.: at this point the goddess, catching for a moment the inspiration of her theme, changes from assent to prophecy (tanget, 54, after stet, possit, extendat; cf. also fata dico, 57), and she warms with admiration for the moral fortitude of the Roman, which will enable him to triumph over all obstacles. As prophecy, this refers to the best times of the commonwealth; to Horace's readers it was designed to convey a lesson, to point out the condition of future success.—inrepertum: i.e. not sought for, though known to exist.

50. spernere: Intr. 101 a, 102. —fortior, showing her courage more in.

51. cogere, gathering (it). — humanos in usus (with rapiente), etc.: describing the opposite disposition, — one that shrinks from nothing in the mad race for riches. humanos is in contrast with sacrum.

52. omne: i.e. all without distinction, any and every; cf. I. 3. 25 n.

53. mundo: see note on orbis, 7. — obstitit: perf. definite (from obsisto) expressing a present state (= obstat); cf. constiterint, I. 9. 4.

54. visere: cf. I. 37. 25 n, II. 15. 3.

55. qua parte, etc.: cf. I. 22. 17 sqq. nn.—debacchentur, revel unrestrained, i.e. have full sway, with no counteracting forces to moderate them, as in the temperate zone. For this intensive force of de-, cf. I. 9. 11 n, and Ep. I. 3. 14 desaevit. The subjunctive indicates that these clauses are part of the wish (gestiens).

56. pluvii rores: although ros is used by the poets for water in general (e.g. 4. 61), the phrase is here a singularly happy one to express the persistent 'drizzle' which is so prominent a feature of the weather in some parts of northern Europe during a considerable portion of the year.

57. sed: the goddess closes with an emphatic reiteration of the terms of her concession. — fata: see vs. 49 n.

58. hac lege dico: implying that she had some control over

Troiae renascens alite lugubri

Non hoc iocosae conveniet lyrae :

their destiny. Fatum (from fari) is originally nothing but the expressed will (quod semel dictum est, C. S. 26) of Jove or of some other divinity; cf. fato divom, Verg. A. VII. 50, and see Preller-Jordan, Röm. Myth. II. 194. — ne . . . velint : in apposition with lege. — pii : here of devotion to ancestors (avitae).

59. fidentes : also modified by nimium. The expression implies that in entertaining such a desire they would consciously incur danger (cf. I. 3. 25), — that of undertaking to undo what the gods had done.

61. Troiae : Intr. 116 e. — renascens, etc. : sc. si renascetur. The protasis, already implied in the preceding strophe, is again suggested by renascens, which is itself, however, a part of the conclusion. — alite lugubri : cf. mala vi, I. 15. 5 n.

62. fortuna, the career.

64. coniuge et sorore : cf. Verg. A. I. 47. Intr. 110 b.

65. ter, etc. : cf. Verg. G. I. 281, 283. Intr. 116 b and f. — aeneus auctore Phoebos : of the very strongest material and with a divine architect. For Phoebus, see above, 21 n. — meis : see I. 7. 8 n.

67. Argivis : Intr. 55.

69. non hoc, etc. : the poet breaks off as if suddenly conscious that he is trespassing with his playful lyre on epic ground. Cf. II. 1. 37 sqq. The tone in which he rebukes his headstrong muse is hardly in keeping with his character as Musarum sacerdos, and indicates that the ode was originally written independently. — conveniet : the future is natural, just as we say 'this will never do,' and the like.

72. tenuare : cf. I. 6. 12 n. — parvis, petty ; cf. 25. 17 ; IV. 2. 27 sqq.

IV. With a fresh invocation and a renewed declaration of his loyalty to the service of the Muses, the poet proceeds in this ode to inculcate the supremacy of mind over brute force, of strength tempered with wisdom over ungoverned violence. This gentle wisdom is the gift of the Muses to men. This is their gift to Caesar, — this, and not merely diversion and refreshment, — when he leads his veterans home from war. The victory of Jove over the Titans and Giants, which Horace cites as an illustration of his precepts, could not fail to be understood by his readers as typical of the victory of Augustus, the champion of order and culture, over the turbulent forces of anarchy and civil strife. — Metre, 176.

1. descende caelo: the Muses were conceived as dwelling in heaven ('Ολύμπια δώματ' ἔχουσαι, Il. II. 484), though having, like other divinities, their favorite haunts on earth. — caelo: Intr. 70. — dic age: cf. I. 32. 3, II. 11. 22. For the meaning of dic, see I. 6. 5 n. — tibia, etc.: see I. 1. 32, 34; 12. 1 n. For the case, see note on fide Teia, I. 17. 18.

2. regina: expressing the poet's homage; cf. III. 30. 14 sqq., IV. 3.

The title, like Ἀνασσα and δέσποινα in Greek, was a common form of honorary address to a goddess; cf. III. 26. 11. — longum: he prays for, not a brief or fitful, but a long-sustained inspiration. — Calliope: see note on Clio, I. 12. 2.

3. seu: see I. 4. 12 n. — voce: i.e. without instrumental accompaniment.

4. fidibus citharave: on a Greek vase preserved in Munich are figures of the nine muses, of whom two are playing on the lyra and the cithara respectively (Baumeister, p. 1544), and two on tibiae, while one is apparently singing (cf. voce) from a scroll. — Phoebi: as being its inventor. The lyre (fidibus) was invented by Mercury; cf. I. 10. 6.

5. auditis: sc. melos; the divine melody that fills his soul comes with such vividness that at first he doubts whether it is not real music.

6. audire et videor (sc. mihi): see Intr. 119 a, and cf. II. 1. 21. — pios, holy; hallowed by the presence of the Muses and undefiled by the contact of the crowd; cf. I. 1. 30 sqq.

7. amoenae: Intr. 114.

8. quos subeunt, 'neath which course.

 pingue tenent humilis Forenti,

9. me: the emphasis here marks the connection with what precedes, not by way of contrast (as in I. 1. 29, 7. 10, etc.), but of explanation. That he could hear the divine strains, inaudible to others, was in keeping with his constant experience of the muses' favor. In recalling his marvelous preservation in childhood, — the incident may very well have been a real one, though given to us with poetical embellishment, — Horace had in mind, perhaps, the stories told of the infancy of some of the Greek poets, — as of Stesichorus, on whose lips a nightingale was said to have alighted and sung; of Pindar, whose lips, in his sleep, were bathed with honey by the bees. — fabulosae: with palumbes, a connection indicated by their being joined with me and puerum respectively (Intr. 112). For the meaning, cf. I. 22. 7 n; they are the doves 'of story,' the birds of Venus, which draw her car and carry ambrosia to Jove (Odys. XII. 63).

10. Apuliae: the text is almost certainly wrong here, and no satisfactory correction has been proposed. Apart from the improbability of the substantive following so closely upon its adjective, the double change of prosody from Apūlo to Apūliae has a very suspicious look, and the second form finds poor support in the uncertain Apūlicum of 24. 4. Some other word, in all probability, originally stood at the end of verse 10, and has been displaced and lost by the blunder of a copyist whose eye was caught by the word Apulo above it. See Crit. App.

11. fatigatum, overcome. For the position of -que, see Intr. 119 b. For the fatigatum to be supplied with ludo, a somewhat different translation will be necessary.

12. nova, fresh; i. e. green, plucked for the purpose.

13. mirum quod foret omnibus, a marvel to all; characteristic relative clause; cf. Epod. 2. 28 n. The subject of mirum foret is (through quod) the preceding sentence, but it is expanded in the interrogative clauses which follow in the next strophe, ut tuto, etc.

14. quicumque, etc.: i. e. all within a range of a dozen or fifteen miles, — implying that many witnesses could be called to confirm the story. The places are briefly characterized, Acherontia as perched on a hill, Bantia among the mountain pastures, Forentum in fertile lowland. They have left their names to the modern Acerenza, Banzi, and Forenza.

18. premerer, I was covered all over; cf. Epod. I. 33. — sacra: to Phoebus, as the myrtle was to Venus. Both sacra and conlata are to be taken with each of the substantives; see Intr. 121.

19. -que . . . -que: cf. I. 26. 12. — conlata: i.e. not at hazard, but showing design.

20. non sine dis: in reference to animosus; the child's courage came from no human inspiration. Cf. Il. V. 185 οὐχ ὃ γ' ἀνευθε θεῶν τὰδε μάλινται, ἀλλὰ τις ἔγχι | ἔσσηκ' ἀθανάτων.

21. vester . . . vester . . . tollor, yours I am, . . . yours, when I climb. The emphatic vester expresses both their choice of him and his surrender to them. Theirs he is always and everywhere; under their protection he has escaped from imminent peril in the past, with them he will cheerfully face any dangers in the future.

22. Sabinos: see II. 18. 14 n; it may mean here, however, merely the country. — frigidum: from its high situation (altum Praeneste, Verg. A. VII. 682).

23. supinum: cf. Juv. 3. 192 proni Tiburis. Both Praeneste and Tibur were favorite resorts of Horace; cf. I. 7. 11 sqq., II. 6. 5 sqq., Ep. I. 2. 2, 7. 45.

24. liquidae: probably referring to the atmosphere. — placueret, attract. — Baiae: see II. 18. 20 n; for Horace's visits to it, cf. Ep. I. 15. 2 sqq.

25. vestris: Intr. 116 g. — amicum, welcome; see I. 26. 1 n. — fontibus: cf. I. 25. 6 n.

26. Philippis: cf. II. 7. 9; Intr. 12. — versa acies: Intr. 105 a.

27. arbor: cf. II. 13; 17. 27.

28. Palinurus: a promontory of Lucania, named, according to Vergil, after the pilot of Aeneas (A. VI. 381). The natural inference from the allusion is, that Horace had had a narrow escape from shipwreck off this point; but we know nothing of the circumstances. See, however, Intr. 13.

30. Bosporum: cf. II. 13. 14.

32. litoris Assyrii: used vaguely of the far East, — the shore of the Persian gulf or Indian ocean; cf. II. 11. 16 n. — viator, a wayfarer; in contrast with navita.

33. hospitibus feros: Horace probably means that they sacrificed them, as they did their captives (Tac. Ann. XIV. 30). Human sacrifices were a part of their druidical rites, according to Tacitus.

34. Concanum: one of the Cantabrian tribes (see II. 6. 2 n). The practice here attributed to them was a Scythian custom; cf. Verg. G. III. 461 Gelonus cum . . . lac concretum cum sanguine potat equino.

35. Gelonos: see II. 9. 23 n.

36. Scythicum amnem: the Tanais (Don); cf. Medum flumen, II. 9. 21.

37. vos: continuing the emphasis in vester and vestris, above. The anaphora keeps prominent the main idea of the ode, the intellectual activity inspired and fostered by the Muses, — here as affording refreshment after the physical fatigue of war; in the next strophe as subduing the fierce passions engendered by strife, and restoring the calm control of reason. — altum, august; cf. S. II. 5. 62; Verg. A. X. 875 altus Apollo.

38. abdidit: aptly expressing the disappearance from public view of the formidable army of 120,000 men which threatened the peace of Italy when the victor returned after Actium.

39. finire quaerentem: implying a distaste for war and a longing for peace. For the inf., see Intr. 94 c.

40. Pierio antro: i.e. by literary study or conversation in some quiet retreat. Grottos, however, were actually used for entertainments; cf. Tac. Ann. IV. 59. Donatus (Vita Verg. 27) tells us that, on his way home from the East in B.C. 29, Octavian spent some time at Atella, in Campania, to recuperate, and there listened during four days to the Georgics, then just finished, which were read to him by Vergil and Maecenas. His taste for literature is attested by Suetonius (Aug. 84. 85). For Pierio, see I. 12. 6 n. Cf. also Dionaco antro, II. 1. 39.

41. vos: see 37 n. — lene consilium: in allusion to the moderate policy pursued by Augustus after his victory. For the synaeresis in consilium, see Intr. 181.

42. gaudetis: implying that their teaching is accepted, with beneficent results; otherwise they would have no cause to rejoice. This thinly veiled commendation of Augustus continues to be the underlying thought of what follows, where the poet cites in support of his thesis a well-known (scimus) example. — ut: cf. vs. 17.

43. Titanas, etc.: Horace is not careful to distinguish the Titans from the Giants. — immanem: alluding to the monstrous shapes of the Giants. On the great altar at Pergamon, which Horace possibly had seen (Intr. 12), they are represented in a variety of grotesque forms, in which the human figure is combined with that of other animals (Baumeister, p. 1252). — -que: epexegetical, and all the.

44. caduco, descending; καταβάνης κεραυνός, Aesch. Prom. 359.

45. qui, etc.: the triple contrast, suggesting the manifold variety of detail in the universe which Jove controls, conveys a livelier impression of his power; inertem (cf. II. 9. 5, and bruta tellus et vaga flumina, I. 34. 9) is contrasted with ventosum; urbis (where life is fullest and richest) with regna tristia, the abode of the dead; divos (the immortals) with mortalis turmas (the ranks of mortal men). The objects of temperat are terram and mare, which stand for inanimate nature; with the remaining objects, which represent sentient beings, regit is used.

49. terrorem: cf. II. 12. 7.

50. fidens: best taken absolutely. — iuventus: the Hecatoncheires or hundred-handed (horrida bracchiis) sons of Uranus and Gaia. In the ordinary form of the myth in Greek writers these three brothers take the side of Zeus.

51. fratres: the Aloidæ, Otus and Ephialtes; Odys. XI. 308, Verg. A. VI. 582.

52. Pelion, etc.: cf. Odys. XI. 315 Ὅσσαν ἐπ' Οὐλύμπῳ μέμασαν θέμεν, αὐτὰρ ἐπ' Ὅσση | Πήλιον εἰνοσίφυλλον, ἃ οὐρανὸς ἀμβατὸς εἴη. Verg. G. I. 280; Prop. II. 1. 19.—imposuisse: Intr. 81 b.

53. Typhoeus, etc.: Horace's picture of the Gigantomachia is conceived on a less portentous scale than in some forms of the myth, in which the combatants hurl mountains and islands at one another. Here, as in II. 19. 21 sqq., we must imagine an assault on Olympus, and the gods fighting side by side like Homeric warriors.—Typhoeus: the youngest of the sons of Gaea, and the strongest and most terrible of them, sent by his mother to take vengeance on the gods for their destruction of the Giants (or, in Hesiod, of the Titans). Here he is not distinguished from the rest of the Giants.—Mimas: a Giant.

54. Porphyryon: βασιλεὺς Τιγάντων, Pind. Pyth. 8. 17.—statu, posture.

55. Rhoetus: see II. 19. 23.—truncis: instrumental abl. with the verbal idea in iaculator; Intr. 73.

56. Enceladus: imprisoned under Etna; Verg. A. III. 578.

57. contra, etc.: to be taken with possent, though understood also with ruentes.—sonantem: from being shaken by the goddess herself, to inspire terror. In Homer the crash of thunder is associated with the shaking of the aegis by Zeus (Il. XVII. 595).—aegida: see I. 15. 11 n.

58. hinc . . . hinc: i.e. ranged on either side of Pallas, who is the central figure; the goddess of wisdom is the foremost champion.—avidus: sc. pugnae; so Tac. Ann. I. 51. 1 avidas legiones.

60. numquam positurus: i.e. forever armed and prepared; see Intr. 104 a, and cf. ponere, I. 3. 40. In the following strophe the poet allows us to pause and contemplate the beautiful god, as a relief from the stern conflict and the grave thoughts it suggests. Cf. I. 12. 29 n.

61. Castaliae: a spring on Parnassus.—lavit crinis: cf. IV. 6. 26. For lavit, see II. 3. 18 n.

62. solutos: cf. I. 21. 2 n.—tenet: sc. under his sway; cf. 26. 9 (= I. 3. 1), C. S. 69; here, however, used more with reference to the abode of the god (cf. vs. 16). Horace follows the legend which made dumeta natalemque silvam,

Apollo spend the six winter months at Patara, in Lycia, where he had a famous temple and oracle, and the summer in Delos (Serv. on Aen. IV. 143). The reference to these two places is repeated chiastically in the epithets of vs. 64.

63. natalem : see I. 21. 2 n.

65. vis, etc.: this strophe at once sums up the moral of the story,—the ineffectiveness of force without intelligence, — and advances the thought a step farther: divine favor promotes force that is under control; divine wrath overtakes the strength that pursues its selfish ends unrestrained by any controlling principle; and with illustrations of this truth the poem closes.

68. omne : cf. 3. 52 n.

69. testis : sc. est ; cf. scimus, 42.—Gyas : see II. 17. 14 n and vs. 50 n, above.

70. notus : another appeal to the reader's knowledge, as in 42.

— integrae : cf. intactae Palladis, I. 7. 5.

71. temptator, assailant ; the word is found only here in classical literature.—Orion : here classed among the Giants ; by others he is made a son of Poseidon. See II. 13. 39 n.

72. virginea : cf. Hectoreis opibus, 3. 28.

73. monstris suis : i.e. the Giants.—Terra : cf. Telluris, II. 12. 7 ; both for Γαῖα or Γῆ, who was the mother of both Titans and Giants. In some representations of the battle of the Giants she appears rising from the ground, pleading for her offspring ; see Baumeister, figg. 637, 1420.—dolet, maeret : the first of the pain of lying upon them (iniecta), the second of her grief for their calamity.

74. partus : more particularly the Titans, who were hurled into Tartarus (Verg. A. VI. 580), though Tityus, the example given below, was a Giant (Odys. XI. 576).

 — luridum Orcum: cf. furvae Proserpinae, II. 13. 21.

75. nec peredit: i.e. the imprisoned Giant has found no release; his punishment is eternal. For the tense, see Intr. 80.

76. impositam: sc. on one of the Giants. Enceladus, Typhoeus, and Briareus are consigned by various myths to this fate. — celer, swift consuming.

77. incontinentis: his offense was offering violence to Latona. — nec: Intr. 114. — iecur: the punishment was aimed at what was regarded as the seat of the passion; cf. IV. 1. 12.

78. ales: a vulture (Verg. A. VI. 597). — additus custos, set to keep watch upon.

79. trecentae: used simply to express a very large number; cf. II. 14. 5, 26; S. I. 5. 12.

80. Pirithoum: king of the Lapithae and friend of Theseus, who accompanied him to the lower world on his impious enterprise of carrying off Proserpina. Both were chained to a rock there, and Hercules, who succeeded in releasing Theseus, was obliged to leave Pirithous to his doom. Cf. IV. 7. 27.

V. From the contemplation of Jove triumphantly maintaining his supremacy in heaven the poet leads our thoughts down to earth again, where Augustus has a divine mission to fulfill in restoring the old Roman valor and the glory of Roman arms. Courage and patriotism in the soldier have sunk to a low ebb, — the legitimate result of relaxation of the stern discipline of earlier times, which is finely portrayed in the story of Regulus. — Metre, 176.

1. caelo: with regnare; Intr. 69. — credidimus: Intr. 80.

2. praesens, on earth. Augustus is placed in the same relation to Jove as in I. 12. 57 sqq.

3. adiectis: equivalent to cum adiecerit. — Britannis: see introd. note to I. 35.

4. gravibus Persis: see I. 2. 22 n. In passages like this Horace no doubt voiced the general feeling that Augustus should justify his leadership by completing the conquests of Julius Caesar, and, above all, should retrieve the repeated disasters which the Romans had suffered at the hands of the Parthians. The recollection of these disasters leads naturally to the reflections that follow.

5. milesne Crassi: the defeat at Carrhae, B.C. 53, left thousands of Romans in the hands of the Parthians, and subsequent events brought them no prospect of release. They took service in the Parthian armies and even fought against the Romans. — coniuge barbara: abl. of cause with turpis; Intr. 105 a.

6. vixit: in close connection with turpis maritus: 'Has he consented to live at the cost of such humiliation?'

7. curia: the symbol of Roman law and sovereignty. — mores, discipline.

8. socerorum, whose daughter he has wedded; dwelling with scorn on the odious relation already expressed in coniuge barbara and maritus.

9. sub rege: a hateful suggestion, even without Medo. — Marsus et Apulus: the best types of the Roman soldier; cf. I. 2. 39 n, II. 20. 18, I. 22. 13.

10. anciliorum, etc.: the twelve sacred shields in the keeping of the Salii (see I. 36. 12 n), closely associated, therefore, with the foundation of the city, and, like the fire of Vesta, with its permanence. — nominis: the evidence of his birthright. — togae: the badge of his citizenship.

12. Iove: i.e. his temple, the Capitol.

13. hoc: emphatic: It was just this that. — Reguli: consul B.C. 256, in the first Punic war. In that year the Romans successfully invaded Africa, and in the following year Regulus, who was left in command there, was defeated and taken prisoner with a part of his army. According to the story which Horace here follows, he was subsequently sent by the Carthaginians to Rome to negotiate for an exchange of prisoners, under oath to return to Carthage if the negotiations should fail.

14. dissentientis, when he refused his assent. On reaching Rome Regulus persuaded the senate to reject the overtures which he brought. — condicionibus: dative; Intr. 57.

15. exemplo, a precedent. —

- si non periret immiserabilis

trahenti, that would entail; equivalent to quod traheret, and containing the apodosis of the conditional clause of the next strophe.

17. perirêt: Intr. 179.

18. ego . . . vidi; vidi ego: Intr. 116*e*. He urges his appeal with the force of personal experience; he has seen with his own eyes the humiliation of captivity.

19. adfixa: as thank offerings of victory. Cf. IV. 15. 6 sq.

20. sine caede: implying that they should have shed their blood rather than submit to the indignity.

21. civium: emphatic, to mark by contrast the depth of their degradation. It may be translated: I have seen CITIZENS, with their arms pinioned, etc.

22. tergo: Intr. 69. — libero, their freeman's; repeating the thought of civium.

23. portas (sc. Carthaginis), etc.: i.e. as if there were no war; a humiliating proof of the complete failure of the Roman invasion.

24. Marte: Intr. 130.

25. auro repensus: instead of being left to the fate which his cowardice has brought upon him. The phrase, however, suggests more than this, — the degradation of the warrior who has had a price set upon him, like a slave, and has resorted to this base substitute for valor as a means of safety. — scilicet: indicating the irony of the sentence.

26. flagitio: the dishonor the state has suffered through the conduct of these prisoners; damnum: the breaking down of discipline which will result from their ransom.

27. neque . . . nec: i.e. the second is no more possible than the first; cf. I. 6. 5 n. — colores: Intr. 128. The natural color of the wool is meant.

28. refert, renews, shows again.

29. virtus: cf. 2. 17 n. — semel excidit: the phrase itself suggests what is next explicitly stated, — cowardice is not a temporary weakness; the loss of courage is instant and final, as of a jewel. Cf. I. 24. 16n.

30. reponi: Intr. 94 z.—deterioribus: the same persons that are understood with excidit; the word characterizes them as they are left when this virtue of courage has gone out of them. For the case, see Intr. 53, and cf. Liv. II. 43. 8 si animus hosti redisset.

33. perfidis: in reference to the proverbial Punica fides; cf. IV. 4. 49 n.—se credidit: in contrast with perfidis; Intr. 116 a.

34. Marte: cf. 24 n.—altero, some other; the war in which they were taken prisoners being regarded as ended. Alter is used to denote any other person or thing that is brought into comparison with the one in hand, so that these two alone are for the time under consideration; cf. 24. 22; S. I. 1. 40 ne sit te ditior alter ('thy neighbor'); Madv. 496.

35. restrictis: cf. retorta, 22.

36. iners, tamely.

37. unde sumeret: representing a question of doubt, unde sumam? The question is, in effect, 'to what he should owe his life,' sc. to his sword and his valor, and not to the compassion of the enemy.

38. pacem, etc.: i.e. confused the two, treated the enemy as if they were friends.

40. ruinis: instrumental abl. with the comparative,—higher by that much, exalted upon, etc.; cf. Liv. I. 30. 1 Roma interim crescit Albae ruinis.

41. fertur, men say. The word prepares us for something surprising; cf. I. 7. 23.

or her children. This humility of the man is the background against which the poet paints in effective contrast his moral heroism (patres firmaret) and his splendid victory of self-sacrifice (egregius exsul). For the genitive see Intr. 66 d.

46. auctor, by his influence.—alias, before or since.

48. properaret : his alacrity (cf. also dimovit obstantis, 51) and cheerfulness (53 sqq.), now that his patriotic purpose is achieved, are set forth in contrast with the sternness of his attitude (43 sq.) as long as there was any chance of a dishonorable release from martyrdom.

49. sciebat : observe the tense; he knew all the while.

50. tortor : Roman tradition told of the most exquisite tortures especially devised for Regulus by the Carthaginians (cf. Cic. Off. I. 39, III. 100; Gell. VII. 4); but they rest on no historical evidence. Polybius, our oldest authority, knows nothing of them, nor, indeed, of any embassy of Regulus.

52. reditus : Intr. 128; the plural is here preferred for the sake of euphony, as in Epod. 16. 35 for the metre.

54. lite : either one in which he had acted as arbitrator between his clients, or one in which some of the latter were engaged in court, where, as patronus, he was bound to aid them with counsel and influence.—relinqueret : for purposes of comparison Regulus is transported in imagination to the present, — ‘than (he would), if (living in our day) he were leaving, etc.’ The places named as holiday retreats had no such character in the time of Regulus.

55. Venafranos agros : see II. 6. 16 n.

56. Lacedaemonium Tarentum : see II. 6. 12 n, 13 sqq.; Ep. I. 7. 45. The quiet picture in this closing strophe, softening without weakening the tragic suggestion of vs. 49, in which the stern moral earnestness of the ode reaches its climax, is one of Horace’s happiest touches.

VI. This ode, like the preceding, deals with the degeneracy of the times, but in a broader way. The decline of the old Roman spirit is but part of a wide-spread corruption which has contaminated even the sanctity of family life and thus poisoned the springs of national strength. This corruption with its train of disasters has come in through the neglect of religion, and until religion is restored to its due honor, the sins of the fathers must continue to be visited on the children. But of this restoration the poet is not sanguine. From his own picture of the simple life of Rome's heroic age he turns away in despair, and sees in the deterioration of each succeeding generation an augury of the same downward course in the future. The ode is the least cheerful of the six, and its pessimistic close, so ill adapted to conclude the series, is of itself sufficient proof that the poems were not written on a single plan, but composed independently, and afterwards arranged, perhaps with some adaptations, in a group. The present ode is assigned with much probability to the year 28 B.C., when Augustus, in his sixth consulship, instituted many vigorous reforms, and began the restoration of eighty-two temples which had fallen into decay (Mon. Ancyrae. 4. 17). — Metre, 176.

1. immeritus: in close connection with lues, not implying innocence in general: 'Thou shalt bear the guilt of sins thou hast not committed.'

2. Romane: used collectively, as in Verg. A. VI. 851 tu regere imperio populos, Romane, memento. Cf. S. I. 4. 85. — templa, aedis: here used as practically synonymous.

4. foeda fumo: some of the temples had suffered from fire.

5. dis te minorem, etc.: Horace here utters not a philosophical principle, but what was in the profound conviction of probably the great majority of his countrymen a historical fact. Cf. Polyb. VI. 56. 7 καὶ μοι δοκεῖ τὸ παρὰ τοῖς ἄλλοις ἀνθρώποις ὀνειδίζμενον, τοῦτο συνέχειν τὰ Ῥωμαίων πράγματα· λέγω δὲ τὴν δεισιδαιμονίαν; Cic. D. N. III. 5 nostrae civitatis, quae nunquam profecto sine summa placatione deorum immortalium tanta esse potuisset.

6. principium: sc. est; cf. hinc illae lacrimae, Ep. I. 19. 41, and similar phrases. For the synaeresis see Intr. 181.—exitum: sc. omnem.

7. di neglecti: Intr. 105; but here di is still consciously the subject.

8. Hesperiae: i.e. Italy, 'the Land of the West,' in contrast with the countries he has in mind and is about to name. Cf. II. 1. 32. In I. 36. 4 it is used apparently for Spain, of a man returning thence to Italy.—luctuosae: proleptic.

9. iam bis: referring to the invasion of Crassus in B.C. 53, which ended in the memorable disaster at Carrhae (cf. 5. 5 n), and the expedition of Antony with an army of 100,000 men into Media Atropatene in B.C. 36, from which he was forced to retreat with ignominy, and at the cost of enormous loss and suffering to his troops (Merivale, Ch. XXVIII). Some editors think the first of the two disasters referred to was the defeat of Decidius Saxa in B.C. 40 by the Parthians under the renegade T. Labienus; but the defeat of Saxa, though severe, was only a temporary reverse in a war in which the Romans were, on the whole, brilliantly successful, and their general, Ventidius, earned a triumph. It was a war, moreover, in which the Romans were repelling an invasion of the Parthians, and cannot therefore be included under non auspicati impetus.—Monaeses: a powerful Parthian noble who went over to the Romans in B.C. 37 and was received with great honor by Antony, but subsequently became reconciled with Phraates and returned to his allegiance. He is not known to have commanded the Parthians in any of the campaigns here referred to.—Pacori manus: cf. Porsenae manus, Epod. 16. 4. Pacorus, son of the Parthian king Orodes, commanded his father's troops in the invasion of Syria and Asia Minor in B.C. 40, and in the succeeding campaigns until he was defeated and killed by Ventidius, B.C. 38. Horace uses the names of Monaeses and Pacorus as conspicuous Parthian leaders, with little thought, and very likely with no accurate knowledge of their individual achievements.

10. non auspicatos: the expedition of Crassus was notorious in this respect; cf. Cic. Div. I. 29, II. 84; Val. Max. I. 6. 11; Merivale, Ch. XI. No similar particulars are recorded of Antony's expedition; but Horace refers, in both cases, rather to the wickedness (impietas) of the Roman people as a nation, in neglecting the gods and fighting brother against brother (cf. I. 35. 33 sqq., and impia proelia, II. 1. 30), thus inevitably incurring the displeasure of Heaven on all their undertakings.—contudit: Intr. 77.

11. adiecisse: Intr. 94 d, 81 b.

12. torquibus: used as decorations for bravery or distinguished service. Among the Persians they could only be worn by those on whom the king had conferred them (Xen. Cyrop. VIII. 2. 8).—exiguis: i.e. in comparison with the ample booty obtained from the Romans.—renidet, beams with joy.

 Motus doceri gaudet Ionicos matura virgo et fingitur artibus, iam nunc et incestos ^{is fashionis} amores
 de tenero meditatur ungui;

13. paene : with delevit. This strophe carries the thought a step farther : the Romans had not only failed in their aggressive enterprises, they were so carried away by the passions of civil strife that they almost put the city itself at the mercy of the barbarian.

14. Dacus et Aethiops : auxiliaries who fought at Actium, the former in the army of Antony (see also I. 26. 4 n), the latter in the fleet of Cleopatra. They stand for the barbarian allies of Antony, whose approach the citizens had regarded with genuine, though no doubt exaggerated, alarm. Cf. Verg. G. II. 497.

17. fecunda, etc. : the poet proceeds to show how the neglect of religion and consequent looseness of living saps the strength of the nation.—culpae, vice; here, as often, with special reference to unchastity.

18. inquinavere : cf. Epod. 16. 64.—genus, the stock; cf. IV. 4. 29 sqq.—domos : i.e. the sanctity of domestic life and discipline; cf. IV. 4. 25 sqq.

19. hoc fonte, etc. : i.e. corruption in the family makes the state unsound at the core, and so robs it of the strength to resist the forces that tend to destroy it. This thesis he illustrates by the contrasted pictures of the next six strophes.

21. motus, dances, especially of a mimetic character; cf. movetur, Ep. II. 2. 125. The Ionic was a voluptuous kind of dance, which was often provided for the amusement of the guests at a dinner party (Athen. XIV. 27), the dancers being usually professionals; cf. Anth. Pal. V. 129 (quoted vs. 24 n).

22. matura : it would be innocent in a child.—artibus : instrumental abl.; instead of developing in a healthy and natural way, she is trained to pose on all occasions and manage her personal charms as weapons of skill.

23. iam nunc : i.e. even before marriage; in contrast with mox, 25.—et : Intr. 114.

24. de tenero ungui, to her finger-tips; cf. Apul. Met. X. 22 ex unguiculis perpruriscens mulier

(an imitation of Plaut. Stich. 761). The phrase is a translation of the Greek ἐξ (ἀπαλῶν) ὀνύχων, used to express intensity of feeling (e.g. of impassioned movements in dancing, τὴν ἀπὸ τῆς Ἀσιῆς ὀρχηστρίδα, τὴν κακοτέχνους | σχήμασιν ἐξ ἀπαλῶν κινυμένην ὀνύχων, | αλνέω, οὐχ ὅτι πάντα παθαίνεται, οὐδ' ὅτι βάλλει | τὰς ἀπαλὰς ἀπαλῶς ὦδε καὶ ὦδε χέρας, Anth. Pal. V. 129; of a mother's love for her young children, ὡς ἂν ἔνδοθεν καὶ τὸ δὴ λεγόμενον ἐξ ὀνύχων ἀγαπῶσαι τὰ τέκνα, Plut. Mor. 3 C), apparently with reference to the extreme sensitiveness of the nerves under the finger-nails. It appears also to have been used in the sense of 'from earliest childhood,' and possibly that is the sense in which Cicero understood it, ad. Fam. I. 6. 2, qui mihi a teneris, ut Graeci dicunt, unguiculis es cognitus. This interpretation is excluded here by matura, above. — meditatur, is filled with thoughts of.

26. inter mariti vina: i.e. among the guests at his table. — neque eligit, etc.: i.e. it is not merely a case of censurable flirtation with some favored admirer, allowing him a stolen kiss or the like. — impermissa, which occurs here for the first time, was coined or chosen to express a mild form of wrong-doing: the offense in the supposed case is purposely softened to set off the unspeakable baseness of her actual conduct. Observe the contrast in particulars: eligit with vocat institor, etc.; donet with emptor; impermissa with dedecorum; raptim with iussa coram; and luminibus remotis with conscio marito.

29. coram, bluntly, without any affectation of delicacy. — conscio marito: Intr. 105 a.

30. institor, pedlar; a despised class, but having plenty of ready money and access, in pursuit of their trade, to the women of the household. Cf. Epod. 17. 20.

31. magister, the skipper: another coarse character and, as a sailor, a great spendthrift on shore.

33. non his, etc.: from this climax of iniquity the poet turns to the Romans of earlier times, and draws a companion picture of wholesome discipline and pure living.

34. infecit aequor: in the first Punic war, which was waged mainly by sea.

35. ingentem: a poetical variation of his surname, Magnus (see Cic. pro Deiot. 36); cf. Verg. A. XI. 124 fama ingens, ingentior armis vir. The word in this sense is found also in Sallust and in later prose writers.—cecidit, overthrew.

36. dirum: cf. dirus Afer, IV. 4. 42.

38. Sabellis: Intr. 124. The epithet places the scene among the Sabines, who were proverbial for their strictness and purity of manners; quo genere nullum quondam incorruptius fuit, Liv. I. 18. 4.

41. sol ubi, etc.: even when the day's work was done, and the tired ox was allowed to rest, they must deny themselves the repose which the quiet evening hour made so tempting, and go forth again to cut and carry firewood for their mother. Horace dwells on the description of evening in his favorite way (cf. I. 12. 29 n., III. 4. 60 n.), but here no stroke is superfluous.

42. mutaret: i.e. lengthened. As the sun descends lower, the change in the shadows becomes more rapid and hence more noticeable. Cf. Verg. E. 2. 67 et sol crescentis decedens duplicat umbras. The subjunctive looks like that of repeated action (docta = adsueta); but as Horace elsewhere uses the indicative with ubi in such clauses (see Intr. 86) it is probably to be explained as due to its close dependence on the infinitive (Gr. 342).

43. amicum, welcome; cf. I. 26. 1 n.

44. agens, bringing on; cf. Verg. E. 8. 17 praeque diem veniens age, Lucifer, alnum.

45. imminuit: perfect. — dies, time.

46. aetas, etc.: the course of deterioration through four generations is skilfully expressed in three verses. — peior avis: Intr. 75.

47. daturos: Intr. 104 b.

VII. The unbroken vein of serious thought which runs through the preceding group of odes is fittingly relieved by a poem of more than usual lightness and grace, an idyl, as it has been called, of a young trader's love. He lies storm-bound in a foreign port, fretting at wind and wave, while the forlorn maid sits weeping at home, with no message to tell her why he tarries. The poet comforts her with the assurance that her lover is neither lost nor untrue; the spring winds will bring him back to her; meanwhile let her keep well her own troth. — Metre, 173.

1. fles: the object is eum (one) understood, with which iuvenem and Gygen are successively in apposition. — Asterie: Ἀστερία, 'fair as a star'; cf. 9. 21, sidere pulchrior. — candidi, fair; cf. I. 5. 7 n, 7. 15 n.

2. Favonii: see I. 4. 1 n.

3. Thyna merce: cf. Bithyna negotia, Ep. I. 6. 33. Thyni and Bithyni were once separate peoples, but in Horace's day they had long ceased to be distinguished, and the shorter adjective was used as a poetical substitute for the other. Cf. Cat. 31. 5 Thyniam atque Bithynos. — beatum, enriched.

4. fide: contracted form of the genitive, used also by Caesar and Sallust (Gell. IX. 14. 25); cf. S. I. 3. 95 fide (dative).

5. Notis: see I. 7. 15 n. — Oricum: on the coast of Epirus, sheltered by the Acroceraunian headland.

6. post Caprae sidera: i.e. after the setting of that constellation, which occurred about the middle of December and was a sign of storm. For the expression cf. post vina, I. 18. 5. — insana: i.e. causing furious storms; cf. stella vesani leonis, 29. 19; Intr. 124.

7. non sine: cf. I. 23. 3 n.

9. atqui, and yet (he could easily console himself). — sollicitae: cf. amore sollicitus, S. II. 3. 252.

10. Chloen: the hospita of vs. 9, the wife of his host. — tuis ignibus: i.e. with the passion which is rightfully yours, — the passion inspired by Gyges. The expression is the poet's and not that of the nuntius.

12. temptat : sc. eum. — mille vafer modis, with a thousand wiles.

13. ut, etc. : stock tales of the fury of a woman scorned, 'cum stimulos odio pudor admovet' (Juv. 10. 329). — Proetum : king of Tiryns. The story of Bellerophon is told Il. VI. 152 sqq. — mulier : Anteia, in the Homeric account; according to others, Sthenoboea, the name which Juvenal (l. c.) gives. — perfida credulum : Intr. 116 a.

15. Bellerophontae : Horace uses the Homeric form (Βελλεροφοντης) here and 12. 3, but has the accusative Bellerophontem IV. 11. 28.

16. maturare necem : i.e. to put him to death before his time. For the infinitive see Intr. 97 b. — refert, narrat : chiasmic; cf. Intr. 116 e.

17. datum Tartaro : cf. morti dedit, S. II. 3. 197; both are variations on the old formal phrase much affected by the poets, letum dare : cf. Enn. Telephus 88 (Müll.) quorum liberi leto dati sunt in bello; Verg. A. V. 806; Juv. 10. 119. The construction of paene datum Pe- lea is that of Intr. 105 a (= 'the narrow escape of Peleus'), not indirect discourse; hence the indication in vs. 18. The adventure is thought of as already well known to the reader. — Pelea : while a guest at the house of Acastus, king of Iolcus, Peleus, so the story ran, was obliged to repel the advances of his hostess, with the same result as in the case of Bellerophon. Acastus decoyed him into the wilderness and there left him alone unarmed, hoping the Centaurs would destroy him. The gods, however, protected him, and Hephaestus gave him a sword which was a sufficient defense against the Centaurs. According to another account he was found by Chiron, who received him kindly and sheltered him in his cave. Subsequently he made war on Acastus and captured Iolcus.

18. Magnessam : i.e. from the Thessalian Magnesia; to distinguish her from the more famous Hippolyte, the Amazon wife of Theseus.

19. docentis : Intr. 103.

20. movet, rehearses; lit. 'sets a-going' (cf. I. 15. 10 n.). Vergil has movere cantūs, A. VII. 641.

22. integer: cf. II. 4. 22.—tibi, on your part. See Intr. 116 b.

23. Enipeus: the name is borrowed from a river-god of Thesaly; cf. Hebri, 12. 2.

25. quamvis: Intr. 83.—flectere equum: cf. I. 8. 6 n, III. 12.

3. For the mood see Intr. 101 c.

28. Tusco alveo: i.e. the Tiber; cf. I. 20. 5 n.—denatat: found only here. For this form of exercise see I. 8. 8 n. The poet dwells on the athletic prowess of the youth, knowing well its power to captivate a girl's heart. Cf. 12. 3 sq.

29. neque: Intr. 89 n.

30. sub cantu, while he is playing, i.e. serenading you. Sub, in this use, means, with the ablative, 'during (the continuance of)'; with the accusative, 'just before' or 'just after.' Cf. sub luce and sub lucem.—despice: in a literal sense.

31. vocanti (sc. illi): equivalent to a concessive clause.

32. duram, unfeeling; difficilis, stubborn.

VIII. An ode for the anniversary of the poet's escape from death by the fall of a tree, recorded in II. 13. The form is dramatic. The poet is busily engaged with his servants in preparations for a sacrifice, when Maecenas appears. In answer to his expression of surprise, Horace explains the significance of the day to him, and begs his friend to join him in his quiet festival of thanksgiving.

The date of the ode, and consequently of the event in the poet's life which it commemorates, is fixed with great probability by the allusions of the last three strophes. Maecenas, presumably in the absence of Octavian (Intr. 21), is in charge of affairs. The campaigns of M. Crassus against the Dacians and other tribes of the Danube frontier (vss. 18, 23) were fought in the years immediately following the battle of Actium, B.C. 30-28. The news of the struggle between Phraates and Tiridates in Parthia reached Rome in January B.C. 29; and in the summer of the same year Octavian returned to Italy. Our ode was therefore composed in the spring of B.C. 29, and the date of the fall of the tree is March 1, B.C. 30. For it is clear that it is the first anniversary which is here celebrated. — Metre, 174.

1. Martiis Kalendis: called by Juvenal (9. 53) femineae kalendae, being the day of the Matronalia, when the married women of Rome made their offerings to Juno Lucina on the Esquiline (Ov. Fast. III. 245 sqq.). The day was also kept as a family festival: the mother received presents from her husband and children, and like the men at the Saturnalia waited on her slaves at table; hence called by Martial (V. 84. 10) the women's Saturnalia. Why an unmarried man should be found celebrating that day, was a puzzle which Maecenas, with all his learning, as the poet playfully says, could not solve.

2. velint, mean.— flores: these were a part of the offering to Juno (Ovid. l. l.).

4. caespite: see I. 19. 13 n.

5. docte: Maecenas is so addressed again Ep. I. 19. 1.— sermones: i.e. the literature. For the case cf. 9. 10.— utriusque: the two which to a Roman contained all literature and learning, Greek and Latin. The expression appears to have been not uncommon, e.g. Plin. N. H. XII. 11.; cf. Stat. Silv. V. 3. 90 gemina lingua, Plut. Lucull. 1 ἡσκητο λέγειν ἱκανῶς ἐκατέραν γλῶτταν.

6. epulas: the regular accompaniment of a sacrifice; cf. I. 36. 2.— album: the prescribed color for a victim to the gods above.

Libero caprum prope funeratus arboris ictu.

Hic dies, anno redeunte festus, 10 corticem adstrictum pice demovebit amphorae fumum bibere institutae consule Tullo.

Sume, Maecenas, cyathos amici sospitis centum, et vigiles lucernas 15 perfer in lucem; procul omnis esto clamor et ira.

7. Libero: patron god (with Apollo) of poets; cf. Ep. II. 2. 78; Juv. 7. 64. In II. 17. 28 Horace attributes his escape to Faunus.—caprum: cf. Verg. G. II. 380 Baccho caper omnibus aris | caeditur, for no other reason, he says, than because it eats the grape-vines.

9. anno redeunte festus, a festival as the year comes round; cf. S. II. 2. 83 sive diem festum rediens advexerit annus. In both cases annus is strictly a part or season of the year, as in 23. 8, Epod. 2. 29.

10. adstrictum pice: showing that the wine had been carefully put up for long keeping. Cf. I. 20. 3 n.

11. amphorae: dative. — fumum bibere: to hasten the mellowing of the wine. The store room (apotheca) was purposely placed in a part of the house where the smoke could reach it. For the infinitive see Intr. 93.—institutae, set.

12. Tullo: probably L. Volcatius Tullus, consul B.C. 33 with Octavian, so that the wine would now be four years old. There was, however, another consul of this name in B.C. 66, who may be the one referred to here. In that case the jar would be only a year older than the pia testa of 21. 1 sqq.

13. sume: cf. I. 27. 9.—cyathos: see I. 29. 8 n.—amici: a Greek form of expression, by which the cups are said to be his to whose health they are drunk; cf. 19. 9 sqq. and Antiph. ap. Athen. X. 21 ἐγχει, παιδίον, | κυάθους θεῶν τε καὶ θεινῶν μύπλους. The meaning here is somewhat modified, however, by sospitis, which shows that present safety is more prominent in the poet's mind than future welfare as a motive for drinking (cf. II. 7. 26 sqq.). We may translate: for the preservation of your friend. See Intr. 105 a.

14. centum: used vaguely, like μύπλους above, for a very large number; cf. II. 14. 26.

15. perfer, stay with; lit. 'endure to the end.' The real object is implied in vigiles, as if it were vigilias sub lucernis perfer. This the invalid Maecenas would not be disposed to do in any ordinary drinking party; hence the assurance that follows, procul etc., though these words seem to imply that there are to be other guests present.

18. occidit : emphatic, as in I. 28. 7 and IV. 4. 70. — Cotisonis agmen : see introd. note, and I. 26. 4 n.

19. Medus : see I. 2. 22 n ; Intr. 127. — sibi : with infestus ; but its force cannot help being felt with luctuosis also. Intr. 76. — luctuosis : cf. 6. 8, where it is also used in reference to civil strife.

20. dissidet : used absolutely ; cf. dissideat miles, Tac. Ann. I. 46. 1.

21. servit : cf. occidit, 17 n, and for the meaning, II. 2. 12. — Hispanae orae : the mountainous district along the bay of Biscay. For orae cf. I. 12. 55, 26. 4. The genitive with hostis in this relation is rare.

22. sera : because he was vetus hostis. Livy remarks (XXVIII. 12. 12) that of all the continental provinces of the Romans, Spain was the first in which they gained a footing, the last to be completely subdued, and that not till his own day. — domitus : referring perhaps to their reduction by Statilius Taurus B.C. 29 ; see II. 6. 2 n.

23. Scythae : the marauding raids of these tribes had been checked by the operations of Crassus, but not yet entirely suppressed (cf. II. 9. 23 sq.) ; and this is all that Horace asserts (meditantur cedere). — laxo, unstrung.

24. cedere : Intr. 94 f. — campis : those south of the Danube which were exposed to their raids.

25. neglegens, etc. : after stating these good reasons, Horace returns to the exhortation begun in 17. neglegens, privatus, and laetus are all a part of the exhortation, the first two repeating the idea of mitte civilis curas, 17. — ne : after the idea of fear or anxiety implied in neglegens (here = securus) ; cf. terrui ne, I. 2. 5 n.

26. privatus : i.e. for the moment. Cf. S. II. 1. 71 sqq. — nimium cavere, borrow trouble. cavere is used absolutely as in S. II. 7. 68 ; for the mood, see Intr. 94 k.

27. dona, etc. : cf. I. 9. 13 sqq., II. 8, II. 16, 25 sqq., III. 29, 41 sqq.

IX. A lyrical idyl, portraying with exquisite skill a lovers' quarrel and reconciliation. The brief dialogue tells the whole story. Lydia's lover has wounded her by too marked attentions to Chloe, and her resentment has sent him off in a passion. Both are sorry and proud. He makes the first overtures towards a reconciliation in terms of tender regret, mixed with reproach; she replies in the same strain, with no sign of yielding. He then tries to break her down by a show of indifference, but she answers him with equal defiance. Finally he virtually confesses his fault and offers to make amends, and she, while asserting her woman's privilege of the last word in the quarrel, consents and owns that she loves him after all. This is the only ode of Horace in dialogue form. — Metre, 171.

1. eram : cf. parabat, I. 37. 8 n.

2. potior, favoured rival.

3. dabat : the simple form for the compound (circumdabat) is poetical; cf. Intr. 129.

4. Persarum rege : see II. 2 17 n.

5. donec, etc. : in this and in the second pair of strophes Horace observes the rule of amoeban verse which requires that the second speaker shall match the verses of the first, and, if possible, produce something better and stronger. Cf. Verg. Ecll. 3 and 7.—aliā : cf. virgine, II. 4. 8; Intr. 72.

6. arsisti : the perfect, for variety, matching the imperfect of vs. 1, but with the same force. Roby 1667. — post, second to.

7. multi Lydia nominis, a Lydia of great renown; her name was on everybody's lips as the fortunate object of his choice; cf. clarior. This verse belongs with the preceding, the name being repeated as in I. 13. 1, 2.

8. Romana : as the mother of the Roman race. She was a Trojan woman according to the tradition which Horace follows; see 3. 32 n.

9. Thressa Chloe : for this designation and that in 14, cf. I. 27. 10 sq. The names are chosen for their pleasing sound.

10. modos : for the case cf. sermones, 8. 5.

 20. Lydiae: dative, as reiectae shows. ianua patet is not altogether metaphorical; see 15. 9 n.

21. sidere pulchrior: cf. 19. 26 puro similem Vespero; II. VI. 401 ἀλγικιον ἀστέρι καλῶ (of Astyanax).

X. A serenade, of the kind called παρακλανσίθυρον, in which the lover pleads before the barred door of his mistress' house (cf. I. 25. 7 sq.). In accordance with Horace's usual practice in verses of this kind the names are Greek, but the setting is Roman. Lyce is of Etruscan origin, and the mistress of a wealthy mansion.

Her infatuated lover plies her in turn with reproaches for her cruelty, with warning and sarcasm, with appeals to pity, and finally with the impotent threat that he will leave her for good.—Metre, 172.

1. extremum, the far off; cf. ultima, II. 18. 4 n.—si biberes: i.e. if you lived on its banks, among the Sarmatians, where ‘peccare nefas, aut pretium est mori’ (24. 24). For the form of expression, cf. II. 20. 20 n, IV. 15. 21.

2. saevo viro: in contrast with the actual fact (vs. 15).—asperas, pitiless.

3. porrectum: implying that he has waited long.—obicere: Intr. 94 m; cf. Plaut. Aul. 308 aquam hércle plorat, quóm lavat, profundere (of a miser).—incolis, that are at home there.

5. nemus, etc.: cf. Ep. I. 10. 22 inter varias nutritur silva columnas. In the wealthier Roman houses the second court (peristylum) was expanded into a garden, with space even for large trees.

7. ventis: causal ablative.—ut: see I. 9. 1 n; Intr. 114. The question depends on the general idea of perception in audis, the specific meaning of which is lost at this distance. Cf. I. 14. 3 n, II. 1. 21 n.—glaciet, etc.: i.e. the night is clear (puro) and so cold that the light coating of snow on the ground (positas), which had softened in the sunshine, is frozen hard.

8. puro numine, in cloudless majesty; cf. I. 34. 7 n.—Iuppiter: see I. 1. 25 n.

10. ne, etc.: i.e. your high flight in virtue is beyond your powers, and will end in a sudden and violent fall. The figure is that of a windlass, with which a man is raising a weight that proves too heavy, and the handle breaks or slips from his grasp.—retro: with currente, and then, by inference, with eat.

11. non te: cf. non ego I. 18. 11 n.—difficilem: cf. 7. 32.

12. Tyrrhenus, etc.: in contrast with the supposition in vs. 1. The Etruscans reached a high point of civilization, which was on the decline when the Romans came in contact with them, and had left traditions of luxury and effeminacy with their accompanying vices. See Momm. Hist. Bk. II. Ch. iv.

 14. tinctus viola pallor: cf. Verg. E. 2. 47 pallentis violas. The tint was a pale yellow (wan).

15. vir saucius: Intr. 105 a.—Pieria: cf. Thressa, 9. 9.—paelice: causal abl., as in I. 14. 5.—saucius: of love, as Verg. A. IV. 1.

16. curvat: a fresh word, for the 'faded metaphor' flectit.—supplicibus, worshippers; i.e. if no personal consideration moves you, spare us in pure mercy (like a goddess). There is an undertone of irony in this and the next words.

17. rigida: continuing the figure in curvat.

18. Mauris anguibus: said to be particularly savage on account of the heat; Sall. Jug. 89. 5. Cf. Lucan's description of the snakes of the Libyan desert, B. C. IX. 630 sqq.—animum: Intr. 44.

19. non hoc, etc.: the comic effect of this final touch is obvious.

—liminis: cf. Epod. 11. 22.—aquae caelestis: cf. Ep. II. 1. 135. The reference to rain (cf. vs. 8) shows that he has in mind other occasions besides the present.
 20. latus: cf. II. 7. 18 n.

XI. The theme of this ode is the beautiful story of Hypermnestra and Lynceus, which is presented in a setting that adds not a little to its charm. The poet begins as if with no definite theme in mind. He calls on his lyre, and on Mercury, who gave the lyre its magic power, to play a strain to which even Lyde shall listen,—Lyde, the shy young girl, playful as a colt and with as little thought of love. He appeals to the past achievements of the lyre, how, in the hands of Orpheus, it charmed the woods and streams and wild beasts, yes, even the monsters of the underworld, and Ixion and Tityos in their torment, and the Danaids,—let Lyde hear the tale of the Danaids. Thus he comes upon his theme naturally, as it were, and without design. He shows his skill further in disposing of the disagreeable part of the story first, the crime and the subsequent punishment of the wicked sisters; and against this dark background he paints the bright picture of the one who was found faithful. His taste is shown no less in leaving off at the point where the heroic girl is left to face death as the consequence of her devoted courage and womanly pity. Ovid has treated the same subject in the Heroides (14), following the lines laid down by Horace, so that the two poems afford an excellent opportunity of comparing the two poets, and the lyric with the elegiac treatment.—Metre, 174.

1. Mercuri: although his appeal is to the lyre, he invokes Mercury first, because the lyre is his handiwork (I. 10. 6 n), and without his inspiration it is a voiceless shell.—nam: introducing the reason for addressing the god,—a Homeric form of expression, e.g. Odys. I. 337; cf. Verg. A. I. 65 Aeole, namque tibi, etc. The reason is given, after Horace's manner, in the form of a particular example standing for the general fact.—te magistro: abl. absolute, but containing the main thought: it was thy teaching and his willingness to learn of thee that gave Amphion his (well-known) power. docilis is more than doctus, enforcing the idea of dependence.

2. movit, etc.: the stones were said to have moved into their places in the wall under the spell of his music; see Ep. II. 3. 394 sqq.

3. resonare: Intr. 101 c.

4. nervis: ablative.

5. nec loquax neque grata, without voice or charm.—olim: i.e. when a mere shell.—et: often placed at the end of the verse in Horace, but always, except here and IV. 13. 6, coalescing by elision with the preceding word.

6. mensis: the use of the lyre at banquets dates from Homeric times; cf. e.g. the story of the Phaeacians.—amica: cf. 4. 25 n and Intr. 119 a.—templis: i.e. in religious ceremonies; cf. I. 36. 1 n. Porphyrio says: 'Fidicines hodieque Romae sacrificiis adhiberi videmus.'

7. dic modos: cf. I. 32. 3.

9. trima: the time prescribed for breaking in a colt was in its fourth year (Verg. G. III. 190).

10. ludit, etc.: see Intr. 123.—exsultim, bounding over. The word is found here only.—tangi: Intr. 94 l.

12. cruda: the same figure as in II. 5. 10.

- Tu potes tigris comitesque silvas

20 ore trilingui ;

13. tu : the lyre. The poet is recalling the feats of Orpheus ; cf. I. 12. 7 sqq. — comites, in thy train. — -que : Intr. 119 b.

15. cessit, etc. : for the descent of Orpheus to the lower world in quest of Eurydice, see Ovid, M. X. 8 sqq., Verg. G. IV. 457 sqq. — immanis : used of Cerberus also in Verg. A. VI. 418 recubans immanis in antro. Some join it here with aulae ; cf. fera regia Ditis, Ov. M. IV. 438. — blandienti : cf. I. 12. 11, 24. 13.

16. ianitor aulae : better taken as expressing a single idea ('palace-doorkeeper'), modified by immanis. For aulae, cf. II. 18. 31.

17. Cerberus, etc. : see I. 2. 7 n. The repulsive picture of the monster serves to enhance the impression of the power of music. But some critics have doubted whether Horace wrote the strophe, which certainly has a prosaic flavor. They object particularly to the unpoetical pronoun eius, which Vergil nowhere uses. Horace has it, however, IV. 8. 18, as well as in the Satires, and it occurs two or three times in Ovid. — quamvis : Intr. 83. — furiale, fury-like ; cf. II. 13. 35 sq. — centum : see 8. 14 n.

18. angues : conceived as growing like hair about his neck ; cf. Verg. A. VI. 419 horreere videns iam colla colubris.

20. ore trilingui : cf. II. 19. 31 n.

21. quin et : cf. II. 13. 37 n. — Ixion : cf. Verg. G. IV. 484 Ixionii cantu rota constitit orbis. — Tityos : see 4. 77, II. 14. 8 n.

22. risit : Intr. 77. — invito : i.e. in spite of their torture. — urna : used collectively, — the one in which each carried water to the dolium ; Intr. 127.

25. audiat Lyde, etc. : Horace's readers were familiar with the myth of the Danaids, — how the Argive king accepted the overtures of his brother Aegyptus for a reconciliation, and married the latter's sons to his fifty daughters, but instructed the brides to murder their husbands on the wedding night, — and with the doom of the wicked damsels to pour water into a bottomless cistern till they filled it; they were reminded of the story whenever they went to the library of the temple of Apollo on the Palatine (I. 31), where the statues of Danaus and his daughters lined the portico, alternating with the marble columns (Ov. Tr. III. 1. 61 sq., Prop. III. 29. 3 sq.). Horace could therefore pass lightly over these outlines and use them as an introduction to the golden deed of the one interesting Danaid. — notas: modifying scelus as well as poenas; Intr. 119 a.

26. lymphæ: with inane; Intr. 66 c. For the order of words here, see Intr. 111.

27. fundo: instrumental abl. (the way by which). — pereuntis, going to waste.

28. sera, etc.: i.e. the doom (punishment), long delayed, which overtakes the guilty person at last, even though he go free all his life.

29. sub: cf. 5. 9. Orcus is the person (not the place), as in II. 18. 30.

30. impiæ . . . impiæ: the parenthetical clause supplies the requisite pause to make the repetition more effective (Intr. 116 g); cf. surge, 37 sq. Pietas, as a human obligation, commonly denotes that of blood-relationship, but is sometimes extended to marriage and other obligations that were regarded as having a sacred character. Cf. Ov. M. XIII. 301 piæ coniunx. So Hypermnestra, Ov. Her. 14. 129, calls her punishment pretium pietatis iniquum.

31. potuere: in a moral sense, — they had the heart; different from its use in 30, where it denotes simple possibility, — ‘What wickedness could be greater?’ — duro, pitiless; cf. the Homeric νηλεὺς χαλκῷ.

33. una, only one.

35. splendide mendax: a fine oxymoron. Cf. Tac. H. IV. 50 servus egregio mendacio se Pisonem esse respondit, ac statim obtruncatur; Soph. Ant. 74 δῖα πανουργήσασα. mendax implies that Danaus had bound his daughters by a promise or oath to commit the deed.

37. quae, she.

38. surge: sc. from sleep, suggesting the figurative expression for death that follows.—longus: as in II. 14. 19 and IV. 9. 27, for 'eternal.' In all of these cases longus gets its expressive force from the substantive (labor, somnus, nox), which denotes a familiar experience of limited duration.—unde: for inde unde, 'from a quarter from which.'

40. falle, elude; cf. I. 10. 16 n, Ep. I. 5. 31.—sorores: sc. tuas; cf. Ov. Her. 14. 123 si qua piaë, Lynceu, tibi cura sororis. First cousins were called fratres and sorores (patruelles).

42. singulos lacerant: a confusion of the figure with the reality (Intr. 123), singulos referring to the men, lacerant to the lions.—eheu: in her account of the affair in Ov. Her. 14. 35, she is made to say, circum me gemitus morientum audire videbar; | et tamen audibam, quodque verebar erat.

43. intra claustra: i.e. where others would kill you.

44. tenebo: for retinebo; Intr. 129.

45. me: Intr. 116 b, g; not continuing the emphasis of ego, but contrasted with te. The two sentences of this strophe are virtually concessive clauses added to the expression of her determination in 42-44: 'I will not compass your death, let my father do his worst to me.'

47. extremos: see 10. 1 n.

49. pedes et aurae: i.e. to the coast, and then across the sea; cf. Epod. 16. 21 sq.

50. Venus: who, as inspirer of Hypermnestra's act, has given him the opportunity to escape.

51. nostri, of me, as in 27. 14 and Juv. 3. 318; cf. 28. 9 n.—sepulcro: Intr. 69.

- 3 simul unctos Tiberinis umeros lavit in undis,

XII. This ode is a study in pure Ionics, based apparently on an ode of Alcaeus, beginning ἔμε δέιλαν, ἔμε πασάν κακοτάτων πεδέχουσιν (Fr. 59). Alcaeus wrote a number of poems in this metre, but Horace seems to have found the task of naturalizing it in Latin too difficult, or the effect unsatisfactory; at least, this is the only example he has left us. In form it is a monologue, the complaint of a love-sick girl, who frets against the restraints under which she is brought up, and sighs for the freedom of a young man. The names are Greek, but the local coloring is, as usual, wholly Roman.—Metre, 168.

1. ludum, free play; cf. Plaut. Bacch. 1083 nixis nolo ei desidiaae dare ludum.—lavere: i.e. wash them away. For the form, see II. 3. 18 n.—aut, or else; or, if they do; cf. 24. 24; Tac. Ann. III. 73. 1 huc adrogantiae venerat, ut sedem sibi atque exercitui postularet, aut bellum inexplicabile minitaretur.—metuentis: accusative; the force of the genitive miserarum has faded, at this distance, into a vague idea of necessity, so that eas is felt to be understood as the subject of exanimari.—patruae: not necessarily of an actual uncle. The word patruus, like noverca (see Epod. 5. 9 n), had become proverbial for severity untempered by parental affection or sympathy; cf. S. II. 3. 88 ne sis patruus mihi. For the form, see Intr. 65.—verbera, the lashings.

2. tibi qualum (aufert), steals away your wool-basket. The verb here, though used figuratively, has its literal (physical) meaning; with its other subject, nitor Hebri, it is purely metaphorical.—operosae: applied to Minerva (in contrast with Venus) as patroness of the various handicrafts, particularly of spinning and weaving (Ἀθηναῖ Ἐργάνη).—Minervae: objective gen.—Neobule: a name borrowed from Archilochus, for its pleasing sound and metrical value; cf. Leuconoe, I. II.—Liparaei Hebri: cf. I. 27. 10, II. 4. 2, III. 9. 9, 14. The name Hebrus is taken from the river in Thrace; cf. 7. 23 n.—nitor: cf. I. 19. 5.

3. simul: see I. 4. 17 n.—

unctos: for the exercise that preceded the bath. On this whole passage see I. 8. 5 sqq., III. 7. 25 sqq., with notes. — eques: a construction according to sense (as if Hebrus, instead of nitor Hebri had been the subject of the main verb) justified by the intervention of the dependent clause with Hebrus understood as its subject. — Bellerophontē: from the form Bellerophontes; cf. 7. 15 n. — segni: with both pugno and pede; Intr. 119 a. The ablatives are better taken as causal.

4. fruticeto: Intr. 69. — excipere: i.e. to attack him when he is driven out, and kill him before he can escape. For the infinitives see Intr. 101 b and c.

XIII. To the spring of Bandusia. Where the spring was which Horace has immortalized under this name, cannot be determined. There is evidence, dating from the beginning of the twelfth century, of the existence of a 'fons Bandusinus' near Venusia, and this tradition, in itself of no great value, — for it was very common in the middle ages for a classical name to be attached to a place without the least reference to truth, — receives some support from the name itself, which, being probably a corruption of the Greek Πανδοσία, is one, we should expect to find in the neighborhood of Venusia, rather than in the Sabine district where Horace had his farm. There was on Horace's farm a spring which we know he admired and valued highly (cf. S. II. 6. 2, Ep. I. 16, 12 sqq.), and which would fit in all respects our poem; but we do not know that it was called Bandusia or had any name at all. Some have imagined that Horace, on coming into possession of his new home, revived there a name familiar and dear to him in the place of his birth. Fortunately our ignorance need not mar our enjoyment of the poem, which would lose none of its exquisite beauty if we were obliged to relegate the spring entirely to the realm of fancy. — Metre, 173.

1. Bandusiae: apparently the name of the place, not of the nymph of the spring. — splendidior vitro, brighter than crystal. Ovid applies the same phrase to Galatea (M. XIII. 791). The brightness, of course, implies the transparency of the water, as of the glass. Cf. splendor aquai,

5 primis et venerem et proelia destinat ;

Lucr. IV. 211. For vitro, cf. I. 17. 20 n.

2. mero : poured into the water as a libation to the divinity of the spring. That the poet will make these slighter offerings of wine and flowers, along with the greater sacrifice promised in the next verse, goes without saying. The regular time for making such offerings was the festival of the Fontanalia (or Fontinalia), October 13. — non sine : cf. I. 23. 3 n. — floribus : cf. Varro L. L. VI. 22 (Fontanalibus) et in fontes coronas iaciunt et puteos coronant. That they also sacrificed animals appears from the present passage and from the Actu Fratr. Arv. (A.D. 183), where a sacrifice of two wethers is recorded. It is not necessary, however, to suppose that this ode was written on the eve of the Fontanalia. Cf. Martial VI. 47.

5. destinat, foretokens.

6. frustra : nam, etc. : cf. 7. 21 n. — gelidos, rubro : see Intr. 122.

9. te . . . tu : cf. I. 10. 9 n ; Intr. 116 g. — hora, season ; cf. Ep. II. 3. 302 sub verni temporis horam. The whole phrase means the furious heat of the dog-days ; see I. 17. 17 n.

10. tangere, come nigh. For the mood see Intr. 94 o. — frigus, etc. : i.e. during the mid-day rest.

12. vago : answering to fessis vomere ; the aimless movement of the grazing flock is contrasted with the steady-going ox at his work.

13. nobilium, famous ; i.e. such as Hippocrene, Castalia, Arethusa, etc. The poet has kept his word. — fontium : Intr. 62.

14. cavis, etc. : with consummate skill Horace has painted the whole scene for us in these few finishing strokes. — impositam, that stands upon ; cf. IV. 14. 12.

15. loquaces : with desiliunt. The fine effect of this passage is due in large measure to the succession of liquids and expressive vowel sounds ; Intr. 131.

XIV. Early in the year B.C. 24 Augustus returned to Rome after an absence of nearly three years in the West, where he had reduced the Cantabrians to temporary submission and settled the affairs of Gaul. During the Cantabrian campaign he had lain sick at Tarraco for many months,—a period of grave anxiety for all thoughtful and peace-loving Romans, in view of the disorders that would inevitably follow his death. There was no doubt genuine rejoicing among the great mass of the people over his recovery and safe return. As he had declined the honor of a triumph for success achieved largely by his lieutenants, a public thanksgiving (supplicatio) would naturally be decreed. In anticipation of such a thanksgiving Horace wrote the present ode. He pictures the outward manifestations of gratitude and rejoicing, in which the women may be expected to take a prominent part; and then proceeds with his own preparations for celebrating the day in a light-hearted strain, in which, however, we are not permitted to forget the significance of the occasion. — Metre, 174.

1. Herculis ritu, like Hercules;

referring both to the dangerous enterprise and the victorious return.—modo (with dictus): i.e. at the time of his illness.—dictus, he who was said.—o plebs, O ye people. The word had lost its earlier meaning of a political class, and signified, like populus, the mass of the citizens in distinction from their rulers; cf. II. 2. 18.

2. venalem, whose price is.—petiisse, to have gone in quest of.

3. Hispana ora: cf. 8. 21 n.

5. unico gaudens, whose whole joy is in; cf. unicis Sabinis, II. 18. 14 n. Vnicus, from its use with filius, filia, etc., had come to connote a concentration of interest and affection on a single object, who is one's 'all.'—mulier: Livia. She was a woman of great ability and force of character, tempered with good sense and tact, which enabled her to keep the affection of her husband to the end. Her private life was above reproach (sanctitate domus priscum ad morem, Tac. Ann. V. 1. 5).

6. prodeat: on a day of thanksgiving, besides the institution of public sacrifices, the temples, which were closed to the laity on ordinary occasions, were thrown open and were thronged with crowds of people of every age and class, who passed through the streets from shrine to shrine, crowned with wreaths and singing hymns.—iustis, due ; i.e. those prescribed by the ritual.—operata : i.e. at home, before setting out to take part in the public thanksgiving.—sacris : the other reading, iustis divinis (scilicet quod Caesari victoriam et reditum merenti dederint, Porphyrio), would be more appropriate if operata referred to the public ceremonies of the day. But operata, which implies an actual sacrifice ('operationes' enim sacrificia dixerunt, Porph.), cannot well apply to the mere presence of Livia and the women at the public ceremonies, in which they would take no active part ; and if it could, it ought to be operatura, as Bentley pointed out.

7. soror : Octavia.

8. supplice : in distinction from the plain one worn ordinarily by free-born ladies. The 'thanksgiving fillet' would seem to have been a wreath of olive twined with a woolen ribbon.—vitta : abl. with decorae, as in II. 16. 6.

9. virginum matres, etc. : i.e. mothers with their sons and daughters (or daughters-in-law) about them, the former just home from the wars (nuper sospitum). Some join nuper sospitum with vir- ginum also, but this is a strained interpretation and confuses the picture.

10. vos : the younger children, who would especially need this caution. This is indicated by the word pueri (in contrast with iuvenes, above) and more explicitly in the phrase attached to puellae. Cf. the very similar expression for 'boys and girls,' Ep. II. 1. 132 castis cum pueris ignara puella mariti.

11. non virum expertae : the MS. reading, iam virum expertae, would make the whole phrase a bungling and needless repetition of virginum iuvenumque, above.—male ominatis, etc. : equivalent to favete linguis, III. 1. 2 n. If the text is correct, the hiatus (Intr. 185) is due to the feeling that the two words belong together as a compound.

12. parcite : abstain from ; cf. Epod. 17. 6 parce vocibus sacris.

13. vere mihi festus : used predicatively : cf. 8. 9 n.—atras curas : those caused by the precarious state of Caesar's health. Cf. III. 1. 40 n.

14. tumultum, insurrection ; a war in the city or in Italy (cf. Cic. Phil. 8. 2 sqq.). He is thinking of personal danger.

15. mori : Intr. 95.—tenente sc. as ruler ; cf. 17. 8, S. I. 7. 18.

17. unguentum, coronas, cadum: cf. II. 3. 13 n. — puer: see I. 19. 14 n.

18. Marsi duelli: the Social War, B.C. 90, 89. The Marsi were among the bravest of the socii; cf. I. 2. 39 n. — memorem: i.e. stored at that time. Cf. Juv. 5. 31 calcatamque tenet bellis socialibus uvam (dives).

19. Spartacum: the Servile War occurred B.C. 73-71. — vagantem: i.e. marauding.

20. fallere: cf. II. 40 n.

21. argutae, sweet-voiced; cf. argutae Thaliae, IV. 6. 25. — properet: Gr. 339. — Neerae: a music girl.

22. murream, chestnut; it is defined by Porphyrio as (color) medius inter flavum et nigrum. — nodo cohibere: instead of a more elaborate coiffure, which would keep him waiting; cf. II. 11. 23 n.

23. ianitorem: the ostiarius of the house where Neaera lodged.

24. abito: the second form of the imperative (2d person), referring to a point of future time removed by an interval from the present.

25. albescens: Horace was only forty-one, but his hair turned gray early (Intr. 29).

27. non ego: cf. I. 18. 11 n. — ferrem: Gr. 308 a. — calidus iuventa: in contrast with the actual fact implied in albescens, etc.

28. consule Planco: the year was that of Philippi. The reminiscence, like those of vs. 18 and 19, is not without design. To his playful reminder of the unpleasant experiences of civil war and insurrection, from which the rule of Augustus had afforded a happy escape, Horace adds an intimation of his own change from a hot partisan to a lover of peace and quiet.

XV. Horace here portrays the same type of character that he attacks with more severity in I. 25, IV. 13, and some of the Epodes, — that of the woman of faded beauty who still tries to play the part of a young girl. — Metre, 171.

1. pauperis: a reason why she should stay at home and work; cf. vs. 13.

2. fige: more forcible than pone

3. laboribus: sarcastic; 'everybody knows (famosis) that at your years such capers are hard work.'

4. maturo, the full time of; it could not be called untimely if it should occur in the near future.—propior, getting near (as you are).

5. inter ludere: Intr. 115 c. For this use of ludere, cf. II. 12. 19 n.

XVI. Reflections on the power and the impotence of riches. Gold is a mighty weapon : it can bring to nought the counsels of kings ; it can break through walls of rock ; it can destroy princely houses, take cities, subvert thrones ; but it cannot confer happiness. Wealth brings trouble and danger, and it cannot keep pace with growing desire ; contentment is better than great possessions. Heaven can vouchsafe no richer boon than moderate means with a contented spirit. The ode is addressed to Maecenas, and is very similar in sentiment to II. 2 and 16, and III. 1. — Metre, 172.

1. Danaen : Horace, with mild irony, treats the highly poetical myth of Jupiter descending to Danae in a golden shower as the testimony of mythology to the power of gold.—aenea : cf. 3. 65 n.

2. robustae, oaken ; cf. I. 3. 9.

3. tristes, grim.—munierant : see Intr. 82. The indicative expresses what had been the fact until the occurrence of the event indicated in the protasis ; the precautions had been sufficient (and would have continued to be) if the power of gold had not been brought to bear against them. Cf. Tac. Ann. IV. 9. 1 (of the speech of Tiberius to the senate on the death of his son) magno ea fletu et mox precationibus faustis audita ; ac, si modum orationi posuisset, misericordia sui gloriaque animos audientium impleverat.

4. adulteris : cf. I. 33. 9 n.

6. pavidum : Acrisius had been told by an oracle that his daughter's son would slay him.

7. fore enim, etc. : the construction shows that the thought is quoted, and the context shows it is that of the two divinities.

8. pretium, a bribe.—deo : dative.

9. per medios : i.e. not secretly, by outwitting them, but right under their eyes ; it paralyzes and disarms them. This idea of the power of gold is kept up in the metaphors that follow (perrumpere, concidit, diffidit, subruit).—ire : Intr. 94 c.—satellites, royal guards.

 Crescentem sequitur cura pecuniam maiorumque fames ; iure perhorru

10. saxa : i.e. those of the wall of a city or stronghold, as in Ep. II. 3. 395.

11. ictu : Intr. 75. — concidit ... diffidit : Intr. 116 b, c ; cf. I. 28. 7. — auguris Argivi : Amphiarus, the prophet-hero of Argos, brother-in-law of king Adrastus. When the latter was organizing the expedition of the 'Seven against Thebes,' Amphiarus, who foresaw its disastrous end and his own death, was betrayed into the necessity of joining it by his wife Eriphyle, who had been bribed by Polynices with the golden necklace of Harmonia. The consequences were the death of Amphiarus, the murder of Eriphyle in revenge by their son Alcmaeon, and the madness of the latter under his mother's curse.

13. diffidit, clove asunder.

14. vir Macedo : Philip, the father of Alexander. His success in accomplishing his purposes by bribery was proverbial, so that the mention of his name is unnecessary ; cf. Cic. ad Att. I. 16. 12 Philippus omnia castella expugnari posse dicebat in quae modo asellus onustus auro posset ascendere. A Delphic oracle was quoted, advising him to fight 'with silver spears'; and it was said ὅτι τὰς πόλεις αἰρεῖ τῶν Ἑλλήνων οὐ Φίλιππος, ἀλλὰ τὸ Φιλίππου χρυσίον. (Plut. Aem. Paul. 12). — subruit, undermined.

15. muneribus; munera : Intr. 116 e. — navium duces : these words would recall to Horace's readers a conspicuous example of their own time, Menodorus, the freedman admiral of Sextus Pompeius, who deserted to Octavian, then back to Pompey, and finally to Octavian again.

16. saevos, stern; i.e. for all their sternness.

17. crescentem, etc.: the preceding reflections on the power of wealth convey no suggestion of its desirability as a possession ; on the contrary, its wonderful power is always a power for evil, and the suggestion of danger to the possessor is not far removed ; just as in these days we might speak with admiration of electricity as a mighty force, which, however, we should shrink from handling. This underlying thought now comes to the surface. — cura : here simply the worry of managing great wealth.

18. maiorum: neuter.—fames: cf. Ep. I. 18. 23 argenti sitis importuna famesque, Verg. A. III. 57 auri sacra fames; and, for the thought, II. 2. 13 sqq.: Juv. 14. 139 crescit amor nummi quantum ipsa pecunia crevit.

19. late conspicuum: proleptic. The wise man will shrink from the dangerous prominence which great wealth gives.—tollere: Intr. 94 l.—verticem: an appropriate word with tollere; cf. I. 1. 36, 18. 15.

20. equitum: Maecenas is himself a shining example of the wisdom of moderation; Intr. 21.

21. quanto, etc.: in this paradoxical sentence plura gets its meaning in each case from the context; in the first clause it means those things which we have in mind when we speak of 'denying ourselves,' that is, in general, luxuries; in the second clause it means the gifts of the gods, that is, those enjoyments and satisfactions that come to us, not of our own seeking, but as the fruits of a well-trained mind and character. In particular, Horace means that self-denial develops a contented spirit, which is the only condition of happiness, and his teaching here, as in II. 2. 17 sqq., falls in with that of the Stoics; see Cic. Paradoxa 6.

22. nil cupientium, of the contented. The figure of the two camps is not intended to conform in all respects to Horace's actual circumstances, but to express vividly his strong conviction of the superiority of contentment over riches. The figure is, as often, confused with the reality; see Intr. 123.

23. nudus peto, I leave all and set out for; i.e. I surrender all that I possess, in exchange for the more precious treasure of contentment.—transfuga, etc.: i.e. I am (like) a soldier in the camp of the rich whose heart is in the other camp, so that he holds cheap the luxuries about him.

25. contemptae, insignificant (sc. in the eyes of the wealthy); cf. Cic. Parad. 6. 47 meam pecuniam contemnitis, et recte; est enim ad vulgi opinionem mediocris, ad tuam nulla, ad meam modica.—splendidior: sc. in the eyes of the wise; cf. II. 2. 21 sqq.

26. quicquid, etc.: cf. I. 1. 10 n.—arāt: here used for the whole work of production by the farmer; cf. the use of trahunt, II. 18. 8 n. For the prosody, see Intr. 179.—impiger Apulus: cf. perniciis

Apuli, Epod. 2. 42. The soil of the Apulian lowlands was excellent for tillage as well as for pasture (Strabo VI. 3. 9).

27. occultare: a fresh word, for the more usual condere (cf. I. 1. 9). — meis: emphatic; Intr. 116 b.

28. magnas, etc., being (really), etc.; expressing the actual fact in contrast with what people say (dicerer).

29. rivus aquae silvae: cf. Horace's description of his farm, Ep. I. 16. 5 sqq.; also I. 22. 9 sqq., Ep. I. 14. 1 sqq.

30. segetis certa fides: in contrast with fundus mendax, III. 1. 30 n, and spem mentita seges, Ep. I. 7. 87. segetis is possessive genitive; cf. Cic. ad Fam. XVI. 17. 1 ager etiam fidelis dici potest. The poet, 'desiderans quod satis est,' can always count on his crops yielding enough for his needs; it is only the man who is intent on growing rich that is worried by the uncertainties of farming.

31. fulgentem imperio: the man holding for the time the splendid position of proconsul. The proconsulships of Asia and Africa were the highest positions of dignity and power attainable by a Roman citizen; they were assigned by lot each year to the two senior consuls. Others take the words as an extravagant expression for great landed possessions in Africa; but the examples cited in support of this view (vs. 41, below, and II. 2. 9 sqq.) refer to regal power. Horace has already used the great landowners for comparison (vss. 26 sq.); he now uses exalted station and outward splendor, as he does in II. 2. 17. The epithet fertilis contributes to the picture, suggesting the great resources of the province, which give it its importance and prominence.

32. fallit sorte beator: literally 'being happier in lot (than he), escapes his notice,' i.e. is a happier lot than his, though he does not suspect it. The construction is formed after the Greek idiom (λανθάνει δλβιώτερον δν, the Latin language, however, providing no equivalent for δν).

33. quamquam, etc.: with these typical forms of wealth cf. I. 31. 5 sqq., Epod. 1. 25 sqq.; Intr. 117 a. — Calabrae apes: cf. II. 6. 14.

34. Laestrygonia: i.e. Formian; see 17. 1 n, and cf. Sabina, I. 9. 7 n. For the wine, see I. 20. 10 n. — Bacchus: Intr. 130.

35. languescit, is mellowing; cf. languidiora vina, 21. 8. — Gallicis: i.e. of Cisalpine Gaul, where white wool of a fine quality was grown (Plin. N. H. VIII. 190).

36. pascuis: Intr. 69.

37. importuna, pinching.

38. nec si, etc.: cf. Epod. I. 31.
 — dare: Intr. 94 k.

39. contracto, etc.: cf. II. 2.
 9 sqq. — melius porrigam: suggested by si plura velim. The sense is: If I should find my income too small for my expenses, a better way to enlarge it will be to cut down my desires till they come within it; the other way, seeking for more, never brings satisfaction; desire is never satisfied by feeding it. Horace is here preaching on a Stoic text; cf. Cic. Parad. 6. 49 O di immortales! non intellegunt homines quam magnum vectigal sit parsimonia. — cupidine: see II. 16. 15 n.

40. vectigalia, income; properly, public revenues, but sometimes used of private income, especially for purposes of comparison, as here and S. II. 2. 100; cf. also Cic. l.c.

41. Mygdoniis: i.e. Phrygian; see II. 12. 22 n. — Alyattei: king of Lydia, father of Croesus. For the form, cf. Vlixei, I. 6. 7 n.

42. campis: dative; Intr. 56. — continuem, unite; sc. under my sway, so as to enjoy the entire revenues of both countries. The word is often used of buying up large tracts of land, e.g. Liv. XXXIV. 4. 9 quid legem Liciniam excitavit de quingentis iugeribus nisi ingens cupido agros continuandi? — multa petentibus, etc.: the converse of quanto quisque . . . feret, 21 sq.

43. bene est (sc. ei), blessed is the man.

XVII. To L. Aelius Lamia, in regard to whom see I. 26, introd. note. The ode, it would seem, is addressed to him simply as a compliment, the substance of it being a light sketch in the spirit of I. 9, very likely a study from the Greek, which it would be idle to attempt to connect with Lamia's personality. The scene is laid in the country, near the seashore. 'A great storm is brewing; you must stay indoors to-morrow, and your servants can do no work. Make ready to enjoy with them the holiday thus provided for you.' — Metre, 176.

1. ab Lamo: ^hequivalent to Lamo orte, the idea of descent being implied in nobilis. Lamus was the mythical founder of the city of the Laestrygones (Λάμουν αὐτὸν πτολιεθρον | Τηλέπυλον Λαιστρυγονίην, Odys. X. 81), which was identified with Formiae: cf. Cic. ad Att. II. 13. 2 si vero in hanc Τηλέπυλον veneris Λαιστρυγονίην, Formias dico. That the Lamiae, one of the oldest and wealthiest families of Formiae, should place this name at the head of their pedigree, was inevitable. At this time they had little political distinction to boast of, and were therefore all the more likely to make much of the antiquity of their family. The father of our Lamia, when he went into politics as a supporter of Cicero, was still only a knight, though a distinguished one; in B.C. 44 Cicero supported him for the praetorship, with what success is unknown. (See Cic. ad Fam. XI. 16. 1, 17. 1.) His son, Horace's friend, was the first of the family who held the consulship, but that was at least twenty-five years after the date of this ode. We may therefore take this allusion to his pedigree as serious (not humorous, as some take it), and attribute it to the same motive as in the case of Maecenas (I. 1. 1, III. 29. 1, S. I. 6. 1, etc.), who likewise was without political distinction. A century later, when the Lamiae had become nobiles by the attainment of high curule office, we find them named as types of high nobility (Juv. 4. 154, 6. 385), a further evidence of the antiquity of their ancestry, as their nobilitas was even then not over three generations old.

2. quando, etc.; the four verses beginning here are with some reason suspected of being interpolated. If they are genuine, the whole genealogical dissertation, quando—late tyrannus, is parenthetical, and consists of a protasis, quando—fastos, introducing (and giving the reason of) a main statement, auctore—tyrannus. —priores: i.e. the earliest of the name; 'earlier' than the great body of descendants (genus omne) whose names are in the records. —hinc, after him; cf. unde, I. 12. 17 n.

4. fastos: here used of family records.

5. auctore: sc. generis; cf. I. 2. 36. It is in apposition with illo, which is used substantively. — ducis: if ducit is read, genus is its subject, and the whole parenthetical clause depends on quando.

7. innantem, that floods; referring to the marshes and inlets which prevail on that part of the coast. — Maricae, Marica's. She was an old Italian divinity, variously identified with Aphrodite and Circe, whose grove was at the mouth of the Liris, ten miles from Formiae.

8. tenuisse: cf. 14. 15 n.

9. late tyrannus: the Homeric εὐρύς κελών; cf. late regem, Verg. A. I. 21. For the construction see Mdv. 301 c. Obs. 2.—nemus: i.e. the ground under the trees. For this construction with sterno, cf. IV. 14. 32, where, as here, the simple verb is used for consterno (Intr. 129).

10. inutili; its worthlessness was proverbial; cf. vilior alga, S. II. 5. 8, Verg. E. 7. 42.

11. Euro: cf. Epod. 16. 54.

12. aquae augur: after the Greek ὑετομαντῆς (cf. Euphoriion, Fr. 65 ὑετομαντῆς ὅτε κρῶξε κροῶν). Vergil describes its action when 'calling rain,' G. I. 388 tum cornix plena pluviam vocat improba voce | et sola in sicca secum spatiat harena. Cf. 27. 10, Lucr. V. 1083.—fallit: used absolutely, as in Epod. 16. 45 numquam fallentis olivae.

13. annosa: it was supposed to live to an extraordinary age,—through nine generations of men, according to Hesiod (Plut. Moral. 415 c); cf. IV. 13. 25.—dum potes: i.e. today, before the storm wets it.

14. compone, get in a store.—genium: a man's genius was conceived to be an attendant spirit, divine but not immortal, insepara-

bly associated with his life in all its phases of enjoyment or depression, 'naturae deus humanae, mortalis in unum | quodque caput, vultu mutabilis, albus et ater' (Ep. II. 2. 187); and on its varying moods depended his happiness or unhappiness. The conception was not unlike that of the soul in the parable of the rich man, Luke 12. 16 sqq. ('I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.') Hence, to deny one's self reasonable comforts was to 'cheat one's genius' (Ter. Ph. 44); and to take a holiday or otherwise give one's self up to enjoyment was piare (Ep. II. 1. 144) or placare (Ep. II. 3. 210) genium, or, more commonly, indulgere genio. Horace here substitutes curare, a word often used for bodily comfort (curare corpus, curare cutem, etc.).—mero: cf. Pers. 2. 3 funde merum genio; Ep. II. 1. 144; Tib. II. 2. 8.

15. curabis: Intr. 90.—porco: an offering to the Lares (cf. 23. 4, S. II. 3. 164), whose worship was associated with every act of family life. The flesh of the victim would furnish forth the simple feast; see I. 36. 2 n.

16. operum: Intr. 67.

XVIII. A hymn to Faunus. The first half is a prayer for the favor of the god, which has been merited by constant and liberal offerings. In the second half his benign influence is set forth in a description of his festival on the 5th of December. This appears to have been a festival peculiar to the country, for in Rome his great day was the Supercalia, on the 15th of February. For the attributes of Faunus, see I. 17. 2 n.—Metre, 174.

1. nympharum, etc.: this is a characteristic that belongs strictly to Pan and the Satyrs; cf. Stat. Silv. II. 2. 100 sqq., Mart. IX. 61. 13.

3. lenis, in mercy.—incedas: the mere presence of the god was believed to carry with it some influence, blessing or blight, according to his mood; cf. I. 17. 5 sqq.—abeasque aequus, and carry away a kindly feeling; i.e. may the god be pleased with all he sees, to the very end, and go away with a desire to bless.

4. alumnis, younglings of the herd and flock, as in 23. 7.

5. si, etc.: a modest form of statement common in prayers, introducing the ground on which the appeal is based; cf. S. II. 6. 6 sqq., and see note on poscit, I. 31. 1.—tener haedus: one of the parvi alumni; cf. I. 4. 12.—pleno anno: i.e. at the close of it, on the recurrence of the festival in December.—cadit: as a victim; cf. Verg. A. I. 334.

6. Veneris sodali: an epithet of the mixing-bowl not found elsewhere. It merely expresses the familiar association of 'love and wine.'

7. craterae: dative. When the bowl was filled, a libation would be made to the god first; but the main use of the wine, as of the kid, was to contribute to a spirited celebration of the god's day.—vetus: suggesting the antiquity of the festival. Notice the asyndeton, which is continued through the rest of the ode.—multo odore: for multo ture (cf. I. 30. 3); so colores for flowers, Prop. I. 2. 9 aspice quos summittat humus formosa colores.

9. ludit, etc.: the appeal to the god has merged insensibly into a description of the festival, which

- 10 cum tibi nonae redeunt Decembres ;

now continues, bridging over the change in grammatical construction. The scene is a grassy meadow, — green even in December in the Italian climate, — where the whole countryside is gathered about the old altar. The sacrifice is followed, as usual, by feasting, after which the people stroll about the fields and woods, or amuse themselves with dancing and other merrymaking. Cattle and flocks peacefully grazing form the border of the picture. — campo: Intr. 69.

10. tibi, thy; dative of reference. — redeunt: cf. 8. 9 n.

11. festus vacat, is making holiday. — otioso, freed from toil. Both man and beast are enjoying a day of rest.

12. pagus: a few MSS. have pardus, a substitution evidently due to some lively monk, who remembered Isaiah 11. 6 habitabit lupus cum agno et pardus cum haedo accubabit.

13. inter: Intr. 115 b. — audacis: i.e. they are not afraid of him, for they feel to-day the presence of Faunus, who was also Lupercus (interpreted as 'qui lupum arcet'); and he is cowed by the same presence.

14. spargit, etc.: cf. Epod. 11. 5

December silvis honorem (=frondis) decutit. The point here is that the woods of themselves strew the ground with leaves in honor of the god, referring to the common practice of strewing the ground with boughs on festal or solemn occasions; cf. Verg. E. 5. 40 spargite humum foliis (in honor of Daphnis). — agrestis: i.e. natural, artless.

15. invisam: because of the incessant hard work he is condemned to spend upon it. — pepulis: Intr. 94 d, 81 a. For the expression cf. I. 37. 2 pulsanda tellus, I. 4. 7 terram quatunt pede, IV. 1. 28. — fossor: the lowest grade of farm-laborer, the typical clown (Cat. 22. 10, Pers. 5. 122). He was employed especially in working the soil in orchards and vineyards; cf. Verg. G. II. 264. On large estates he was usually a slave in fetters (cf. Ov. Tr. IV. 1. 5 hoc est cur cantet vinctus quoque compede fossor, | indocili numero cum grave molliit opus); but in our present picture we must imagine him a free laborer for hire, a farm-hand, or perhaps the pauper colonus himself (cf. I. 1. 11 n, 35. 5).

16. ter: i.e. in a dance with triple beat (tripudium); cf. IV. 1. 28.

XIX. This ode portrays, in a lively dramatic form which reminds us of I. 27, a symposium. There are two distinct scenes, one occupying the first eight verses, and the other the remainder of the poem. How these are to be combined, Horace has by no means made clear. Perhaps the most probable explanation is this: On a sunny winter afternoon a company of literary friends sit together in some garden or elsewhere out of doors, and one of their number has been discoursing at great length on subjects which the poet begins to think are very ancient history. The sun is sinking low, the air grows chill, the cold evening is coming on. Suddenly the poet 'takes the floor,' and interrupts the learned discourse with a demand that the company consider a question of much nearer concern, — where, when, and how they can prepare to spend a merry evening. Then, as if carried away by his imagination, but really with the purpose of carrying his hearers with him, he plays the magister bibendi before them, with spirited dramatic action, as if the symposium had already begun, — a performance for which the serious and quiet picture in the opening verses supplies a fitting background. There is a similar anticipation of a scene of revelry in II. 7. 21 sqq.; cf. also III. 14. 17 sqq. The whole bears the impress of a Greek origin, and the only Roman name in the poem is to be explained, so far as we can see, as merely a passing compliment. — Metre, 171.

1. quantum distet : i.e. in time. — Inacho : see II. 3. 21 n.

2. Codrus : the last king of Athens ; said to have deliberately sacrificed his life in battle, like the Roman Decii, to ensure victory to his countrymen (Cic. Tusc. I. 116). — mori : Intr. 101 a.

3. genus Aeaci : Telamon and Peleus and their descendants, Ajax, Teucer, Achilles, Neoptolemus, etc.

4. pugnata bella : so also Ep. I. 16. 25. — sacro Ilio : after the Homeric Ἴλιος ἱρὴ (e.g. II. IV. 46) For the gender, see I. 10. 14 n.

5. quo, etc. : the contemplated symposium is one towards which each guest contributes his share. — Chium cadum : cf. Sabina dicta, I. 9. 7 n ; III. 16. 34. The Chian was a choice Greek wine.

6. aquam : to mix with the wine.

7. quo praebeante, etc. : i.e. at whose house and when? — quota : sc. hora ; cf. S. II. 6. 44.

8. Paelignis : i.e. such as pre vails in that mountainous region;

 cf. Sithonia nive, 26. 10.

9. da, fill up. The object to be supplied is cyathos (vini), which the cup-bearer was to pour into the guests' goblets. Cf. sume cyathos, 8. 13, addressed to the guest. The genitives that follow depend on this cyathos understood; see 8. 13 n. — lunae novae, etc.: three general toasts to begin the evening with, Horace having in mind no doubt the Greek practice of beginning a drinking bout with three libations. From the first we may infer that the time of the supposed revel was the new moon, or perhaps the first day of the month, which in Greek continued to be called νομήλα (= nova luna) after the lunar month had been abandoned; noctis mediae implies that that hour was to be included in their programme; auguris Murenæ is best explained as a toast in honor of Murena's accession to the college of augurs. Whether this was the Licinius Murena of II. 10 is uncertain. We do not know that Licinius Murena was ever augur, but he may have been; and we know of no other Murena who was a friend of Horace.

10. da: Intr. 116 h. — puer: see I. 19. 14 n; but we may perhaps imagine an actual boy here; cf. I. 29. 7 n.

11. tribus aut novem cyathis: expressing, not the quantity of wine in the cups, but the proportion of wine in the mixture. The Romans were in the habit of reckoning fractions by twelfths (unciae), and the cyathus, which as a measure was one twelfth of a sextarius, served as the uncia in mixing wine. Tres cyathi, then, meant $\frac{3}{12}$ wine ($+\frac{9}{12}$ water); and novem cyathi = $\frac{9}{12}$ wine ($+\frac{3}{12}$ water). — aut: the magister offers a choice between these alternatives only.

12. commodis, at your pleasure; proleptic, and having the force of an adverb with miscentur. For the meaning cf. IV. 8. 1.

13. qui, etc.: the bard himself, who seeks a strong inspiration, will name the number of the Muses as his choice, that is, he will take the stronger mixture; but he who fears the effect of too great exhilaration will choose the number of the gentle Graces (see 21. 22 n). — imparis: in reference to their number, nine.

14. attonitus, rapt. — petet. will call for.

15. tris supra: Intr. 115 b.

16. rixarum metuens: cf. patiens pulveris, I. 8. 4 n; III. 24. 22

19. tibiae : see I. 1. 32 n. The Phrygian pipes were distinguished by the fact that one of the pair had a curved end which gave it a deeper tone ; cf. Cat. 63. 22 tibicen ubi canit Phryx curvo grave calamo. Hence it was sometimes called a horn, as in I. 18. 13 ; cf. Ov. F. IV. 181 inflexo Berecynthia tibia cornu. See Howard, *Harv. 22. sparge : emphatic, implying a generous supply of the flowers, which in winter were more costly than usual. — invidus, with envy ; proleptic.

23. dementem : cf. dementis ruinas, I. 37. 7. Intr. 124. — Lycus : the old fellow who lives near by with a young wife (apparently) who does not care for him, is introduced as a foil to set off the hilarity of the revelers, and at the same time leads to the suggestion of the amica, whose presence completes the poet's picture.

24. vicina, our fair neighbor. — non habilis : i.e. too young, — or rather, he is too old for her.

25. spissa : as far as possible from baldness. — te . . . te : corresponding to Lycus . . . Lyco. — nitidum, who look so spruce ; here of the general effect of the person's make-up, as in II. 12. 19 and S. II. 1. 64 (not, as in I. 4. 9 and nitentis capillos, II. 7. 7, with special reference to the oil put on the hair).

26. puro : i.e. shining through a clear atmosphere ; cf. pura luna, II. 5. 19 ; III. 10. 8. For the comparison, cf. 9. 21. — Telephe : one of the guests, addressed by name, as in I. 27. 10, to give a touch of personal interest to the scene.

27. tempestiva, who is suitable ; in contrast with non habilis, 24, and, as there, with more reference to the man than to the woman.

28. lentus torret : see I. 13. 8 n.

Non vides quanto moveas periclo, Pyrrhe, Gaetulæ catulos leaenæ?
 Dura post paulo fugies inaudax
 proelia raptor,

5 cum per obstantis iuvenum catervas ibit insignem repetens Nearchum:
 grande certamen, tibi praeda cedat,

XX. The subject of this ode is the attempt of a youth, who is called Pyrrhus, to win away the handsome boy Nearchus from the (unnamed) girl who claims him as her lover. The treatment is highly figurative, so much so that the reader needs to guard against losing sight of the actual story in the graphic metaphors. Pyrrhus is likened to the bold hunter who is preparing to carry off the lion's whelps; the girl to the she-lion who watches over them. Then, with a sudden shifting of the scene, the poet pictures the beautiful boy, complacently watching the impending contest. The Greek origin of the composition is apparent.—Metre, 174.

1. moveas, disturb.

2. Gaetulæ: cf. I. 23. 10 n.

3. post paulo: the usual order, paulo post is avoided on account of its prosaic rhythm; so in the corresponding place in the hexameter, Sat. I. 2. 120, Ep. I. 6. 43. Post paulo, however, occurs also in prose.—inaudax raptor: the contrast (Intr. 116 a), amounts to an oxymoron: a robber and afraid! inaudax is not found elsewhere.

5. iuvenum catervas: these stand, in the metaphor, for the hunter's attendants,—the lioness will not be daunted by them; but the metaphor is for the moment put out of sight by the introduction of the boy in his proper person (Nearchum): the iuvenes are Pyrrhus' companions; the girl will rush boldly among them to recover the boy. The figure and the reality are here blended (Intr. 123), and after vs. 10 the figure is dropped entirely.

6. insignem, peerless; lit. 'conspicuous' (among all the rest); there is none like him.

7. grande certamen: in apposition with the action expressed or implied in the preceding verses, in which all the elements of a contest are set before us. Cf. opus, II. 1. 6 n.—tibi praeda cedat, whether the prey (Nearchus) shall fall to you (i.e. as the prize of victory); cf. Verg. A. XII. 183 cesserit Ausonio si fors victoria Turno.

8. maior: i.e. victorious.—illa: sc. sit.

O nata mecum consule Manlio,

11. posuisse, has placed; present perfect.—nudo: simply a stroke to make the picture more graphic.

13. fertur, I am told; cf. 5.41 n.—leni recreare, etc.: as he stands there, the breeze blows his long locks about his bare shoulders.

15. qualis, as fair as.—Nireus: Νιρεύς, ὁς κάλλιστος ἀνὴρ ὑπὸ Ἴλιον ἦλθεν | τῶν ἄλλων Δαναῶν μετ' ἀμύμονα Πηλεΐωνα, Il. II. 673. Cf. Epod. 15. 22.—aquosa: i.e. rich in springs (πολυπίδακος Ἰδης, Il. XIV. 157).

15 raptus: Ganymede, son of Laomedon, ὃς δὴ κάλλιστος γέμετο θνητῶν ἀνθρώπων (Il. XX. 233), carried off by the eagle of Jove to become cup-bearer to the gods. For this use of the participle, see Intr. 103.

XXI. M. Valerius Messala Corvinus, in whose honor this ode is written, had studied with Horace at Athens and fought with him at Philippi. He afterwards served with distinction under the triumphs, — under Antony, as long as he could do so with self-respect, and then under Octavian, on whose side he fought at Actium. He was consul in the year of that battle, and afterwards earned a triumph (B.C. 27) by his successes against the Aquitanians. From this time on he abstained as much as possible from participation in public affairs, and devoted himself especially to practice in the courts, where his eloquence, which, when he was still very young, had won Cicero's commendation (ad Brut. I. 15. 1, B.C. 43), gave him great eminence (S. I. 10. 29). He was distinguished also by wealth and high social position, and by a nobility of character which shone through his presence and address (quodammodo praeferens in dicendo nobilitatem suam, Quint. X. 1. 113). He was devoted to literature, and gathered about him a circle of writers, the most famous of whom was Tibullus. The subject of the ode is the praise of wine. The poet stands before the amphorae in the apotheca, selecting one to be opened on the occasion of a visit from Messala, and gives utterance to his reflections on the potencies for good or ill with which the jar has stood charged this many a year. — Metre, 176.

1. nata mecum: i.e. filled and stored the year I was born.—consule Manlio: L. Manlius Torquatus, cos. B.C. 65. Cf. Epod. 13. 6 tu vina Torquato move consule pressa meo.

2. tu . . . geris : Intr. 120.—querellas, sighs. It means doleful utterance of any sort, in opposition to the gaiety expressed by iocos.—geris : i.e. potentially, to be brought to pass when the jar is opened.

5. quocumque nomine, on whatever account (i.e. for whatever end); breaking off the unfinished list with a single comprehensive phrase, which we should introduce by 'in short' ; cf. I. 28. 15 n.—lectum Massicum, Massic vintage. lectum, referring properly to the grapes ('gathered') is here used for the whole process of producing wine ; cf. arat, 16. 26 n. For Massicum, see I. 1. 19 n.

6. moveri : sc. from its place in the apotheca ; cf. Epod. 13. 6. For the inf., see Intr. 101 e.—bono die : the choicest wines were reserved for choice occasions (cf.

I. 37. 5 n). The compliment to Corvinus is obvious.

7. descende : from the store-room, in the upper part of the house ; see 8. 11 n.

8. promere : depending on iubente.—languidiora : a quality acquired by long keeping ; cf. languescit, 16. 35 n. The wine here would be perhaps forty years old.

9. non ille : cf. non ego, I. 18. 11 n.—madet, is steeped ; i.e. is a philosopher through and through.

10. negleget horridus, be so rude as to slight.

Horace is speaking of the elder Cato ('the Censor') ; cf. priscis Catonibus, Ep. II. 2. 117. Cicero also represents him as fond of modica convivio (de Sen. 44 sqq.).

15. curas, grave thoughts.

16. iocoso Lyaeo, with the merry 'Releaser'; i.e. with wine, amid merriment. See I. 7. 22 n. There is nothing inconsistent in saying the wine-jar does these things 'with wine': the jar is personified.

18. viris: object of addis, for the position of which see Intr. 119 a.—cornua: the emblem of confidence and independence, like our 'holding up one's head'; cf. Ov. Am. III. 11. 3, 6 scilicet adserui iam me, fugique catenas, | . . . venerunt capiti cornua sera meo, and A. A. I. 239 tum pauper cornua sumit (an imitation of the present passage).

19. post te: cf. post vina, I. 18. 5; III. 7. 6.—iratos apices: Intr. 124.—trementi: transitive; Intr. 51 a.

20. apices: see I. 34. 14 n.

21. te: i.e. thy ministrations; very much as in vs. 19.—Liber: here the god himself; the favoring divinities whom the cadus serves will bless its work.

22. nodum: formed by the twining of their arms round one another; cf. 19. 17.—solvere: Intr. 101 b.—Gratiae: they stand for the charm of social converse, sparkling with wit, but ruled by courtesy, with nothing excessive or unseemly to mar its perfect enjoyment. Cf. 19. 16.

23. vivae: cf. vigiles, 8. 14.—producent: cf. S. I. 5. 70 prorsus iucunde cenam producimus illam.—lucernae: the personality of the divinities is, after all, half merged in the things they typify, — wine, love, gracious intercourse, — to which the lights are added as a fourth influence in prolonging the enjoyment.

XXII. A dedicatory poem, in which Horace consecrates the towering pine that stands by his country house to Diana, and vows an annual sacrifice. The invocation to the goddess has much in common with Catullus' hymn (c. 34), especially with these verses (9-16):

1. custos: so Neptune is sacri custos Tarenti, I. 28. 29; cf. Suet. Dom. 5 novam excitavit aedem in Capitolio Custodi Iovi.—nemorum (sc. custos): cf. I. 21. 5 sqq. In C. S. I she is silvarum potens; in Verg. A. XI. 557, nemorum cultrix. According to Servius (on Georg. III. 332) 'omnis quercus Iovi est consecrata, et omnis lucus Dianae.'

2. quae laborantis, etc.: cf. C. S. 13 sqq. Diana, in this capacity, was sometimes identified with Iuno Lucina; cf. Cat. l. l.; Cic. D. N. II. 68.—puellas: i.e. young women, at their first childbirth.

3. ter: see I. 28. 36 n.—vocata: cf. Ter. Ad. 487.—adimis leto: the opposite of dare leto; see 7. 17 n.

4. triformis: properly an epithet of Hecate, with whom Diana, owing to their many common attributes, was more or less confused; cf. Verg. A. IV. 511 tergeminamque Hecaten, tria virginis ora Dianae. The significance of the triple figure of Hecate has been variously explained in ancient and modern times; see Preller-Robert, Gr. Myth. I. 324.

5. imminens villae: a large tree, therefore, as we might suppose. — tua: predicate.

6. quam donem, one on which I may bestow; descriptive relative clause, defining the purport of tua esto. — per exactos annos, on the completion of each year; i.e. at each anniversary of the dedication. Cf. pleno anno, I. 8. 5 n, and, for the distributive force of per, II. 3. 6 n.—laetus: corresponding to the lubens of votive inscriptions; cf. Allen's Early Remnants, 69 n, 70, III. 3, 113.

7. obliquum ictum: a reminiscence of the wild-boar hunt in the Odyssey, where the boar wounds Ulysses, ἁκρίφης ἀλξας (XIX. 451); so Ovid M. VIII. 344 obliquo latrantes dissipat ictu.—meditantis, si ture placaris et horna fruge Laris avidaque porca, fecunda vitis nec sterilem seges robiginem aut dulces alumni pomifero grave tempus anno.

practicing. The description, as in 13. 4 sq. and IV. 2. 57 sqq., is a substitute for a more prosaic statement of the age of the victim,—a young boar whose tusks are just growing.

8. donem: the tree, by its dedication, becomes a sanctuary of the goddess, and, as such, the offering may be said to be bestowed upon it.

XXIII. A pure life and devout spirit needs no costly sacrifice to win the favor of heaven. To set forth this truth the poet represents himself as talking with a country woman,—a farmer's wife,—whose pious soul is troubled at the meagreness of the offerings which her narrow means allow her to make, and comforting her with the assurance that her prayers will be answered.—Metre, 176.

1. caelo: Intr. 53.—supinas: i.e. with the palms upward. This was the attitude assumed in prayer to the gods above; cf. Verg. A. III. 176; Liv. XXVI. 9. 7 (matronae) nixae genibus, supinas manus ad caelum ac deos tendentes, orantesque.—si . . . si: Intr. 116 h.

2. nascente luna: i.e. at the new moon. The offering was usually made, however, at least in the city, at the beginning of the calendar month; cf. Prop. V. 3. 53 raris adsueta kalendis | vix aperit clausos una puella Lares. See 19. 5 a.—Phidyle: Φειδύλη ('thrifty'; cf. φείδομαι); the name is apparently chosen to suit the character.

3. ture: cf. Tib. I. 3. 34 reddere menstrua tura Lari.—horna fruge: a bunch or wreath of the new grain. Cf. Tib. I. 10. 20 stabat in exigua ligneus aede deus. | Hic placatus erat seu quis libaverat uvam | seu dederat sanctae spicea sarta comae. For horna (a poetical word) cf. horna vina, Epod. 2. 47.

4. porca: cf. 17. 15 n, S. II. 3. 165.

5. nec, etc.: for the position of the subjects in this strophe, see Intr. 116 b.—pestilentem Africum: the Sirocco; see II. 14. 15, 16 nn.

6. fecunda, full-clustered.—sterilem: Intr. 125.

7. robiginem: the seriousness of this evil to the Italian farmer may be inferred from the fact that Robigo (or Robigus) was worshipped as a god, and a day (Robigalia, April 25) set apart for a formal service of propitiation; see Ovid Fast. IV. 901 sqq.—alumni: see 18. 4 n.

8. pomifero anno: i.e. autumn:

Nam quae nivali pascitur Algidō 10 devota quercus inter et ilices aut crescit Albanis in herbis victima pontificum securis cervice tinguet : te nihil attinet temptare multa caede bidentium rore deos fragilique myrto.

cf. annus hibernus, Epod. 2. 29, and see 8. 9 n. — grave, oppressive, sickly; cf. Liv. III. 6. 2 grave tempus et forte annus pestilens erat urbi agrisque, nec hominibus magis quam pecori; see also II. 14. 15 n; S. II. 6. 18 sq., Juv. 4. 56 letifero autumno.

9. nivali Algidō: cf. gelido Algidō, I. 21. 6 n. Here and on the Alban mount the college of pontiffs possessed pastures, in which victims were raised for the great public sacrifices. For the case of Algidō, see Intr. 69.

10. devota . . . victima: Intr. 120.—inter: Intr. 115 b.

13. tinguet: Intr. 79.—te nihil attinet, you have no occasion, it is not for you.

14. temptare, to beset.—bidentium: a technical word for animals full-grown for sacrifice (about two years old). They were so named from the two prominent incisors which displace the two front milk teeth on the lower jaw of the sheep at about that age (Hyginus ap. Gell. XVI. 6. 14; Serv. on Aen. IV. 57).

15. parvos: the position brings out the incongruity of multa caedes with the small effigies which she decks with her simple garlands. The Lares were small figures of wood or bronze, or of more precious metal if the means of the family permitted; cf. Tib. I. 10. 20 (quoted above); Petron. 29 Lares argentei; Juv. 8. 110. The typical form was that of a youth in a sleeveless tunic, girded high (succinctus, Pers. 5. 31), holding a drinking-horn aloft in his right hand and a bowl in his left. See Baumeister, pp. 77, 811. Their altar was the hearth, on (or beside) which they stood; cf. Epod. 2. 66 n, and Plaut. Aul. I sqq.—coronantem, whom you crown. This service was enjoined oftener than once a month; cf. Cato, R. R. 143. 2 (villica kalendis idibus nonis, festus dies cum erit, coronam in focum indat, per eosdemque dies Lari familiari pro copia supplicet; Plaut. Aul. 23 huic filia unast; ea mihi cotidie | aut tūre aut vino aut aliqui semper supplicat; | dat mihi coronas; Juv. 9. 137 o parvi nostrique Lares, quos tūre minuto | aut farre et tenui soleo exorare corona.—marino rore: in this order in Plin. XI. 38 and Col. IX. 4. 6. It is an aromatic shrub (rosemary), which was used in worship by people who could not afford incense.

16. deos: object of both temptare and coronantem; Intr. 76.—fragili, brittle; referring to the twigs used in the garland.—myrto: see I. 4. 9 n, and cf. I. 38. 5.

Immunis aram si tetigit manus, non sumptuosa blandior hostia,
 mollivit aversos Penatis
 20 farre pio et saliente mica.

17. immunis, guiltless, blameless. In this sense it is not found elsewhere, except with a genitive, as immunes caedis manus, Ov. Her. 14. 8. Many editors, therefore, reject this interpretation and render the word 'bringing no gift,' citing IV. 12. 23 and Ep. I. 14. 33. But in neither of these places does immunis mean simply 'bringing no gift': in IV. 12. 23 it means 'exempt from the obligation to contribute' (ἀποχρῶλος); in Ep. I. 14. 33, 'without being required to make presents.' In both cases it has its fundamental meaning, 'qui vacat a muneribus quae alii praestare debent' (Forcellini). From this meaning Orelli deduced its use here: the hand that comes to the altar 'immunis,' comes, not from any obligation to make an offering in atonement for sin, but purely as an expression of gratitude and piety, or to deprecate some undeserved calamity; immunis is then immunis piuculi, rather than immunis sceleris. At any rate, the meaning 'guiltless' appears to be required (as well as suggested) by the context. Innocence in the worshipper is the point on which the whole sentence turns. Under the other interpretation it is, no doubt, possible to get in this essential idea of innocence by restricting the application of the strophe to Phidyle, instead of taking it as the enunciation of a general truth: but this gives it only a subordinate place: the main thought is then 'bringing no gift' (for immunis is the emphatic word). And this, as a description of Phidyle, is in conflict both with vss. 3, 4, and with the last verse; for the mola salsa was regarded as an offering; cf. Plin. N. H. Praef. 11 dis lacte rustici multaeque gentes et mola tantum salsa litant qui non habent tura. But the language of the strophe is obscure, and its meaning much disputed.

18. sumptuosa hostia: instrumental abl. with the comparative, as in altior ruinis, 5. 40. The verse is commonly understood in a parenthetical and conditional sense, — 'it would gain nothing in persuasiveness by a costly offering.' But perhaps it is less harsh to take it as more direct, — 'without the aid of a costly victim to make it more persuasive.' This, of course, is only possible if we take immunis as 'guiltless.'

19. mollivit: Intr. 80. — aversos, unwilling; not 'hostile' (adversos), still less 'offended' (iratos), but needing to be melted to pity; cf. Epod. 10. 18. — Penatis: here not distinguished from the Lares; cf. Ov. Tr. I. 3. 43 illa etiam ante Lares passis adstrata capillis | contigit extinctos ore tremente focos, | multaque in adversos effudit verba Penates.

20. farre, etc.: a poetical paraphrase for mola salsa (cf. fruges salsae, Verg. A. II. 133), the mixture of crushed spelt and salt which was used in connection with all sacrifices; here it accompanies simple prayer. The ablatives are instrumental. — saliente: i.e. when thrown on the fire.

XXIV. In this ode Horace inveighs against the vice and corruption of the age with more than his wonted vigor. The root of the evil is the insatiable greed for wealth, which is deterred by no danger and scruples at no crime. Here is a chance for immortal fame! Who will seize it by mastering unbridled license, and putting it under the control of law? In place of futile complaints let us have punishment. But even laws will avail little against the evil, unless supported by a thorough-going reform in public sentiment. The ode is referred with some probability to the year 28 B.C. for the same reason that the sixth ode is assigned to that year (see introd. note to 6); but it may well have been earlier. It comes nearer than most of the odes of its class to the spirit of the sixteenth Epode. — Metre, 171.

1. intactis, etc.: the first sentence (vss. 1–8) consists of a concessive clause with licet (vss. 1–4), depending on a conditional sentence (vss. 5–8). — intactis: i.e. not yet reached by Roman conquest and plundered, as, for example, those of the rich provinces of Asia had been.

2. thesauris Arabum: cf. Arabum gazis, I. 29. 1. For the abl., see Intr. 75. — divitis Indiae: from very early times a thriving trade had been carried on between India and western Asia. The articles that found their way to Rome were for the most part of a very costly sort,—especially ivory, precious stones, silks, and fine cotton goods,—which naturally gave rise to a popular impression of great wealth in the land from which they came:

3. caementis: see I. 33 sqq. nn.

4. Tyrrhenum, etc.: i.e. though you line the whole coast of Italy with your seaside villas. — Apulicum: see Crit. App. and cf. 4. 10 n.

5. figit: Intr. 179.

6. summis verticibus: i.e. those of your palaces. The rich man in his luxurious mansions is as helpless in the face of his doom as the poorest beggar in his hut. The same thought is put in another way in II. 18. 18 sqq. and 29 sqq.; but there, as here, the figure is suggested by the building operations of the rich man himself. verticibus is probably ablative (Intr. 69). — Necessitas: cf. I. 35. 17 n.

7. clavos: the driving of the nail signifies unalterable doom (see I. 35. 18 n), here the doom of death, from which he can find no escape in his palaces, any more than in the speed of horses or triremes (I. 38 sqq.).

8. mortis laqueis: cf. OT. Psalms 18. 5.

9. campestres, of the steppes; put first to bring this feature of nomad life, which is expanded in the next verse, into clearer contrast with the palace-building Romans. For the epithet, cf. profugi Scythae, I. 35. 9; IV. 14. 42.

10. quorum: better taken with domos.—vagas, from place to place; proleptic.—rite, such is their custom; i.e. it is not exceptional, but the regular thing among them.

11. rigidi, rigorous; cf. Ep. I. 1. 17; II. 1. 25 rigidis Sabinis.—Getae: they occupied the plains between the Transylvanian Alps and the Danube (Wallachia).

12. immetata: not divided up for individual ownership.—liberas: i.e. common to all.

13. Cererem: Intr. 130.

14. annua: ablative. Horace here ascribes to the Getae the custom which Caesar records of the Suevi, B. G. IV. 1. In contrast with the avarice of Roman landowners, these simple communities raise only as much produce each year as is needed for their own sustenance, and the work of tillage can be done by a limited number of persons, whose places are taken (vicarius) at the end of the year by another squad on the same terms.

15. defunctum laboribus: cf. functum laboribus, II. 18. 38.

16. aequali sorte: abl. of manner.

17. illic, etc.: here begins the exposition of the thought in melius vivunt (9, 11): simple habits of life are conducive to virtuous living. Like Tacitus in the Germania, Horace invests his barbarians with something of the halo of a golden age, to emphasize the contrast with the vices of Rome. The whole force of the comparison, as in 6. 17 sqq., is directed against the women, their husbands and sons being reserved for treatment later in the ode.—matre carentibus, motherless (orbis); a favorite form of paraphrase with Horace; cf. 26. 10 n, I. 28. 1 n.

18. temperat, treats with forbearance; cf. Cic. Verr. II. 2. 4 superatis hostibus temperavit. For the proverbial severity of a no

 si quaeret pater urbium subscribi statuis, indomitam audeat

verca, see note on patruae, 12. 1.—innocens, keeping herself blameless; a part of the predicate.

19. nec dotata, etc., no wife with great dowry, etc.; i.e. there exists no such phenomenon at all among them.—regit virum: cf. Plaut. Men. 766 ita istacc solent quae virós subseruire | sibi postulant dote frétae, feroces; Aul. 532 sqq.; Martial. VIII. 12. If a marriage was dissolved at the instance of the husband, he was obliged to surrender the dowry, or the greater part of it,—a rule that gave to wealthy married women a large measure of independence.

20. nitido: cf. 19. 25 n and S. II. 1. 64.—fidit: i.e. for aid and comfort against her husband. With this verb dotata is not understood as part of the subject; rather fidit adultero is parallel to dotata regit.

21. magna: with dos.—parentium virtus: as a guaranty of pure blood and a wholesome moral training.

22. metuens, that shrinks from; cf. 19. 16 n, and metuit tangi, II. 10. It stands in contrast with fidit, above, as dos, etc., with dotata.—alterius: see 5. 34 n.

23. certo foedere: a loosely attached descriptive ablative, characterizing the castitas as an obligation mutually binding and never violated.

24. nefas: sc. est, parallel with est in vs. 21, illic being understood with both.—aut: see 12. 1 n. It follows the idea of prohibition in nefas.—pretium: cf. Juv. 13. 105 ille crucem sceleris pretium tulit, hic diadema.

25. quisquis volet . . . si quaeret: not different in sense from si quis volet . . . et quaeret. If any one wishes to secure immortal fame by putting away civil strife and bloodshed from the state, let him strike at the root of the evil in the rampant licentiousness of the times.—impias: see II. 1. 30 n.

26. civicam: see II. 1. 1 n.

27. si quaeret, etc.: i.e. if he seeks to have his name inscribed on the pedestals of statues in numerous cities, with the title 'Pater Urbis' or the like. Pater was a common term of honor for a public benefactor, as pater patriae, pater senatus, etc. (see II. 1. 50 n); and possibly Horace intended the word in this general sense here, so that urbium should be taken

28. subscribi: Intr. 94 c.

29. refrenare licentiam: cf. IV. 15. 9 sqq.

30. clarus: sc. futurus (and he will be). — post genitis: a paraphrase for posteris not found elsewhere. — quatenus, in as much as (so also S. I. 1. 64); an archaic use of the word (Festus, p. 258) revived by the Augustan poets, from whom it was received into later prose (e.g. Vell. II. 68. 4; Tac. Ann. III. 16. 5). It here introduces the reason of post genitis: the true benefactors of their race are not appreciated in their lifetime; cf. Ep. II. 1. 5-14. — heu nefas: cf. IV. 6. 17.

31. incolumem, in the living.

32. quaerimus: for requirimus (Intr. 129), in the sense of desideramus, we mourn. — invidi: this belongs with both verbs: the spirit which stones the prophets and that which builds their tombs are one and the same. The glory of the dead is used to disparage the living. Cf. Ep. II. 1. 88 sq.

33. quid, etc.: the reformer's work must be unpopular, because no gentle measures will do; he must attack the evil with pains and penalties. — tristes, dismal.

34. reciditur: cf. S. I. 3. 122 et magnis parva (sc. delicta) mine-ris | falce recisurum simili te. The metaphor of pruning, keeping back (re-) luxuriant growth, is appropriate here; cf. refrenare, above.

35. sine moribus vanae, which are, etc. These words express the general truth exemplified in the clauses that follow. In English we should be more likely to state it in a separate sentence: 'Laws with no moral sentiment behind them are futile; what good do they do (for example) if the passion for wealth has so completely taken the place of right principles in a man's mind that no hardship or peril can deter him from the pursuit of his object?' With leges sine moribus, cf. IV. 5. 22 mos et lex; Tac. Ger. 19 plus ibi boni mores valent quam alibi bonae leges.

37. pars: as in 3. 55. — inclusa, intrenched; in the same sense as domibus negata, I. 22. 22.

38. latus: sc. mundi: cf. I. 22 19.

40. mercatorem: a favorite type with Horace of restless activity: cf. I. 1. 16, S. I. 1. 6, Ep. I. 1. 45. — horrida callidi: Intr. 116 a. For the asyndeton in this sentence, cf. 18. 9 sqq.

42. magnum opprobrium, as a great, etc.; cf. S. II. 3. 91 sq. — pauperies: see I. 1. 18 n. — iubet, etc.: cf. Ep. I. 1. 46 per mare pauperiem fugiens, per saxa, per ignis.

43. quidvis: any and everything, without distinction (of right or wrong); cf. omne, 3. 52 n. — et facere et pati: cf. Livy II. 12. 9 et facere et pati fortia Romanum est.

44. virtutis viam: i.e. the path which Virtue prescribes, and which leads to her, as in Hes. Op. 289 τῆς δ' ἀρετῆς ἰδρῶτα θεοὶ προπά- νοιθεν ἔθικαν | ἀθάνατοι· μακρὸς δὲ καὶ ὀρθίος οἶμος ἐς αὐτήν. — deserit: deserere, depending on iubet, which Bentley wished to read, would be more strictly consistent; but the personification of pauperies with iubet is no more than a figure of speech; here it becomes vivid, and pauperies, before a mere abstraction, is invested with the qualities and actions of the pauper. The same thing occurs in paupertas impulit audax ut versus facerem, Ep. II. 2. 51. Cf. also indulgens sibi hydrops, II. 2. 13 n., and virtus temptat iter, III. 2. 21. — arduae: Intr. 124.

45. In an access of poetic fervor, which may remind us of Epode 16, Horace calls for a general sacrifice of the costly luxuries which are the source of so much evil: no change of heart is genuine which does not engender a contempt for these things. — in Capitolium: i.e. as an offering to Jove; see 30. 8 n. The reader will supply the missing verb for himself before reaching mittamus, so that the adaptation of the latter to the second proposition does no violence to the sense.

46. clamor et turba: i.e. a shouting crowd; Intr. 126 a. — vocat: i.e. such a reception awaits us. Horace imagines a procession of rich citizens marching to the Capitol, each carrying his valuables, with applauding throngs lining the way, as in a triumph.

48. gemmas et lapides: it is not clear that these stood for distinct classes of precious stones.

49. materiem: cf. Sal. Cat. 10 primo pecuniae, deinde imperi cupido crevit; ea quasi materies omnium malorum fuere, where quasi shows that Sallust was still conscious of the metaphor in materies (the 'stuff' of which these evils are made).

50. bene: i.e. sincerely.

51. eradenda, etc.: coming down to a more practical view of the problem, Horace urges that contempt for luxury be inculcated by a healthier moral and physical training of youth; cf. 2. 1 sqq., 6. 37 sqq.

52. elementa, the germs. — tenerae nimis: i.e. those which are now over-indulged must (instead) be moulded, etc.

57. seu . . . seu: for the use of these conjunctions, see I. 4. 12 n. — Graeco, for the contrast between the traditional Roman forms of exercise, such as hunting and riding (Romanis sollemne viris opus, Ep. I. 18. 49), which were valued as good training for a soldier (hence called militia), and the athletic sports imported from Greece, cf. S. II. 2. 9 sqq. The trochus is named with the pila and discus, Ep. II. 3. 379 sqq., among the 'arma' of the Campus (see I. 8. 10 n.). — iubeas, malis: sc. eum ludere. For the construction of the ablatives, cf. S. I. 5. 49 pilā ludere.

58. vetita legibus: Cicero mentions a condemnation for gambling in his time (Phil. 2. 56) and elsewhere classes aleatores with 'omnes impuri impudicique' (in Cat. 2. 23); but in Horace's day the law was obviously much neglected. Ovid speaks of treatises written to teach the game (Tr. II. 471 sqq.).

59. cum fallat, properet: the cum-clause here defines the character of the situation by an added picture; see Hale's Cum-Constructions, p. 191. In English we should rather begin a new sentence, Meanwhile, etc.—periura fides: see I. 5. 5 n.

60. consortem socium, his partner. In mercantile language sors is capital.—hospites: cf. perfidus hospitam, I. 15. 2 n.

61. pecuniam properet: cf. deproperare coronas, II. 7. 24 n.

62. scilicet, yes; introducing the poet's reflections on the picture he has just drawn: Wealth goes right on growing, in spite of morality and honor and everything else (improbae), but it is forever doomed to fail to satisfy its possessor; 'semper avarus eget' (Ep. I. 2. 56).—improbae, graceless.

64. curtae: proleptic, expressing the aspect which the property (rei) presents to its covetous owner.

XXV. This short ode is a tribute to Augustus, whose glory is heralded none the less effectively because it is mentioned only incidentally, as it were, in a poem which purports to be merely the prelude to a greater work. The ode is cast in dithyrambic form: the poet represents himself as hurried away by the irresistible power of Bacchus to the wilds, haunted of nymph and maenad, where, under the joyous inspiration of the god himself, he shall rise to the level of his lofty theme. Whether the ode was called forth by some particular occasion does not appear.—Metre, 171.

1. tui plenum: cf. pleno Bacchi pectore, II. 19. 6.

2. agor in: Intr. 119 a.

3. velox mente nova: he feels like a changed being, moved by swift impulses. These are characteristic of orgiastic possession; cf. Cat. 63. 19 mora tarda mente cedat, and the whole picture there portrayed.

4. antris: dative (Intr. 54).—'What caves shall hear me?' He is not thinking of an audience in the caves.—egregii: see I. 6. 11 n.—audiar: future; a question of fact, like quo rapis, etc., above.

5. aeternum: proleptic.—meditans, essaying in song. The word is used not only of silent composition, but of bursts of song, as audiar shows (cf. Verg. E. 6. 82 omnia quae Phoebus quondam meditante beatus | audiit Eurotas); yet enough of the idea of contemplation is still present to attach an infinitive to, and inserere is rather complementary (Intr. 94 f) than infinitive of purpose.

6. stellis inserere, etc.: i.e. to extol to heaven. For stellis, cf. arcis attigit igneas, 3. 10 n.

7. dicam: the subject of my song will be, etc.; see I. 6. 5 n.—insigne: cf. I. 12. 39 insigni camena.—recens, fresh; not hackneyed.

8. indictum, etc.: cf. Ep. I. 19. 32 non alio dictum prius ore.—non secus, etc.: the picture is that of a Thracian bacchante who has come upon a height (iugis) where a view of the whole valley of the Hebrus, with Rhodope beyond, bursts upon her, and stands gazing in rapture at the beautiful scene.

9. exsomis: because in the full flush of her frenzy; every nerve is alive. Sleep comes with the reaction from this excitement (cf. Cat. 63. 35 sq.).

11. pede barbaro lustratam: i.e. inhabited by a foreign people; she has strayed far away into a strange land.

12. ut: with non secus, instead of the usual ac, which would be harsh after ac in vs. 11; cf. Plaut. Aul. 22 pariter moratum ut pater avosque huius fuit; Plin. Ep. I. 20. 1 cui nihil aeque in causis agendis ut brevis placet.

13. ripas: used absolutely, as in I. 23 and IV. 2. 31.—vacuum, untenanted; repeating the idea implied in devio. Intr. 119 a.

14. mirari: see I. 4. 19 n.—Naiadum potens: cf. II. 19. 3.

15. valentium, etc.: the allusion is to the destruction of Pentheus by the bacchantes, who tore up by the roots the tree in which he sat (Eurip. Bacch. 1109). It is mentioned to recall the superhuman power which the inspiration of Bacchus confers.

16. vertere: for evertere; Intr. 129. For the mood, see Intr. 94 n

17. nil, etc.: my song shall be elevated both in matter and manner. — parvum: cf. 3. 72.

18. mortale: i.e. of mere human inspiration. — dulce, fascinating. — periculum: because the near presence of the god is overpowering. The same mingling of joy and fear is expressed II. 29. 5 sqq.

19. Leneae: supposed to mean 'god of the wine-press' (ληνός). — deum, a god.

20. cingentem, etc.: repeated in the suspected verse, IV. 8. 33, with the necessary change of cingentem to ornatus. Here, however, it is more natural to take cingentem with the subject of sequi, understood, — the poet.

XXVI. Our poet will have no more of love. He has acquitted himself in that field not without glory; now he will hang up his arms in Venus' shrine, for he has no longer any taste for her service. Only at the very end he lets a little word escape him which betrays the humorous aspect of the situation: it is Chloe's hard heart that is at the bottom of it all. — Metre, 176.

1. vixi: the perfect definite, implying 'it is all over now.' — puellis idoneus: i.e. capable of making himself agreeable to them. — nuper, till lately.

2. militavi: the figure is a common one; cf. IV. 1. 2; Ov. Am. I. 9. 1 militat omnis amans et habet sua castra Cupido.

4. hic paries, etc.: i.e. the side of the shrine on the right (as you looked at it) of the image of the goddess. It was customary to dedicate implements or other tokens of completed service; cf. Ep. I. 1. 4 Veranius (a gladiator) armis | Herculis ad postem fixis; S. I. 5. 65, where a former slave is asked donasset iamne catenam | ex voto Laribus.

5. laevum: there appears to be no special significance in the choice of this side. — marinae: as being sea-born and exercising power over the sea; cf. I. 3. 1 n; IV. 11. 15.

6. hic, hic: Intr. 116 d. — ponite: addressed to the slaves who carry the articles referred to; cf.

I. 19. 14. — lucida: expressing not their present condition, but their essential property.

7. funalia: used for going about at night, since the streets were not lighted. See Juv. 3. 282 sqq. — vectis: to pry open doors where admittance was refused: cf. Ter. Eun. 773 primum aedis expugnabo. . . . In medium huc agmen cum vecti, Donax! — arcus: unless this is the name of some implement for forcing doors, the text is probably corrupt. If we could imagine the lover going about armed with bow and arrows on such an expedition, it would still be difficult to see why he should threaten barred doors with them.

8. foribus: Intr. 58 a.

9. quae tenes Cyprum: cf. I. 3. 1, 30. 2, and for this use of teneo, III. 4. 62 n. — beatam: Cyprus was an island of great and varied resources; cf. I. 1. 13 n.

10. Memphin: Herodotus (II. 112) mentions a sanctuary ἐλενης 'Ἀφροδίτης there. — carentem, etc.: a poetical paraphrase for 'where it never snows'; cf. matre carentibus, 24. 17 n. — Sithonia: see I. 18. 9 n, and cf. Verg. E. 10. 66; Intr. 117.

11. regina: cf. I. 30. 1. — sublimi, uplifted,

12. semel, just once; cf. I. 24. 16 n.

XXVII. The story of Europa. The myth is treated on a plan similar to that of the eleventh ode. As a setting for his picture Horace has here, as there, constructed a situation: his imaginary friend Galatea is about to set out on a journey to the East; he reluctantly bids her farewell, with a prayer for good omens and friendly words of warning against the treachery of the sea, through all of which runs an undercurrent of unspoken protest at her incurring such risk; he thinks of her on the sea at night, with nothing but the waves about her and the stars overhead, and this recalls the lonely ride of Europa on the back of the bull. In dealing with the subject, as in the case of Hypermetra, he disposes of the familiar features of the story briefly (vss. 25-32, 73-76), or by allusion, and selects for lyrical treatment a single scene,—the remorse and despair of Europa when she is left alone on the shore of Crete.—Metre, 174.

1. impios: emphatic. The sense is, 'May all bad omens be spent in confounding the wicked: I will

- ducat et praegnans canis aut ab agro rava decurrens lupa Lanuvino fetaque volpes ;
 5 rumpat et serpens iter institutum, si per obliquum similis sagittae

 providus auspex, antequam stantis repetat paludes 10 imbrium divina avis imminetum, guard her whose safety I have at heart by calling up a good sign to anticipate and counteract whatever there may be of evil import.' With the idea, which we have here and in vss. 21 sqq., of diverting (rather than averting) ill by directing its force elsewhere, cf. the prayers in I. 28. 25 sqq. and Epod. 5. 53 sqq. — parrae: this bird is mentioned also by Plautus (Asin. 260) as an ominous fowl, and by Festus (p. 197) as classed with both oscines and alites (see vs. 11 n); but it has not been identified. For this reason the precise meaning of recinantis cannot be determined, but it probably expresses a droning repetition of the note; cf. Ep. I. 1. 55.

2. ducat, attend . . . on their way. — agro Lanuvino: Lanuvium was situated on a height, to the right of the Appian Way, beyond Aricia. Horace has in mind a journey to Greece or Asia, by the Appian Way to Brundisium and thence by sea; cf. vss. 19 sq. The uncertainties of so long a journey would invest such omens as are here mentioned with unspeakable terror in the mind of the average Roman, who was a very superstitious person.

3. rava: cf. Epod. 16. 33 ravos leones.

5. rumpat (sc. impiis): not simply 'interrupt' by frightening the horses, but break off, as institutum shows. The superstitious traveller would feel it necessary to go back and begin the journey anew, after due expiatory offerings.

6. per obliquum: modifying the idea of darting implied in similis sagittae, though grammatically attached to terrui.

7. mannos, ponies; the Celtic name of a Gallic breed of horses, small in size, fashionable for driving; cf. Epod. 4. 14, Ep. I. 7. 77. — ego: the emphasis falls on this word because the person contrasted with impious is not definitely expressed, but appears only as one in whom the poet is interested; as if we should say 'May all evil signs go to plague the wicked; for my friends I will pray, etc.' — cui: suggesting its antecedent in the same case. The future timebo makes the reference indefinite; but of course he means Galatea.

9. stantis, stagnant.

10. divina, prophetic; with the objective genitive, as Ep. II. 3. 218 divina futuri; Intr. 66 b. — avis: the crow (cornix); cf. 17. 12 n.

oscinem corvum prece suscitabo solis ab ortu.

Sis licet felix, ubicumque mavis, et memor nostri, Galatea, vivas, 15 teque nec laevus vetet ire picus nec vaga cornix.

Sed vides quanto trepidet tumultu pronus Orion? Ego quid sit ater

11. oscinem: an augural term, used of birds whose notes were observed in divination, in distinction from those called alites (cf. 3. 61) or praepetes (Verg. A. III. 361), whose flight was regarded as significant. All the birds mentioned in this ode, together with the owl (noctua) are mentioned by Festus (l. l.) as belonging to the first class; the vulture and the eagle are examples of the second (cf. Liv. I. 7. 1; Tac. Ann. II. 17. 2).

12. solis ab ortu: a favorable quarter; see below, vs. 15 n.

13. sis licet, etc.: after this general introduction, he addresses Galatea directly with parting words of good will and friendly warning. — sis: optative subjunctive, to which licet is joined paratactically to intimate that he interposes no objection (as 'providus auspex') to her going. For this use of licet, cf. Plaut. Rud. 139 med quidem hercle causa salvos sis licet; Ovid M. III. 405 sic amet ipse licet, sic non potiatur amato. It is akin to per me licet.

14. memor nostri: apparently a formula of parting; cf. Juv. 3. 318, vale nostri memor. For nostri, cf. 28. 9 n.

15. laevus, ill-boding. There is a confusion in the use of this word, owing to the fact that, whereas from its application to the left hand there naturally grew up about it the meaning of 'awkward, untoward, unlucky,' — the opposite of dexter (cf. dextro tempore, S. II. 1. 18, with tempore laevo, S. II. 4. 4), — in Roman augury it came to have just the opposite meaning, because, as the auspex sat facing south, the east, which was the favorable quarter (see above, vs. 12 n) was on his left. The same is true of sinister. The Roman poets constantly use both words in the sense of 'inauspicious,' either following the common as opposed to technical usage or, perhaps, under the influence of their Greek models; for in Greek divination δεξιὸς ὄρνις was a lucky sign, and ἀπιστερός unlucky.

16. cornix: see vs. 10 n, and cf. Verg. E. 9. 14 nisi me | ante sinistra cava monuisset ab ilice cornix.

17. trepidet: to the poet's vivid imagination, the constellation itself seems to tremble with the excitement of the storm which it brings.

18. pronus Orion: equivalent to deventus Orion, I. 28. 21 n. — ater: i.e. in the darkness of the storm (cf. II. 16. 2 n), but with the implication which attaches to the word; see I. 28. 13 n.

21. hostium: cf. Verg. G. III. 513 di meliora piis erroremque hostibus illum! and see vs. 1 n, above. — uxores puerique: those who are dear to the enemy, not one (Galatea) who is dear to us. — caecos motus: i.e. squalls, coming without warning; cf. caeca fata, II. 13. 16.

22. sentiant: cf. II. 7. 9 Philippos et celerem fugam | sensi. — orientis: unusual for surgentis, e.g. Verg. A. III. 481 surgentis Austros.

Horace represents Europa as having voluntarily taken her ride through the water; see vs. 42 n. — et, too. — Europe: the story is told by Ovid, M. II. 836 sqq., Fast. V. 605 sqq. — doloso credidit: cf. perfidis se credidit, 5. 33; Intr. 116 a.

26. latus: cf. II. 7. 18. — scatentem beluis: cf. I. 3. 18 n.

27. medias, all about her; she had come in medias fraudes. — fraudes, dangers; lit. 'pitfalls.' For the accusatives, see Intr. 51 a.

28. palluit audax, braved with blanched cheek. The oxymoron is the result of the substitution for some colorless word like vidit (cf. I. 3. 19) of one that paints the danger on her face.

29. nuper: emphatic, in con

31. praeter : Intr. 115 b.

33. quae simul, etc. : Horace follows a form of the myth, according to which the bull disappears, on landing in Crete, and Europa is left alone awhile till Jupiter returns in his proper shape to claim her as his bride. It is here that, with the reaction from the excitement of the ride, remorse sets in. — simul : see I. 4. 17 n. — centum oppidis : after the Homeric Κρήτην ἐκατόμπολιν (II. II. 649) ; cf. Epid. 9. 29.

34. pater : the word which comes first to her lips in her distress instantly reminds her that she has recklessly thrown away a father's love and protection, and she breaks off with bitter self-reproach, o relictum, etc. For the nominatives in exclamation, nomen pietasque, cf. Cic. Phil. 14. 31 (quoted 2. 13 n) and Ep. II. 3. 301. The accusative is usual.

35. filiae : defining genitive ; Gr. 214 f.

36. furore, mad folly.

37. unde quo : not in reference to place, but contrasting her present situation with that of yesterday. — una mors : cf. Prop. V. 4. 17 et satis una malae potuit mors esse puellae, | quae voluit flammās fallere, Vesta, tuas?

38. virginum, a maiden's ; the plural (used generically) makes it less direct, and so more natural. She feels now, in her defenseless situation, the full force and consequence of having broken through the restraints of filial duty and maidenly reserve, under the impulse of a temporary fascination (furore, 36). — culpae : dative ; for the meaning, see 6. 17 n. — vigilans : emphatic ; she cannot believe her senses ; it must be all a dream.

40. ludit imago : cf. Verg. A. I. 407 quid natum totiens crudelis tu quoque falsis | ludis imaginibus?

41. porta eburna : cf. Verg. A. VI. 893 sunt geminae somni portae, quarum altera fertur | cornea, qua veris facilis datur exitus umbris, | altera candenti perfecta nitens elephanto, | sed falsa ad caelum mittunt insomnia manes (an imitation of Odys. XIX. 562 sqq.).

45. nunc : emphatic; in contrast with the time when she wreathed his horns with flowers.

46. lacerare : with cornua, as vs. 71 shows.

47. enitar, I'd try with all my might; an expression of rage, tempered by consciousness of physical weakness. — modo : cf. 14. 1. — multum : Intr. 49.

49. impudens, etc. : in the swift fluctuations of her feelings, rage is succeeded by shame, mingled with fear of what may happen to her, — starvation, slavery, — and a desire, gradually shaping itself into a purpose, to end her life. It is as shameful for her now to live as it was to leave her home. Oh, if the lions would devour her ! Yes, that would be better than starving slowly and losing all her beauty. But why wait to starve ? The thought of her absent father spurs her to action. 'Let your own hand do it, ere you, a king's daughter, become the concubine of a foreign lord and the hated slave of his wife.'

50. Orcum moror, I put off death (lit., 'keep him waiting'); i.e. I ought to die, but shamelessly hold back.

51. si quis : here equivalent to quisquis; cf. Ep. I. 18. 57. — inter : Intr. 115 c. — errem : i.e. come upon them by chance; she has not yet reached the thought of taking her own life.

52. nuda, defenseless.

53. antequam, etc. : this is not mere vanity, but the outcropping of a deep-seated feeling of the ancients, based on the belief that one entered the underworld in the form in which he left life; see the descriptions in Aeneid VI., and cf. *Stat. 55. speciosa, (still) fair to see; not a strong word, like pulcher, but merely deprecating the ugliness of emaciation.

56. pascere: Intr. 94 c.

57. vilis, etc.: the thought of her father spurs her resolution. The words are not a quotation of what she imagines he would say, but she knows well what his stern sentence would be, and under its influence urges herself on to put an end to her shame.—vilis: and hence, as a princess, unfit to live.

59. bene te secuta, which, luckily, you have brought with you. The bitter irony of these words is enhanced by the double meaning given to them by the significance of the girdle as the emblem of maidenhood.

60. laedere, bruise; used, in the same spirit of bitter mockery, for the harsher elidere. As her resolution assumes fixed shape ('deliberata morte ferocior') she can jest with death; cf. te delectant and te crede, below.

62. saxa: those at the bottom of the cliffs (rupes).—procellae, the gale (that blows over the cliffs).

63. erile: apportioned by a mistress (era), a slave's.

64. carpere pensum: here of spinning an assigned portion of wool; cf. the picture in Prop. IV. 6. 15 tristis erat domus, et tristes sua pensa ministrae | carpebant, medio nebat et ipsa loco; Cat. 64. 310.

65. tradi: i.e. to be put at her mercy; cf. II. 4. 11 n.

66. paelex: and hence the especial object of her cruelty.

67. perfidum: see Intr. 48.—remisso, unstrung; his work was done.

mox, ubi lusit satis, 'Abstineto' 70 dixit 'irarum calidaeque rixae, cum tibi invisus laceranda reddet cornua taurus.

 75 disce fortunam : tua sectus orbis nomina ducet.'

XXVIII.

Festo quid potius die
 Neptuni faciam ? Prome reconditum,

69. lusit : sc. Venus. — abstineto : the second form of the imperative, here referring to a designated point of future time (cum reddet).

70. irarum, rixae : Intr. 67.

71. invisus laceranda, etc. : in mocking allusion to vss. 45 sqq.

73. uxor esse : for te uxorem esse ; Intr. 99 b. — invicti : suggesting, perhaps, the necessity of submission.

74. mitte : Intr. 129.

75. sectus orbis, a hemisphere. Horace follows those geographers who divided the world into two parts, Europe and Asia ; cf. Varro L. L. V. 31 ut omnis natura in caelum et terram divisa est, sic caeli regionibus terra in Asiam et Europam ; Plin. N. H. III. 5 (Europam) plerique merito non tertiam portionem fecere, verum aequam, in duas partes . . . universo orbe diviso.

76. nomina : Intr. 128. — ducet, will take ; lit. 'will draw' (sc. from you, implied in tua) ; cf. S. II. 1. 66 duxit ab oppressa meritum Carthagine nomen.

XXVIII. An ode for Neptune's day. This festival, the Neptunalia, occurred on the twenty-third of July, and was celebrated by the people in the open air, picnic fashion, on the banks of the Tiber or the seashore, with arbors (umbræ) to shelter them from the midsummer sun. Such, however, is not the celebration contemplated in the ode. It is past noon, and the poet, feeling in the mood for a carouse, bethinks himself that it is a holiday. 'Why not, then ? Come, Lyde, bring down a jar of that fine old Caecuban, and we will celebrate the day together.' Horace speaks, apparently, in the person of a country poet, and the thrifty Lyde keeps his house. We cannot define the picture more exactly, and it is not probable that Horace did so. — Metre, 171.

1. potius : sc. than that which has occurred to me. The answer to the question is implied in the order which he gives ; cf. II. 3. 9-16.

2. reconditum, hoarded ; cf. repositum. Caecubum, Epod. 9. 1 n. For the force of re-, cf. I. 10. 17 n.

Lyde, strenua Caecubum, munitaeque adhibe vim sapientiae.

5 Inclinare meridiem sentis et, veluti stet volucris dies, parcis deripere horreo cessantem Bibuli consulis amphoram.

Nos cantabimus invicem

10 Neptunum et viridis Nereidum comas;
tu curva recines lyra

Latonam et celeris spicula Cynthiae;

3. strenua: best taken, in an adverbial sense, with promē.—Caecubum: see I. 20. 9 n, 37. 5 n.

4. munitae, (your) well-entrenched; i.e. which you steadily maintain, against all temptations and distractions.—adhibe vim, give a shock to. The meaning is 'Be frivolous for once'; cf. dulce est desipere in loco, IV. 12. 28.

5. inclinare meridiem: as the whole vault of heaven was supposed to revolve with the sun ('vertitur interea caelum,' Verg. A. II. 250; cf. Lucr. V. 510), it was natural to think of it as erect or vertical when the sun is overhead, and to speak of the day (the bright hemisphere) or mid-day declining, as well as the sun itself; cf. Juv. 3. 316 sol inclinat; Tac. Ann. XII. 39. 2 inclinabat dies.

6. stet, stood still.—et: used here to connect contrasted statements (= et tamen); cf. Juv. 13. 91 hic putat esse deos et peierat.

7. deripere, to bring down in haste; the de- as in Epod. 5. 46 lunamque caelo deripit; cf. descende, 21. 7 n. For the infinitive, see Intr. 94 k.—horreo: here for the apotheca vinaria; see 8. 11 n, and, for the case, Intr. 70.

8. cessantem: simply reinforcing the idea already expressed in parcis deripere.—Bibuli: M. Calpurnius Bibulus, consul with Julius Caesar, B.C. 59. See II. 3. 8 n, and cf. III. 21. 1.

9. nos, I. Horace uses the plural of the personal pronoun in this sense only where the speaker (usually himself) is placed in direct contrast with some other person or persons, as here and I. 6. 5 and 17, Epod. 1. 5, S. I. 4. 41, 6. 18, Ep. I. 15. 25, 17. 5; or in such personal relation as is implied in the phrases nostri memor (III. 11. 51, 27. 14), meminit nostri (Ep. I. 3. 12), studio nostri (Ep. I. 13. 4), noris nos (S. I. 9. 7).—invicem: in reference to the subjects, not the singers.

10. viridis: the colors of the sea are attributed to the divinities that dwell there; cf. caerula mater (Thetis), Epod. 13. 16; Ov. M. XIII. 960 hanc ego (Glaucus) tum primum viridem ferrugine barbā | . . . et caerula braccia vidi.

11. curva lyra: cf. I. 10. 6.—recines, shall sing in response. There is a specimen of this sort of amoebean song in Verg. E. 3. 60 sqq. For the future, see Intr. 90.

12. Latonam, etc.: notice the parallelism to vs. 10; in each case

summo carmine quae Cnidon fulgentisque tenet Cycladas, et Paphum 15 iunctis visit oloribus;
 dicetur merita Nox quoque nenia.

XXIX.

Tyrrhena regum progenies, tibi non ante verso lene merum cado cum flore, Maecenas, rosarum et pressa tuis balanus capillis

one object of the verb is a divinity, the other some attribute of a divinity (comas, spicula). Cf. I. 21. 5-8 and 9-12. — Cynthiae: see I. 21. 2 n.

13. summo, at the close of; so Juv. 1. 5 summi libri. Cf. Ep. I. 1. 1 summa dicende camena. — quae, etc.: see I. 30. 1, III. 26. 9. The verb to be supplied (cantabitur or the like) is readily suggested by carmine and the preceding verbs.

14. fulgentis. see I. 14. 19 n. — tenet: cf. 4. 62 n. — Cycladas: Naxos in particular was devoted to the worship of Aphrodite. There is evidence also of her worship in Delos and Ceos, and it was, no doubt, widespread among all the islands in the range of Phoenician commerce.

15. iunctis oloribus: cf. IV. 1. 10, and, for the construction, Martis equis, 3. 16 n. — visit: see I. 4. 8 n.

16. dicetur: see I. 6. 5 n. — Nox: implying, like 19. 10, that the symposium is to be prolonged into the night. — nenia: here not a dirge, as in II. 1. 38, but a song of slow measure, sung low, a good-night song.

XXIX. The last place in the collection before the epilogue, which the poet reserves for himself and his muse alone, is given to Maecenas, — an arrangement which Horace afterwards repeated in the first book of the Epistles. An invitation to his patron to visit him in the country, presumably on his Sabine farm, is made the occasion of a discourse on Horace's favorite maxim, 'Carpe diem.' 'Here, in the middle of the dog days, you are cooping yourself up in the hot city, worried with cares of state and harrassing your soul over Scythians and Chinese. There may be too much of this. A wise providence has hidden the future from us. Only the past is securely ours; the present is for us to control and use; all else is beyond our power. Fortune is fickle: welcome what she brings, but let not our happiness wait on her favor.' The ode purports to have been written in July, and the allusions to the responsibilities of Maecenas point to B.C. 26 or 25, the two summers which Augustus spent in the West (see intr. note to Ode 14), as the probable date. — Metre, 176.

- 5 iamdudum apud me est : eripe te morae, fumum et opes strepitumque Romae.

1. Tyrrhena, etc.: see I. 1. 1 n.

2. verso, broached; lit. 'tipped,' in pouring the wine into the cra-tera. Cf. S. II. 8. 39. As the cadus contained about five gallons, it would ordinarily hold out for more than one occasion.—lene: coupled with generosum, Ep. I. 15. 18 sqq.; cf. languidiora vina, 21. 8 n.

3. flore, etc.: see II. 3. 13 n.

4. pressa tuis capillis: cf. II. 7. 20, and, for a burlesque on this sort of compliment, see Juv. 4. 68. — balanus: properly the nut, called 'ben nut' (myrobalanus, Plin. N. H. XII. 100), growing in Arabia and Egypt; here the fragrant oil pressed from the nut.

5. iamdudum, etc.: i.e. I have long been waiting for you; this then is a second and more urgent invitation. — morae, procrastination, which holds him, as it were, captive.

6. ne semper contempleris, so as not to go on gazing forever at; i.e. only looking at these beautiful places in the distance, and never coming to them. See vs. 10 n. — udum Tibur: so Ovid F. IV. 71 moenia Tiburis udi; cf. I. 7. 13 sq. — Aefulae: an old Latin hill-town (cf. declive) probably between Praeneste and Tibur. It was garrisoned on the approach of Hannibal by the Via Latina in B.C. 211 (Liv. XXVI. 9. 9).

8. Telegoni: son of Ulysses and Circe. Sent by the latter in search of his father, he came to Ithaca, where he was obliged to plunder the country for provisions. He was set upon by Ulysses and Telemachus, and in the contest that ensued unwittingly slew his father (Hygin. Fab. 127). — iuga: those of Tusculum, of which Telegonus was the reputed founder; cf. Epod. 1. 29 n.

9. fastidiosam, cloying; Intr. 125.

10. molem, massive structure, pile; cf. II. 15. 2. The splendid mansion which Maecenas built in his park on the Esquiline (see S. I. 8. 7 n) was furnished with a lofty tower, afterwards known as turris Maecenatiana, from which Nero is said to have watched the great fire (Suet. Nero 38). This 'alta domus' (Epod. 9. 3) commanded a view of the whole city and of the neighboring country as far as the Tusculan and Sabine hills (cf. vs. 6 sqq.).

11. mirari: cf. 25. 14, and see I. 4. 19 n; for the mood, Intr. 94 j. — beatae: see I. 4. 14 n, III. 26. 9.

12. fumum, etc.: a graphic composite picture, combining the striking features of the scene,—the splendid houses and temples (evidences of wealth) looming up in the smoky atmosphere, with Plerumque gratae divitibus vices, mundaеque parvo sub lare pauperum 15 cenae sine aulaeis et ostro sollicitam explicuere frontem.

 Iam clarus occultum Andromedae pater ostendit ignem, iam Procyon furit et stella vesani Leonis, 20 sole dies referente siccos ;

the ceaseless roar of the distant streets. — opes, splendor. — strepitum: cf. Ep. II. 2. 79 inter strepitus nocturnos atque diurnos (sc. urbis).

13. gratae (sc. sunt), etc.: cf. Lucr. III. 1057 haud ita vitam agerent ut nunc plerumque videmus | quid sibi quisque velit nescire et quaerere semper | commutare locum, quasi onus deponere possit ; | exit saepe foras magnis ex aedibus ille, | esse domi quem pertaesumst, subitoque revertit | . . . currit agens mannos ad villam praecipitanter, etc. — vices, change. The thought in this verse is simply of the fastidiosa copia, of change for the sake of change ; it grows out of what he has been saying. But close to this lies the thought of the cares that go with riches, and this brings him to the second point in his plea and the main theme of the ode,—the cares, not of riches (divitibus belongs to gratae only, and not to explicuere frontem), but those of which Maecenas permits himself to be the victim.

14. mundaе, of simple elegance. Horace himself defines this word (S. II. 2. 65) as the happy mean between pretentious show and slovenliness. Cf. Ep. II. 2. 199 pauperies immunda domus procul absit. — sub : see I. 5. 3 n. — lare : cf. I. 12. 44 n ; we may render it here by roof, which conveys for us the same idea of home shelter. — pauperum : a poor man's ; cf. virginum, 27. 38 n. For the meaning, see I. 1. 18 n.

15. aulaeis : a canopy suspended over the triclinium in fashionable houses, ostensibly to catch the dust from the ceiling ; see S. II. 8. 54, Verg. A. I. 697. — ostro : in the aulaea and in the upholstery of the couches.

16. explicuere : Intr. 80.

17. iam, etc. : this description of the dog days, — a time for rest, — paves the way to his protest against Maecenas' persistent devotion to public business. The constellations used to mark the hot season are Cassiopea, represented by Cepheus (on earth an Ethiopian king, husband of Cassiopea and father of Andromeda), rising July 9 ; Procyon ('quod sidus apud Romanos non habet nomen,' Plin. N. H. XVIII. 268), rising July 15, eleven days before the Dog Star (see I. 17. 17 n) ; and the Lion, whose brightest star, which we call Regulus ('regia in pectore leonis stella,' Plin. N. H. XVIII. 271), rises July 30, according to Pliny. — clarus : with ostendit ; cf. strenua, 28. 3 n. — occultum : sc. antea ; cf. quietos, vs. 40.

18. furit, vesani: cf. Ep. I. 10. 16 rabiem Canis et momenta Leonis, iam pastor umbras cum grege languido

19. stella: probably not used loosely for 'constellation' (as in Verg. G. I. 222), but for the conspicuous star Regulus (see vs. 17 n.).

20. siccus, of drouth.

21. iam: referring to the time of year, when the scene he paints may be witnessed any day.

22. rivum: cf. II. 5. 6 iuvencae . . . fluviis gravem solantis aestum.—fessus, wearily; cf. clarus, 17 n.—horridi: an attribute borrowed from the dumeta which he inhabits.

23. Silvani: see Epod. 2. 22 n.

24. taciturna: a part of the predicate; it is silent because there is no motion in the air.

25. tu civitatem: cf. II. 9. 9. The reference is perhaps to the recent settlement of the government, B.C. 27, many details of which had no doubt still to be worked out.

26. urbi: with times.

27. Seres: cf. I. 12. 56 n. There is a touch of irony in the mention of these remote peoples; the city cannot be in imminent peril.—regnata Cyro: a part of his empire; cf. II. 2. 17 n. For the construction, cf. regnata Phalantho, II. 6. 11, and see Intr. 51 e, 55.

28. Bactra: the remotest dependency of Parthia.—Tanais: i.e. the Scythians; cf. IV. 15. 24. The river stands for the country through which it flows; cf. II. 9. 21 Medumque flumen gentibus additum victis; II. 20. 20 n.—discors: another reason for feeling secure at Rome.

29. prudens deus: cf. I. 3. 21 n.—temporis: Intr. 76.

30. nocte premit: cf. I. 4. 16.

31. ultra fas: cf. scire nefas, I. 11. 1.

32. trepidat: see II. 11. 4 n.—memento: see I. 7. 17 n.

33. componere aequus: both words, in contrast with trepidat, express coolness and deliberation.—cetera: i.e. the future, for the past does not here come into consideration.

 nube polum pater occupato,

34. ritu: as in 14. 1; cf. S. II. 3. 268 tempestatis prope ritu mobilia. — medio alveo: rivers capable of producing such floods as are described in the next strophe are often, especially in mountainous countries, at other times quiet brooks, gliding along the middle of a broad channel. Cf. IV. 7. 3.

35. cum pace, peaceably (not 'peacefully'), expressing the disposition of the stream; cf. inritat, 41. The same personification appears in clamore and fera diluvies. — Etruscum: Intr. 117*a*, 176*b*.

36. adesos: from long lying in the channel.

37. raptas: with all three substantives.

38. una, along.

41. potens sui, independent, not subject to any other control; with especial reference, however, to the control of the passions. The man who is always taking thought for the morrow is the slave of desire and hence of fear; 'nam qui cupiet, metuet quoque; porro | qui metuens vivet, liber mihi non erit umquam' (Ep. I. 16. 65).

42. in diem, day by day; cf. S. II. 6. 47. Quotidie would be less suitable, because the idea is of one day added each time to the series of days.

43. dixisse: Intr. 81 b. — vixi: in a pregnant sense. The man who can say, at the close of each day, 'I have lived' is one who has got out of that day's life the satisfaction and enjoyment it could yield, in contrast with the man who neglects these in his anxiety to provide the means to 'live' in the future. Cf. Martial II. 90. 3 vivere quod propero pauper nec inutilis annis, | da veniam: properat vivere nemo satis; | differat hoc patrios optat qui vincere census; I. 15. 11 non est, crede mihi, sapientis dicere 'vivam'; sera nimis vita est crastina; vive hodie. The view of life here inculcated is the same as in I. 9. 13 sqq.

44. pater: cf. I. 2. 2 n. — occupato: the longer form of the imperative (3d pers.) is here used with concessive force.

45. sole: here for sunshine, as Verg. A. IX. 461 iam sole infuso (of the dawn); cf. its use for 'day,' IV. 2. 46. — puro: see 10. 8 n. —

45 vel sole puro : non tamen inritum quodcumque retro est efficiet, neque diffinget infectumque reddet quod fugiens semel hora vexit.'

Fortuna, saevo laeta negotio et 50 ludum insolentem ludere pertinax, transmutat incertos honores,
nunc mihi, nunc alii benigna.

Laudo manentem : si celeris quatit pennas, resigno quae dedit et mea inritum, diffinget, infectum : the distinction may be illustrated in this way: a deed of gift (for example) may be rendered void (inritum) before going into effect, by a subsequent deed, superseding it, or it may be modified by recasting (diffinget), or it may be destroyed and put out of existence (infectum); but if the gift has been received and enjoyed, then no power can do any of these things. So it is with the 'dona praesentis horae' (8. 27).

46. retro : i.e. past; with the same thought of a current of events as in hora vexit.

47. diffinget : cf. I. 35. 39.

48. semel : cf. I. 24. 16 n, C. S. 26.—vexit : sc. secum; cf. Verg. G. I. 461 quid vesper serus vehat. There is nothing in fugiens (fleeting, that which comes but does not stay; cf. 30. 5) to require us to take vexit in the sense of avexit. It is simply the experience, the enjoyment of 'the passing hour.'

50. ludum : as war is the ludus of Mars, I. 2. 37; cf. II. 1. 3. For ludum ludere, see Intr. 45 a.—insolentem, heartless; see I. 5. 8 n.—ludere : Intr. 101 b.

51. transmutat honores : cf. I. 34. 14 sqq.

54. pennas : a regular attribute of Fortuna; cf. I. 34. 15 n.—resigno, I surrender. In this sense the word is found in classical literature only here and Ep. I. 7. 34, but it must have been common in ordinary speech, as is evidenced by the corresponding use of its modern derivatives. It was a commercial word, having no reference to the breaking of seals (as it has in Ep. I. 7. 9 testamenta resignat), but probably derived from the use of signare instead of scribere (cf. Paul. ex Fest. 284), for making an entry in the account book; resignare would then be to make an entry opposite (on the credit side), balancing the former and thus cancelling the claim for which it stood; just as rescribere was used in the sense of repay, e.g. S. II. 3. 76, Ter. Ph. 922 argentum rursum iube rescribi. In fact Festus says: 'resignare' antiqui pro 'rescribere' ponebant ut adhuc 'subsignare' dicimus pro 'subscribere' (p. 281).—mea, my own (Intr. 116 b); in contrast with the uncertain tenure of all other so called possessions.

 60 ne Cypriae Tyriaeque merces addant avaro divitias mari :
 tunc me biremis praesidio scaphae tutum per Aegaeos tumultus aura feret geminusque Pollux.

55. me involvo : as with a cloak, — his one remaining possession. The metaphor is borrowed from Plato, in whose ideal state αἱ γυναῖκες ἀπερὴν ἀντὶ τῶν ἰσχυρίων ἀμφιέσονται (Rep. V. 457 A).

56. quaero : sc. as a bride, as is shown by sine dote, following probam, by which pauperies was at once personified.

57. meum, my way; a colloquial expression; cf. Plaut. Trin. 631 nēque meumst neque fācere dīdici; ib. 123 CA. Quid fēci? ME. Quod homo nēquam. CA. Non istūc meumst? — mugiat Africis, etc.: cf. I. 14. 5.

59. votis pacisci : a cynical, but not untruthful designation of the transaction; see I. 31. 1 n.

60. Cypriae Tyriaeque : Intr. 117 a.

61. avaro : cf. avidum mare, I. 28. 18.

62. tunc, in such a case. — biremis : here not 'bireme,' but two-oared, merely indicating, however, the size of the boat, — small enough to be rowed with two oars (duorum scalmorum navicula, Cic. de Or. I. 174). — scaphae : the boat carried or towed by a ship, like our life-boat or dory; cf.

Petron. 101 quomodo possumus egredi navi? . . . quin potius . . . per funem lapsi descendimus in scapham? It could be rigged with a sail, as here (aura feret). The meaning in these two strophes is the same as in the preceding: the ship and its rich freight are the gifts of Fortune; if the heavily-laden vessel is about to founder in the storm of adversity, he will not moan over his loss, but will take to the life-boat and cheerfully sail away: the essentials of happiness make a light and safe cargo.

63. Aegaeos tumultus : cf. II. 16. 2.

64. aura, etc.: i.e. the breeze (in contrast to Africis procellis) granted by the twin divinities, — the recompense of a more genuine piety. — geminus Pollux : for Castor and Pollux; so Ov. A. A. I. 746 geminus Castor, probably in the same sense. It was common to use one name for both, 'quia ambo licenter et Polluces et Castores vocantur' (Serv. on Verg. G. III. 89). Their temple at Rome was commonly known as aedes Castoris (Suet. Iul. 10) or Castorum (Plin. N. H. X. 121). For their protection of mariners, see I. 3. 2 n.

XXX.

Exegi monumentum aere perennius regalique situ pyramidum altius, quod non imber edax, non Aquilo impotens possit diruere aut innumerabilis

XXX. This ode was written as an epilogue, as I. 1 is the prologue, of the three books (see introd. note to I. 1). Each poem is carefully adapted in spirit and tone to the place it occupies. When Horace sat down to arrange his odes for publication, he was already well assured of his success as a lyric poet by the approbation of the limited but competent circle of readers who were acquainted with his work; and as the goodly collection grew under his hand, he might well feel a pardonable pride in his achievement. It meant for him, what his earlier successes might not have meant, lasting fame. He had completed the first considerable body of lyric poetry ever published in Latin; its place was assured, as its quality was unique, in the literature of Rome,—the literature of the eternal city, the metropolis of the world. It is not surprising that the closing poem is a song of triumph; and if it is characterized by a candor which our modern poets do not permit themselves, we must make allowance for difference of time and custom. That it did not offend the taste of Horace's countrymen, we may infer from the fact that he was imitated by other poets (cf. Propert. IV. 1. 35 and 57 sqq.; Ovid Am. I. 15. 41 sq., M. XV. 871 sqq.; Phaedr. IV. Epil. 5 sq.; Martial VIII. 3. 5 sqq.); and, knowing Horace, we may feel sure he had Greek precedent to fall back upon, if need be, as well as the example of Ennius in the well known epitaph (see II. 20. 21 n). — Metre, 169.

1. exegi, I have completed; so Ovid M. XV. 871 iamque opus exegi, quod nec Iovis ira nec ignis | nec poterit ferrum nec edax abolere vetustas. — monumentum: Horace's work was literally a monumentum in the wider sense of that word (cf. moneo), but he here calls it figuratively a monument, in our narrower sense, for the purpose of comparison. — aere: a common material for memorials, especially statues and inscribed tablets.

2. regali: i.e. magnificent; cf. II. 15. 1 n. — situ pyramidum: for 'the crumbling pyramids' (cf. Intr. 126 b), an intimation, like edax and impotens below, of the destructive forces to which material monuments are subject. Translate, 'the crumbling magnificence of,' etc., or the like. For this use of situs cf. Mart. VIII. 3. 5 et cum rupta situ Messalae saxa iacebunt, | atque cum Licini marmora pulvis erunt, | me tamen ora legent. — altius: the highest of them, the great pyramid of Ghizeh, was about 480 feet,—higher than any other monument known to the Romans.

3. quod, one that; descriptive relative clause. — impotens: cf. I. 37. 10 n, Epod. 16. 62. For the conjunctions in this clause, cf. II. 9. 1 n.

5. fuga: cf. fugaces anni, II. 14. 1; fugiens hora, III. 29. 48.

6. non omnis, etc.: cf. Ōv. Am. I. 15. 41 ergo etiam cum me supremus adederit ignis, | vivam, parsque mei multa superstes erit.—-que: cf. I. 27. 16 n.

7. Libitinam: i.e. the funeral pyre and the tomb; cf. S. II. 6. 19. By an edict of Servius Tullius a fee was to be paid, on the occasion of every death, at the temple of Venus Libitina, and there also the requisite implements for the funeral were to be obtained. Hence Libitina became synonymous with death, as Ep. II. 1. 49, but usually with more suggestion of the funeral rites than of death in the abstract; so that this clause is not a mere repetition of non omnis moriar.—usque: lit. 'on and on,' denoting an indefinite series of repetitions; cf. Ep. I. 10. 24; Cat. 5. 9. It modifies crescam (and hence the whole clause), but with nearer reference to postera, which does not mean 'of posterity,' but simply 'later.' The 'later praise' will be in every case greater than that which preceded it.

8. recens, ever fresh.—dum Capitolium, etc.: cf. 3. 42. The one thing unchangeable beyond all else to a Roman was his religious institutions, the head and centre of which was the worship of Jove, with Juno and Minerva, in their ancient temple on the Tarpeian hill (Capitolium). With this Horace joins, in the graphic sketch which he uses to express his meaning, the priestesses of Vesta, whose worship was equally significant of perpetuity; cf. 5. 11 sq. What procession is referred to we do not definitely know; but it must have been a stated—perhaps monthly—observance, sufficiently designated to Horace's readers by the features he mentions.

9. virgine, pontifex: these are taken by some to mean the chief Vestal (Virgo Maxima) and the Pontifex Maximus; but more probably they are used collectively (Intr. 127) for the Vestal virgins and the pontifices. The former marched in reverent silence (tacita), amid the hymns and chants which must have formed part of the ceremony. This clause is best taken with what follows, as the preceding statement is already provided with the notion of perpetuity in usque. Horace couches his prophecy in three utterances which are progressive in point of definiteness: the first is vague,—'I shall not wholly die'; the second explains this,—'my fame will survive and increase from age to age'; and finally he names the achievement for which men will praise him (dicar—deduxisse modos).

10. dicar, etc.: in accordance et qua pauper aquae Daunus agrestium regnavit populorum ex humili potens, princeps Aeolium carmen ad Italos

That I was the leader in transfer with the Latin preference for the personal construction (cf. videor mihi and the like), for 'It will be said that I.' We may translate, I shall be named as one who. — qua, etc.: best taken with dicar, and expressing the pride with which his birth-place will cherish his fame; but his motive in inserting this reference is much the same as in IV. 9. 2 longe sonantem natus ad Ausidum, and S. II. 1. 34. It grows, like the mention of other personal characteristics in Ep. I. 20. 20 sqq., out of the poet's desire to be to his readers something more than a mere name. — vio- lens: it is a mountain torrent in the part where Horace knew it best; cf. IV. 14. 25-28, S. I. 1. 58. — obstrepi: here used absolutely, but without losing the force of ob-, — 'fills one's ears with its roar'; cf. Liv. XXI. 56. 9 nilhil sensere, obstrepenste pluvia.

11. pauper aquae: cf. Epod. 3. 16 siticulosae Apuliae. For the genitive see Intr. 66 c. — Daunus: see I. 22. 14 n. — agrestium: even in Horace's time Apulia was still a farming and grazing country, with comparatively few towns; cf. 16. 26 n.

12. populorum, tribes. The genitive is commonly explained as an imitation of the Greek genitive after ἀρχω, βασιλεύω, and the like. But as no instance of this construction in Latin is cited until about two centuries after Horace wrote, and then only in a few provincial writers, who have the genitive with dominor, and as no such violent departure from the Latin idiom is found elsewhere in

Horace, it may be questioned whether this ready explanation is open to us. For populorum potens, on the other hand, we have a perfect parallel in 25. 14 Naiadum potens; and for the position of regnavit, in that of musa, II. 12. 13, of te, IV. 1. 19, of equitavit, IV. 4. 43, and many similar examples. — ex humili potens: this has been taken in agreement with the subject of dicar, as Horace speaks of potentes vates, IV. 8. 26, and contrasts, on occasion, his lowly birth with his subsequent eminence (II. 20. 5, Ep. I. 20. 20); but to use the term potens of himself, would have been, as Bentley rightly held, an unnecessarily offensive assumption. It is moreover out of place if applied to Horace, and disturbs the course of thought, which is centred on the one distinction which Horace felt to be forever his, — that of being the first to master the problem of Latin lyric verse. Grammatically also it goes more naturally with Daunus, who did, in fact, according to the legend, rise from the condition of a refugee from Illyricum to be king of his adopted country (Festus, p. 69). For the construction, cf. Cic. de Part. Or. 57 nilhil est tam miserabile quam ex beato miser. The whole clause then may be rendered: where poor in water Daunus reigned, o'er rustic tribes a lord from low estate, or the like.

13. princeps: a little more than primus; he was not merely first, but a leader, a pioneer. — Aeolium carmen: cf. I. 1. 34, 35 nn, II. 13. 24, IV. 3. 12. — Ita- los : here for 'Latin' ; cf. Italiae ruinis, 5. 39, res Italas (= res Romanas) Ep. II. 1. 2. Since Roman citizenship had been extended to all Italians, as the Latin language spread throughout the peninsula, the more comprehensive term came naturally to be used in place of the narrower one.

14. deduxisse, composed ; cf. S. II. 1. 4 mille die versus deduci posse ; Ov. M. I. 4, perpetuum deducite carmen. The figure is from spinning ; cf. Ep. II. 1. 225 tenui deducta poemata filo. — modos, rhythm ; the inherent musical quality of the language, its structure in reference to the various elements of rhythm, in much of which it differed from the Greek. To succeed in writing lyric poetry, he had to make it conform to these conditions. — sume super- biam : cf. pone superbiam, 10. 9. The muse is addressed as the divinity who has given him the power to achieve success (cf. IV. 3. 17 sqq.), and who therefore may be called upon both to take pride in his achievement and to crown him with the laurel of victory. The self-gratulation of the poem is skilfully softened by this recognition in the closing verses of dependence on an inspiration not the poet's own.

15. quaesitam meritis, well earned. — Delphica : cf. IV. 2. 9 laurea Apollinari. — volens, graciously ; a set formula in prayers, usually with propitius ; cf. C. S. 49 n ; Liv. I. 16. 3 precibus exposcunt uti volens propitius suam semper sospitet progeniem.

16. Melpomene : see I. 12. 2 n, IV. 3. 1.

For the facts relating to the composition and publication of the fourth book of the Odes, and the significance of its lack of a dedication, see Intr. 31, 32.

I. As if to show that he is still young at heart, as befits the lyric poet, Horace opens the new volume with an ode on love at fifty, and himself poses for the picture, as usual. He protests that he has no longer either fitness or inclination for the merry service of Venus, but the stealthy tear and the tongue-tied silence betray the unexpected passion. To offset the picture by a contrast, he pays a passing tribute to the gifts and accomplishments of his young friend Paullus Fabius Maximus. — Metre, 171.

1. intermissa: with bella. The word comes naturally to the front in a sentence the real purport of which is that the poet after a silence of many years has resumed his lyre; for the proper province of the lyre is the emotions, and above all others love; cf. I. 6. 10 and 17 sqq., II. 1. 37 sqq.

2. bella: for the figure, cf. vs. 16 and III. 26. 2 sq. — moves: cf. I. 15. 10 n; Verg. G. I. 509 hinc movet Euphrates, illinc Germania bellum. — parce: cf. II. 19. 7 sq. — precor: Intr. 116 d.

4. regno, sway; cf. regit, III. 9. 9. — Cinarae: alluded to elsewhere in terms which show that she was a real person, and that this was probably her real name. She was presumably a freed-woman, and had the characteristic faults of her class and condition of life, but she had a good heart and a genuine attachment for the poet; cf. Ep. I. 14. 33 quem scis immunem (empty-handed) Cinarae placuisse rapaci. She was now dead (cf. 13. 22 sq.), and there is a touch of tenderness in Horace's allusion to her (bonae). See Intr. 30.

5. mater, etc.: a reminiscence of I. 19; but the phrase is expanded by the insertion of the epithet dulcium, in designed contrast with saeva, expressing the 'bitter-sweet' of love.

6. circa lustra decem: for the omission of the pronoun (me) cf.

7. imperiis: better taken as dative with durum, which, in contrast with mollibus, expresses a species of incapacity (hardened, unresponsive); see Intr. 58 c, and cf. Cic. Arch. 19 durior ad haec studia, and S. I. 4. 8 durus componere versus, where durus denotes another kind of incapacity (Intr. 101 c).

8. revocant: the prefix implies that they may rightfully claim her presence; cf. repetantur, I. 9. 20 n.

9. tempestivius: in reference to the age of Paullus; cf. III. 19. 27 n.

10. Paulli Maximi: cos. B.C. 11, and hence probably about twenty years younger than Horace (i.e. approaching thirty at this time), and of about the same age as Ovid, who was his intimate friend (Pont. I. 2, II. 3). He belonged to one of the noblest families in Rome, and enjoyed the close confidence of Augustus, whose cousin he had married. His death in A.D. 14 preceded that of the emperor by a few months (Tac. Ann. I. 5. 2).—purpureis: the hue of divine beauty; cf. III. 3. 12 n.—ales, on the wings of, but referring to her chariot drawn by swans; cf. III. 28. 15, and for the ablative oloribus, cf. Martis equis, III. 3. 16 n.

11. comissabere, carry thy revels.

12. torrere: see Intr. 94 c.—iecur: cf. I. 13. 4 n.

13. et . . . et . . .: notice the cumulative force of the fivefold repetition, and cf. vs. 29 n.—decens: cf. I. 4. 6 n.

14. pro sollicitis, etc.: cf. II. 1. 13; Ov. Pont. I. 2. 118 (vox tua), | auxilio trepidis quae solet esse reis.—non tacitus: for the litotes, cf. I. 12. 21, IV. 9. 31.

15. centum: cf. II. 14. 26.—puer, a lad; see I. 9. 16 n.—artium, accomplishments.

16. signa, etc.: cf. bella, vs. 2 n. The grouping of words in this verse is at variance with Horace's usual manner, which would give us late militiae || signa feret tuae (cf. vss. 10, 12, 14, 22, 30, 32,

17. quandoque, whenever, but looking forward to only one occurrence, as in 2. 34.—potentior: sc. by the force of personal charm.

18. largi, lavish.—muneribus: better taken with potentior; see Intr. 75.—riserit: sc. in triumph.

19. Albanos lacus: the principal ones were Albanus and Nemoensis (Nemi), both near the Appian road. It is not known that Fabius had a country-seat in the neighborhood, and the ceremonial proposed is on a scale hardly in keeping with the idea of a private chapel. The poet appears to have in mind a public shrine, a new centre of the worship of Venus.

20. ponet, set up; see 8. 8 n.—marmoream, in marble; cf. S. II. 3. 183 aeneus ut stes.—trabe: used collectively (= trabibus, III. 2. 28; Intr. 127), and meaning the inside finish of the roof.—citrea, of African cedar. This tree grew to a great size on the slopes of Mt. Atlas, and was highly prized for its durability and the beauty of its veining and color. The Romans used it especially for the circular tops of dining tables (orbes), some of which were handed down through generations and brought enormous prices; see Plin. N. H. XIII. 91 sqq. It was known to the Greeks (θύρον or θύρα) from early times, and is mentioned by Theophrastus (Plin. N. H. XIII. 101) as the material of the timber work of ancient temples.

21. plurima, abundance of.

22. tura: cf. I. 19. 14, 30. 3.—lyra, tibia: instrumental ablative with delectabere.—Berecynthia: i.e. Phrygian; see I. 18. 13 n, III. 19. 19 n.

24. mixtis carminibus (strains): abl. abs. expressing manner; i.e. by a concert of those instruments, with the fistula, as in III. 19. 18 sqq. The recurrence of the final ā is perhaps intended to make the description more realistic.—non sine: see I. 23. 3 n.—fistula: see I. 17. 10 n.

25. illic: Intr. 116 h.—bis die: morning and evening.—pueri cum virginibus: for the employment of choirs of children in religious ceremonies, cf. I. 21 and intr. note to C. S. (p. 331).

Pindarum quisquis studet aemulari,
Iulle, ceratis ope Daedalea

II. In B.C. 16 the disturbed condition of the whole German frontier reached a crisis in the humiliating defeat of M. Lollius, the emperor's legate on the Rhine, in his effort to repel an incursion of the Sygambri and other German tribes, who had actually crossed the river and invaded Gaul. Augustus proceeded at once to the province, taking with him his stepson Tiberius; and although the Germans withdrew on the news of his approach, and gave hostages for their future good behaviour, he was occupied for three years in settling the affairs of the western provinces, and did not return to Rome until July 4, B.C. 13. It was during this interval (in B.C. 15) that he planned and carried out, through his two step-sons, the brilliant campaign against the restless Alpine tribes which is celebrated in Odes 4 and 14. The present ode was written during his absence, and most probably in the winter of B.C. 16-15; for it contains no mention of the Alpine victories, beside which the overawing of the Sygambri and their allies was an insignificant achievement. The occasion appears to have been a suggestion from Jullus Antonius that Horace should celebrate the exploits of Augustus, — not particularly those just reported, — in Pindaric odes. The poet replies with a fine eulogy of Pindar, and a warning: 'The man who ventures on such a flight is foredoomed to suffer a great fall. My gift is of a very different and much humbler sort. Yet we shall sing our song of Caesar, — you, with your more sonorous lyre, and I, too, if I shall compose anything worth the while, — when we join with the people in rejoicing and thanksgiving over his triumphant return.'

Jullus Antonius was a son of the triumvir Antonius and Fulvia, born B.C. 44. He was brought up by his stepmother, Octavia, and married her daughter Marcella; and he was treated with equal generosity by Augustus, who raised him to the highest offices of state, — the consulship in B.C. 10. He requited these benefits with the basest betrayal of confidence, and was put to death in B.C. 2 for adultery with the emperor's daughter Julia. He was evidently a man of literary tastes, and is said to have written an epic, Dio-medea, in twelve books, and some works in prose. — Metre, 174.

1. Pindarum: a poem such as Horace was invited to write would have been in the manner of Pindar, the great lyric poet of Thebes (B.C. 522-448) and the classical model for odes of personal victory and triumph. — aemulari, to emulate, i.e. to compose successfully in his style, but with no idea of rivalry.

2. Iulle: an old cognomen of the Julian gens, used as a praenomen; cf. Paullus (Fabius) Maximus, I. 10. Like Paullus it was sometimes written with a single l. It was the name of the mythical ancestor of the family, from which their gentile name Julius is formed, as vilicus from villa, milia from mille, etc. (Lachm. on Lucr. I. 313). Vergil, it appears, set the fashion of writing it as a trisyllable, with one l. — ceratis, wax-jointed. — ope Daedalea, by the hand of a Daedalus (the adjective here having its proper general force, unlike Herculeus I. 3. 36); i.e. such as Daedalus made for his son Icarus, with the result that the boy fell into the sea which thenceforth bore his name.

3. nititur, soars; cf. Verg. A. IV. 252 paribus nitens Cyllenius alis. — vitreo, crystal; cf. Verg. A. VII. 760 vitrea te Fucinus unda, | te liquidi flevire lacus, and see III. 13. 1 n, I. 17. 20 n. — daturus: Intr. 104 b.

5. monte: Intr. 70. — velut, quem: Intr. 114. — amnis: the comparison is a common one; cf. S. I. 10. 62 rapido ferventius amni ingenium; Cic. Acad. II. 119 veniet flumen orationis aureum fundens Aristoteles.

6. notas: cf. I. 2. 10.

7. fervet immensusque ruit, rushes along with measureless, seething flood. For the confusion of the poet with the river in the comparison, see Intr. 123. — profundo ore, deep-mouthed, i.e. gifted with deep and rich utterance, the 'beatissima rerum verborumque copia' which Quintilian (X. 1. 61) ascribes to him. For the expression cf. Ov. Pont. IV. 16. 5 magni Rabirius oris; S. I. 4. 43 os magna sonaturum (a requisite endowment of a genuine poet). os has nothing to do with the mouth of the river, where the phenomenon described in vs. 7 is seldom witnessed.

9. laurea Apollinari: cf. III. 30. 15. — donandus: the adjective use of the gerundive, expressing fitness or desert, is exceptionally frequent in this book; cf. audendum 45, laudande 47, loquenda 4. 68, socianda 9. 4, dicenda 9. 21, etc.

10. seu, etc.: a series of hypothetical clauses with donandus as their common apodosis (cf. moriture, seu, etc., II. 3. 4 n), conveying the general meaning that Pindar was successful in whatever kind of poetry he undertook. — nova: i.e. newly coined, referring particularly to new compounds. — dithyrambos: originally a species

 plorat et viris animumque moresque of choral song which grew up in connection with the worship of Dionysus and partook of the wild and tumultuous character of its origin. In its artistic form, which it owed to Arion (600 B.C.), it still retained, as the impassioned expression of strong enthusiasm, its earlier characteristics of unusual freedom of language (audacis) and disregard of strict metrical symmetry (numeris lege solutis).

11. verba devolvit . . . fertur: the figure of the river is still kept up.

13. deos canit: in his Hymns and Paeans.—reges: i.e. heroes (deorum sanguinem), as in S. I. 10. 42. The examples given are Theseus and Perithous (cf. I. 18. 8), and Bellerophon. The reference is to Pindar's Encomia.

15. cecidit: Intr. 116 g.

16. flamma Chimaerae: for 'the fiery Chimaera'; Intr. 126 b.

17. sive quos, etc.: i.e. in his Odes of Victory (Ἐπινίκια), still extant, in honor of those who won prizes at the great national games (Olympian, Pythian, Nemean, Isthmian). The Olympian festival (Elea) is put forward to represent all four, as boxing and racing

(vs. 18) stand for the various contests provided on each occasion (Intr. 117).

18. palma: see I. 1. 5 n.—caelestis (predicative acc. with quos): cf. evehit ad deos, I. 1. 6 n.—pugilemve equumve: in partitive apposition with quos. Cf. 3. 4, and (with this whole passage) Ep. II. 3. 83 musa dedit fidibus divos puerosque deorum | et pugilem victorem et equum certamine primum . . . referre. The steed is mentioned instead of his master,—here (with quos) at some sacrifice of logical connection,—as the real winner of the race.

19. dicit: see I. 6. 5 n.—signis, statues.

20. munere, a boon; cf. Ode 8, in which this thought is developed at length.

21. flebili sponsae, etc.: in his Eulogies (Ἐπῆνοι). This completes Horace's partial review of Pindar's work in lyric poetry.—flebili: here in an active sense; cf. I. 24. 9 and see II. 14. 6 n.—-ve: Intr. 114—raptum: more forcible than ereptum; Intr. 129.

22. For the elision of -que at the end of this and the next verse see Intr. 174 b.

aureos educit in astra nigroque nubium tractus : ego apis Matinae more modoque

grata carpentis thyma per laborem

Tiburis ripas operosa parvus carmina fingo.

23. aureos: proleptic, like aeternum, III. 25. 5. For the meaning, see I. 5. 9 n. — educit, etc.: i.e. exalts them in men's estimation and makes them immortal. — in astra: cf. stellis inserere, III. 25. 6 n. — nigro: cf. I. 24. 18 n.

24. invidet (i.e. rescues from) Orco: cf. 8. 28 sq.

25. Reverting to the subject of the opening verses and the figure of the first strophe, Horace concludes this introductory portion of the ode with a contrast between the strong poetic impulse which sustained Pindar in his lofty flight and his own humbler gift of artistic workmanship. — multa aura, a full, strong breeze. — Dircaeum: i.e. Theban, from the famous spring and brook Dirce, near the city. — cycnum: a stock metaphor, especially in Alexandrine literature; see II. 20, intr. note. For the prosody, cf. 3. 20 n.

27. apis, etc.: a frequent simile; cf. Ep. I. 3. 21, 19. 44; Plat. Ion 534 A λέγουσι γὰρ πρὸς ἡμᾶς οἱ ποιηταί, ὅτι . . . τὰ μέλη ἡμῖν φέρονσιν ὥσπερ αἱ μέλιτται; Arist. Birds 749. — Matinae: i.e. of my native Apulia; cf. I. 28. 3 n.

28. more modoque: one of those (often alliterative) phrases, common in all languages, in which two words, presenting slightly different aspects of the same thing, readily coalesce to form a fuller expression of a single idea; cf. 'might and main,' 'hearth and home,' 'safe and sound,' etc.; Intr. 131.

29. per laborem: more expressive than labore, per (= 'in the course of') suggesting prolonged toil; cf. the phrases per otium, per ludum et iocum, per iram (aliquid facere).

30. plurimum: with laborem. — circa nemus, etc.: Horace's own favorite haunts; but the details still apply to the bee; the comparison and its subject are purposely blended (Intr. 123).

31. Tiburis: limiting both nemus and ripas; Intr. 119 a. — ripas: sc. of the Anio and the brooks implied in uvidi; cf. I. 7. 14, III. 29. 6, IV. 3. 10. For this absolute use of ripa, cf. III. 25. 13. — operosa parvus: still keeping before our minds the 'little toiler' to whom he is comparing himself.

33. concines: standing first, with the emphasis of assurance (cf. I. 6. 1 n), to correct the impression given by the preceding strophes, that the praises of Augustus would not be sung. There is no antithesis between Horace and Antonius as to which should be the singer,—that would require tu to be expressed. There is a contrast between their methods of work, but it is subordinate to the main thought, which is contained in the two emphatic words, concines and Caesarem (Intr. 116 b); see intr. note.—maiore plectro (descriptive abl.; cf. II. 1. 40 n): as we might speak of a painter ‘wielding a larger brush,’ in contrast to a miniature painter. It means, therefore, not a greater poet, but one who works with a freer and bolder stroke, neglecting nicety of finish,—a description that might well apply to Antonius, whose training was in epic. For the plectrum, see I. 26. 11 n.

Concines maiore poeta plectro

34. quandoque: see I. 17 n.—trahet: in contrast with ferocis (Intr. 116 a); an appropriate verb, as implying their unwillingness to go (cf. Ep. II. 1. 191); but in fact the prisoners preceded the victor’s car; see I. 12. 54 n.

35. per, down; cf. Epod. 7. 8 n.—sacrum clivum: that part of the Sacra Via from the summit of the Velia down to the Forum. The name occurs only here and twice in Martial (I. 70. 5, IV. 78. 7).

36. fronde: the laurel wreath worn by the triumphator.—Sygambros: a German tribe, dwelling on the south of the Lippe. Their warlike spirit (cf. ferocis, 34; caede gaudentes, 14. 51) gave them the lead among their countrymen at this time, and their feat of routing a Roman army invested them in Roman eyes with exaggerated importance. They were subsequently removed to the left bank of the Rhine, and furnished auxiliaries to the Roman armies.

37. nihil: cf. nil, I. 12. 17 n; Ep. II. 1. 17 nil oriturum alias, nil ortum tale fatentes (sc. as Augustus).—maius meliusve: Intr. 131. Cf. Cic. Acad. I. 7 nec ullum . . . maius aut melius a dis datum munus homini.

38. boni, kind; cf. 5. 1.

39. nec dabunt: in such phrases the same verb is usually repeated, as II. 13. 20 rapuit rapietque, Ep. I. 2. 43 labitur et labetur, C. S. 2 colendi semper et culti, Ep. II. 1. 17 (above), etc.; but the variation here is softened by the separation of the words.—quamvis, etc.: i.e. though the golden age (tempus aureum, Epod. 16. 64, 65 n) should return.—redeant: i.e. change back into; cf. Ov. M. XIV. 766 (deus) in iuvenem rediit.

40. tempora, the world; literally ‘the generations,’ as in Ep.

Concines laetosque dies et urbis civitas omnis, dabimusque divis tura benignis.

II. 1. 130.—priscum: cf. Epod. 2. 2 n.

41. concines: Intr. 116 h.—laetos dies: a variation on festos dies.

42. ludum: for the more usual ludos.—super: with the abl. (see I. 9. 5 n), expressing the subject of rejoicing, as in III. 8. 17 super urbe curas, the subject of anxiety.—impetrato, vouchsafed to our prayers; cf. vs. 54 n.

43. fortis: cf. S. II. 1. 16.—forum litibus orbum: the third paraphrase in this strophe for a technical term (iustitium). For litibus, see Intr. 66 c, N. It is clear that when this ode was written, the return of Augustus in the near future, though no definite time had been set (cf. quandoque, vs. 34), was confidently anticipated, so that the manner of his reception was talked over by those in authority. His return was delayed long beyond their or his own expectation, as appears from 5. 3 sq., and his entry into the city was then made, by his own choice, unannounced and by night; the triumph which Horace and his friends anticipated never came off. The publicus ludus, however, took place.

45. loquar: less common than dico for poetical utterance, but cf. 15. 1.—audiendum: cf. donandus, vs. 9 n, and laudande, vs. 47.

46. bona pars, a liberal measure.—sol: i.e. day, the sun of each new day being, for poetical purposes, another sun; cf. C. S. 10, Epod. 2. 41 n.

47. recepto Caesare: see Intr. 105.

49. teque . . . dicemus, and on thy name . . . shall we call. The cry of the soldiers and people, as the triumphant pageant advanced, io triumphe, was regarded as a shout of greeting to the personified Triumphus, triumphe being vocative; cf. Epod. 9. 21 Io Triumphe, tu moraris aureos | currus et intactas boves? | Io Triumphe, nec Iugurthino parem | bello reportasti ducem, etc.

50. non semel: i.e. again and again (litotes).

51. civitas: in apposition with

Te decem tauri totidemque vaccae, me tener solvet vitulus, relictā 55 matre qui largis iuvenescit herbis in mea vota,
 fronte curvatos imitatus ignis tertium lunae referentis ortum, qua notam duxit niveus videri, 60 cetera fulvus.

the subject of dicemus; cf. aetas, I. 35. 35.

52. tura: cf. I. 22 n. Incense was burned on temporary altars on the streets as the procession passed.

53. te: emphatic, in anticipation of the comparison to be drawn between the two sacrifices. Each must make an offering according to his substance. Cf. II. 17. 30 sqq.

54. solvēt: sc. from the obligation of our vows, which the granting of our prayers has made binding.—relictā matre: i.e. weaned. The detailed description which follows is in Horace's favorite manner; see I. 2. 7 n. It serves here to heighten the contrast between the rich Antonius, who can send victims by the score to the altar, and the owner of a modest farm, who knows well every creature in his small herd; and to whom the sacrifice is therefore more of a personal matter; and it furnishes the ode, at the same time, with a pleasing close, drawing the reader's mind away from the stirring picture just described, to rest, in parting, on a quiet rural scene. Cf. the close of III. 5.

55. iuvenescit: bear in mind that iuventus is not precisely 'youth,' in our sense, but the prime of life.

56. in: i.e. with them in view, for their fulfilment.

57. curvatos: i.e. crescent.—ignis: cf. I. 12. 47.

58. tertium referentis ortum: i.e. on the third evening after the new moon. Cf. III. 29. 20, and see note on reducit, II. 10. 15.

59. qua (i.e. in fronte): qualifying niveus, which, to correspond with fulvus, is put as a characteristic of the animal, and not merely of the spot.—duxit, has got, has taken on; cf. Ov. M. III. 484 ut variis solet uva racemis | ducere purpureum nondum matura colorem.—niveus videri: Intr. 102.

60. cetera: Intr. 44.

III. The steady growth of Horace's reputation, culminating in the official recognition of his eminence in his appointment to write the Secular Hymn in B.C. 17, had the usual effect of success in silencing to a considerable degree the small critics, of whose attacks he complains occasionally in his earlier writings. He could now speak without either vanity or false modesty of the attainment of what in presenting to the public his first collection of odes he had held up as the summit of his aspiration. He speaks of it in the present poem in a spirit rather of gratitude than of boasting. His muse is here, at least, no mere creature of fancy or literary convention; she is to him 'a power, not himself,' but above him and working in him; and to her he renders all the praise for what he has done. There is a reminiscence of I. 1 in the contrast between the meditative life of the poet, seeking his inspiration in the seclusion of grove and stream, and the exciting pursuit of the great prizes of physical prowess, athletic victory for the Greek, triumph in war for the Roman. — Metre, 171.

1. Melpomene: cf. III. 30. 16, I. 12. 2 n. — semel: cf. I. 24. 16 n, C. S. 26.

2. nascentem, etc.: an idea borrowed originally perhaps from the Chaldean astrologers (see note on adspicit, II. 17. 17), but Horace found it in his Greek poets; cf. Hes. Theog. 81 δντινα τιμήσωσι Διὸς κοῦραι μέγαλοιοι (i.e. the Muses) | γαινόμενον τ' ἐσίδωσι διοτρεφέων βασιλῆων, | τῷ μὲν ἐπὶ γλώσση γλυκερὴν χέλουσιν ἑέρσην, | τοῦ δ' ἔπε' ἐκ στόματος ῥεῖ μελιχα.

3. labor: for the Greek πόνος, κάματος, often applied by Pindar to these struggles. — Isthmius: cf. Olympico, I. 1. 3 n; Elea, IV. 2. 17 n; Intr. 117.

4. pugilem, equus: see 2. 18 n.

5. ducet, draw; sc. in the race. — Achaico: i.e. Greek (in contrast with the Roman type of triumph next presented).

6. victorem, to victory; proleptic, like pugilem. — res bellica: a paraphrase for bellum (like res ludicra, Ep. II. 1. 180, for the drama), but more comprehensive, — the business of war with all its vicissitudes, the fortunes of war. — Deliis: i.e. of laurel, so called as sacred to Apollo; cf. Delphica lauro, III. 30. 15; laurea Apollinari, IV. 2. 9. For the practice, cf. Ov. Tr. IV. 2. 51 tempora Phoebea lauro cingetur, 'Io' que | miles 'Io' magna voce 'Triumpho' canet.

8. quod regum, etc.: in accordance with the Roman traditional

- ornatum foliis ducem, quod regum tumidas contuderit minas,
 ostendet Capitolio ;
 10 sed quae Tibur aquae fertile praefluunt et spissae nemorum comae fingent Aeolio carmine nobilem.
 Romae, principis urbium, et iam dente minus mordeor invido.

 O testudinis aureae dulcem quae strepitum, Pieri, temperas, o mutis quoque piscibus 20 donatura cycni, si libeat, sonum,

idea that their mission was to extend the blessings of peace and good government; cf. C. S. 51 n. — contuderit, crushed to earth; carrying out the figure in tumidas. — minas: cf. II. 12. 11 ductaque per vias | regum colla minacium.

9. Capitolio: Intr. 69. The triumphal pageant culminated in a sacrifice to Jupiter by the triumphator on the Capitol.

10. sed quae Tibur, etc.: cf. I. 1. 29 n. The environs of Tibur are put as a type of beautiful natural scenery in general (Intr. 117), but serve at the same time to prepare us for the transition to Horace's own case (cf. 2. 30 sq.). — aquae: cf. I. 7. 13 sq. — praefluunt: for the more common praeterfluunt, as in 14. 26.

11. comae: cf. I. 21. 5 n.

12. Aeolio carmine: see III. 30. 13 n.

13. The enunciation of the foregoing general truth has paved the way for Horace's own experience, which illustrates it. — Romae: the city is personified. — principis, queen; cf. Ep. I. 7. 44 regia Roma.

14. dignatur ponere me, deems me worthy a place. — suboles, the children, i.e. the Roman nation. — inter vatum choros: cf. I. 1. 35 n.

16. iam minus, less and less. — dente invido: Intr. 124; cf. Cic. Balb. 57 more hominum invident, . . . non illo inimico, sed hoc malo dente carpunt; Epod. 6. 15 n.

17. testudinis: cf. I. 10. 6 n. — aureae: cf. I. 5. 9 n; aureo plectro, II. 13. 26 n; Pind. Pyth. 1. 1 χρυσέα φόρμιγξ, Ἀπόλλωνος καὶ Ἰσπλοκάμων σύνδικον Μοισᾶν κτέανον.

18. Pieri: see note on Haemo, I. 12. 6. — temperas, dost modulate.

19. quoque, even, as in Ep. II. 2. 36; an uncommon use of the word.

20. donatura: Intr. 104 c. — cycni: with the penult short; in 2. 25 it is long.

totum muneris hoc tui est,

 Romanae fidicen lyrae ;
 quod spiro et placeo, si placeo, tuum est.

IV.

Qualem ministrum fulminis alitem,

21. muneris: cf. 2. 20 n; 10. 1.
 — tui est: to be read tui est; see
 I. 3. 37 n.

22. monstror, etc.: a sort of public recognition often alluded to by Greek and Roman writers, in itself of ambiguous significance (cf. Ov. Am. III. 6. 77) and needing the specification of vs. 23; cf.
 Lucian, Herod. 2 εἰ ποῦ γε φανεῖν μόνον, ἐδείκνυτο ἂν τῷ δακτύλῳ, Οὗτος ἐκεῖνος Ἡρόδοτος ἐστίν . . . ὁ τὰς νίκας ἡμῶν ὑμνήσας.

23. Romanae fidicen lyrae,
 as minstrel, etc.; cf. Ep. I. 19. 32 hunc (sc. Alcaeum) ego Latinus volgavi fidicen. The title contains the same meaning as Aeolium
carmen ad Italos deduxisse modos, III. 30. 13; the claim there made is now publicly recognized.

24. quod spiro, etc.: i.e. my inspiration (spiritus, II. 16. 38, IV.
 6. 29) and such success as I win.
 The clause is the subject of est.
 — tuum est (see vs. 21 n): i.e. is thy achievement, not mine; the praise belongs to thee.

IV. In the spring of B.C. 15, while Augustus was in Gaul (see intr. note to Ode 2), Drusus, the younger of his step-sons, then twenty-three years old, led an army up the Adige and defeated the united forces of the Raetians and Vindelicians near Tridentum (Trent). The professed object of the expedition was to put a stop to the predatory raids of the mountain tribes into the Po valley.

 To complete the work, Drusus crossed the Brenner pass and attacked the Preuni and Genauni in the valley of the Inn, while his brother Tiberius invaded the country from the west, coming from Gaul by way of the Rhine and Lake Constance. By this combined movement, the Romans crushed out all resistance. They scoured the valleys of eastern Switzerland and the Tyrol, driving the mountaineers from their strongholds, and doing the work of subjugation so thoroughly, that this whole mountain region (the Raetian Alps), with the country of the Vindelicians, extending northward to the Danube, was added to the empire (as the province of Raetia) by this single campaign.

The celebration of this brilliant exploit, the glory of which the emperor shared with the young conquerors, was a kind of task for which Horace had often declared his unfitness (e.g. in S. II.
 1. 12 sqq., and, only recently, in Ode 2); and he undertook it, Suetonius says, in deference to the express wish of Augustus. The present ode is concerned only with the first victory of Drusus, in the Tridentine Alps; and we must suppose that Horace wrote it soon cui rex deorum regnum in avis vagas permisit expertus fidelem Iuppiter in Ganymede flavo, 5 olim iuventas et patrius vigor nido laborum propulit inscium, vernique iam nimbis remotis insolitos docuere nisus

after that event, before the news of the equally brilliant and much more important successes of the two brothers later in the season had reached Rome. These form the subject of Ode 14, written subsequently. Following the example of Pindar, Horace devotes the smaller part of his ode to the exploit it celebrates, and takes his main theme from the heroic age of Rome. Nothing could have been invented more suitable to his purpose than the dramatic episode of the fight on the Metaurus (B.C. 207), in which the most conspicuous part was played by a Nero, and the other chief actor was a Livius. The transition from the praises of Drusus to the glorification of his ancestors is skilfully effected by an analysis of his excellence, in which the honors are evenly divided between heredity and good home training, for the latter of which he was indebted to Augustus. — Metre, 176.

1-16. The subject of the ode is introduced by an elaborate simile in two parts, the first designed to picture to us the impetuous valor of the young hero, the other the terror his appearance inspired in the enemy.

1. ministrium fulminis: appositional attribute (κραυνοφόρος) of alitem (Intr. 126c). So in Ovid M. XII. 56c the eagle is volucris quae fulmina curvis ferre solet pedibus, and in Verg. A. V. 255, Iovis armiger.

2. rex . . . regnum . . .: notice the antithesis: the king of heaven has made his servant a king. — regnum permisit: cf. S. I. 3. 123. — in: cf. III. 1. 5 n.

3. expertus (sc. eum) fidelem, having proved his loyalty; cf. comitem abnegat, I. 35. 22 n.

4. in, in the case of. — Ganymede: see III. 20. 16 n. — flavo, fair-haired (ξανθός); see note on Pyrrha I. 5. 3.

5. olim, one day. Originally an adverbial form of ille (ille), meaning 'at that time' (i.e. not at this time), olim came to be applied in a vague way to any action not present, whether past ('once,' 'once upon a time'), — its commoner use, — or future, as S. II. 5. 27 si res certabitur olim ('sometime,' 'ever'); and hence, by an easy step, to an action cited as the type of a class and which may therefore occur at any time, either with the present tense, as S. I. 1. 25 pueris olim dant crustula blandi doctores ('sometimes'), or with the 'gnomic' perfect, as here. Cf. the use of ille itself with such a perfect, Verg. A. XI. 809.

6. nido: Intr. 70. — laborum, toil and struggle; cf. 3. 3 n; for the case, Intr. 66 b. — propulit, etc.: Intr. 80.

7. verni: i.e. soft, gentle. Horventi paventem, mox in ovilia 10 demisit hostem vividus impetus, nunc in reluctantis dracones egit amor dapis atque pugnae ; qualemve laetis caprea pascuis intenta fulvae matris ab ubere 15 iam lacte depulsum leonem dente novo peritura vidit :

ace's ornithology is at fault here, as the young eagles are not sufficiently grown to fly till late summer or autumn. — iam . . . mox . . . nunc : marking three stages in the growth of the eaglet's strength and courage, — his first timid ventures in flying, his attack upon an unresisting prey, and finally his entering with zest into a fight with a dangerous foe. — nimbis, storm-clouds (of winter).

11. dracones, snakes. The Greek name is perhaps a reminiscence of the description in Il. XII. 200 sqq. (cf. Verg. A. XI. 751 sqq.).

13. qualemve : while the case shows that Drusus is compared to the lion, the design of this comparison is to bring out the other side of the picture, and therefore the roe is made more prominent. The student should use his ingenuity to render accurately these shades of meaning in good English. — laetis, glad, i.e. luxuriant ; the word in this connection had almost ceased to be metaphorical ('laetas segetes' etiam rustici dicunt Cic. de Or. III. 155). — pascuis intenta : the point to be brought out is the helpless surprise of the victim.

14. fulvae : a common epithet of the lion, as Verg. A. II. 722, IV. 159, VIII. 552, etc. — matris ab ubere, etc. : a difficult passage, and not improbably corrupt, as iam seems hardly in keeping with the point of the comparison, which would rather require vix or nuper. Some editors have taken refuge in an interpretation which refers fulvae matris ab ubere (depending on a verbal idea contained in pascuis intenta, which is held to imply the direction of the attention away from something else) to the roe and lacte depulsum to the lion. But, to say nothing of the feebleness of applying the same description to the two contrasted animals, it is not probable that Horace gratuitously weakened his comparison by representing the enemies of Drusus as inexperienced and naturally timid. Some have taken ubere as an adjective, and this would be appropriate enough, as implying that the lion, though young, was richly nurtured by a vigorous mother ; but as ab ubere depulsus, as well as (α) lacte depulsus, is a technical phrase (e.g. Verg. G. III. 187, E. 7. 15), this explanation appears to be excluded. If the text is correct, we shall have to take lacte depulsum as used to express a single idea (weaned), to which matris ab ubere is attached to give an additional detail to the picture.

16. peritura : Intr. 104 b. With vidit it has something of the same videre Raetis bella sub Alpibus Drusum gerentem Vindelici (quibus mos unde deductus per omne 20 tempus Amazonia securi force as Vergil's sensit medios delapsus in hostem (A. II. 377), i.e. the roe becomes aware of the lion's presence and of its own doom at the same moment; cf. also Ov. M. IX. 545 superata fateri cogor.

17. videre: the epanastrophe in the absence of talem, marks the beginning of the apodosis.—Raetis: for Raeticis (Intr. 65). The epithet is sufficient, in Horace's suggestive manner, to indicate the participation of the Raetians in the conflict. The Vindelici were evidently more prominent in people's minds at Rome, probably because they were more aggressive, having advanced beyond their own borders, and were a new enemy, while the strongholds and the raids of the Raetians were a familiar story.—bella: Intr. 128.

18. Drusum: younger son of Ti. Claudius Nero and Livia, but born after his mother's marriage to Augustus. Of singularly winning nature, he was a favorite with Augustus and with the people, who hoped he would be the emperor's successor. But he died in his thirtieth year (B.C. 9), from the effects of a fall from his horse, while engaged in his third campaign in Germany. He was the father of the equally popular Germanicus and of the emperor Claudius.—quibus, their; cf. tibi, III. 18. 10 n. The interrogative is unde, and the gist of the question is contained, as often, in the dependent word (deductus),—whence the custom was derived which arms, etc.; cf. S. I. 6. 12 Valeri, unde Tarquinius pulsus fugit. This ill-timed digression could be removed from the text without detriment to the metre, and one would gladly blot it out as unworthy of Horace's taste, were it not even more difficult to believe it the work of a forger. If Horace wrote it, we may suppose his object was, in introducing the battle-axe of the Vindelici, to make use of the anticipated astonishment of the reader at finding this Amazonian weapon in the hands of Alpine barbarians, to give his narrative something of the rush of the unstemmed torrent of Pindaric utterance which he describes in Ode 2, — as if the course of thought were: 'whose right hand wields the Amazonian battle-axe, — Where, you will exclaim, did they get that custom, after a thousand years? But I cannot stop for the question now; I must hurry on; there are some things it is not given us to know in this world.' Unfortunately the last expression has the appearance of sarcasm, as if Horace had interrupted his fine tribute to the prince and the emperor to ridicule some antiquarian who had attempted to solve the question; and some have supposed he was guilty even of this breach of good manners.

19. per omne tempus: i.e. from the remotest antiquity to the present day; modifying deductus.

20. securi: for the shape of it see Baumeister Denkmäler I. pp. 60, 63.

21. obarmet: found only here in Latin literature of the classical period. The prefix has the same force as in obsero, obduro, etc.—quaerere: Intr. 94*j*.

22. nec scire, etc.: i.e. there are some things Heaven does not intend us to know; cf. III. 29. 29 sgg.—sed: resuming the narrative after the digression.—diu lateque victrices: probably referring to a raid which preceded the battle with Drusus.

24. consiliis, strategy.—revictae, beaten in their turn, re-expressing the reversal of the tide of victory.

25. sensere: emphatic (Intr. 116*b*); they learned by experience (in their own persons); cf. II. 7. 10.—quid posset: Intr. 47. This and the two following strophes are the poet's tribute of praise to Augustus for his contribution to the result achieved, before proceeding to his main theme, in which Augustus has no part.—mens . . . indoles, mind . . . character.—rite nutrita: for the order see Intr. 120. The words rite, faustis, and penetralibus, with their religious associations, lend a suggestion of sacredness to the home life to which they refer.

26. sub penetralibus: cf. sub lare, III. 29. 14 n.

27. paternus in pueros animus: cf. II. 2. 6 n.

28. Nerones: Drusus and his elder brother Tiberius (Claudius Nero), afterwards emperor. As their father died soon after the divorce of their mother and her marriage to Octavian (B.C. 38), they were brought up in the house of the latter. For pueros, see I. 9. 16 n.

29. fortes, etc.: this strophe is to a certain degree concessive: heredity is all-essential, but training is no less so. Hence the emphasis on est (Intr. 116*g*),—there is (undoubtedly).—fortibus et bonis (ablative): a frequent formula of commendation; cf. Ep. I. 9. 13 scribe tui gregis hunc et fortem crede bonumque; Cic. Fam. V. 19. 1 quod omnes fortes ac boni viri facere debent.

31. virtus, excellence.—imbellem feroces: Intr. 116*a*.

33. doctrina sed: Intr. 114. For the emphatic positions of the important words in this strophe, see Intr. 116*b*. For the sentiment cf. Cic. Arch. 15 ego idem contendo, cum ad naturam eximiam atque inlustrem accesserit ratio quaedam conformatioque doctrinae, tum illud nescio quid praeclarum ac singulare solere existere; Tusc. II. 13.

34. recti: adjective; cf. Ep. II. 2. 122 sano cultu.—cultus pectora: plurals of repeated occurrence. For pectora (the moral nature), cf. I. 3. 9 n.

35. utcumque, the moment; see I. 17. 10 n.—defecere mores, discipline breaks down.

36. bene nata, a noble nature. For this use of the neuter plural, cf. I. 34. 12 n.

37. Here Horace reaches his main theme, the glorious ancestry of Drusus. In the twelfth year of the second Punic war, when Hannibal was at Canusium, awaiting the arrival of his brother Hasdrubal, who had crossed the Alps with a large army, the consul Claudius Nero, who faced Hannibal in Apulia, intercepted a despatch which put him in possession of Hasdrubal's plans. By a rapid and secret march, with 7000 picked men, he joined his colleague Livius at Sena Gallica, and the two consuls with their united forces met and destroyed Hasdrubal's army at the river Metaurus. Nero then hastily returned to his own camp. The whole episode, which was the turning point of the war and of Hannibal's career, occupied scarcely a fortnight, and the first news which Hannibal received of Nero's absence and his own disaster came in the ghastly form of his brother's head, which the brutal Roman tossed over the lines. Horace had perhaps recently read the account of this episode in Livy's twenty-seventh book (ch. 43 sqq.), which was published about this time.—quid debeas: depending on testis (sc. est).

38. Metaurum flumen: Intr. 65.—Hasdrubal devictus: Intr. 105*a*.

39. pulcher dies: cf. sol pulcher, 2. 46.—fugatis tenebris: abl. (Intr. 105*a*), the cause of pulcher.

41. adorea, victory (more strictly, 'military glory'); an old word (cf. Plaut. Amph. 193) apparently revived by Horace and frequently used by later writers. Originally an adjective from ador (spelt), how it came to have this meaning is uncertain.

47. tumultu, riot. Tumultus, in a military sense, denoted a war within or upon the Roman borders (Cic. Phil. 8. 2 sq.), such as the Social and Servile wars. The Hannibalic war took this form, and the word is accordingly applied to it in disparagement.

48. rectos, upright, erect.

49. dixitque tandem, etc. : this speech, if we make due allowance for poetical embellishment, does not misrepresent the effect of the disaster on Hannibal; cf. Liv.

 XXVII. 51. 12 Hannibal, tanto si- epithet, born of unreasoning prejudice and hatred; cf. Livy's portrait

50. cervi : Intr. 123. — praeda :
i.e. naturally, usually; cf. negata,
 III. 2. 22 n.

51. ultro, actually. Vltro, which commonly characterizes an action as gratuitous or voluntary (going beyond what the situation calls for or permits), is often applied to conduct which reverses the natural relation of two parties, as when an assailant demands redress of his victim, an evil-liver denounces vice, or the like, or when, as here, the weak attacks the strong. — opimus triumphus : after the analogy of spolia opima.

52. fallere : cf. I. 10. 16, III.

53. gens quae, etc.: Horace had read the Aeneid when he wrote this strophe; cf. III. 3. 40 n. — cremato ab, from the ashes of, i.e. from utter ruin. With this idea fortis is contrasted by its position.

54. iactata, etc. (with gens): i.e. through the utmost hardships. — sacra: i.e. the images of the gods and their belongings, — the effigies sacrae divom Phrygiaeque penates (Verg. A. III. 148).

56. pertulit: the prefix expresses perseverance to the end; cf. perficiunt, vs. 73, and persequitur, III. 2. 14 n.

57. duris ut, etc.: Intr. 114, 123.

58. nigrae frondis: that of the ilex itself (Intr. 124); cf. Verg. E. 6. 54 ilice sub nigra. For the case, see Intr. 66 a. — Algido: see I. 21. 6 n, III. 23. 9 sq.; Intr. 117.

59. per: i.e. in the course of, right through it all; cf. 2. 29 n.

60. ducit, draws.

61. non: with firmior and maius. — hydra: this simile Horace might have found in Livy, but in the mouth of Pyrrhus instead of Hannibal; see Flor. Epit. I. 18. 19 cum Pyrrhus 'video me' inquit 'plane procreatum Herculis semine, cui quasi ab angue Lernaeco tot caesa hostium capita quasi de sanguine suo renascuntur.' The comparison more probably originated with Pyrrhus' minister, Cineas (Plut. Pyrrh. 19).

62. vinci dolentem: Intr. 94 m.

63. monstrum, wonder. The allusion is to the crops of armed men that sprang from the dragon's teeth sown by Jason (Colchi) and Cadmus (Thebae), — vastly more formidable than the dragon itself. So the Roman legions seemed to spring from the very soil. — submittere: cf. Lucr. I. 7 tellus submittit flores. — Colchi: cf. Afro III. 3. 47 n.

64. Echioniae: Echion was one of the five survivors of the fight which Cadmus precipitated among the earth-born warriors. He married Agave, daughter of Cadmus, and became the father of Pentheus.

65. merses: sc. eam, the gens of vs. 53, but under the figure of a marvelous being (monstrum) as in the preceding strophe. There is perhaps an allusion in this verse to the first Punic war, which was largely a naval contest. For the mood of merses and luctere, see Intr. 87. They here do service as conditional clauses. — profundo: Intr. 69. — evenit: here used in the very rare literal sense; cf. pereuntis, III. 11. 27.

66. proruet . . . geret: the future, expressing what will prove true (in every case), when the trial is made, is here coupled with a present (evenit) of general statement. — integrum, unscathed (sc. in the previous contest).

67. laude, credit, éclat; cf. S. I. 10. 49; Cat. 64. 112 inde pedem sospes multa cum laude reflexit. — victorem: i.e. the antagonist who has just overthrown him. Cf. Hannibal's comment on the Romans under Marcellus, Liv. XXVII. 14. 1, seu vicit, ferociter instat victis; seu victus est, instaurat cum victoribus certamen.

68. coniugibus loquenda: i.e. memorable, the theme of many a fireside talk. For the gerundive, see 2. 9 n.

69. Carthagini: Intr. 53. — iam non, no more.

70. occidit: Intr. 116 d.

72. Hasdrubale interempto: there is a climax of pathos in these closing words, in which the depressing sense of personal bereavement, which underlies the despair pictured in the preceding verses, comes to the surface.

73-76. The ode closes with a brief epilogue, summing up the merits of the Claudii, which have been illustrated in the ancient and the modern instance given.

75. curae sagaces: their own wisdom, in contrast with the divine protection just spoken of.

76. expediunt: cf. Verg. A. II. 632 flammam inter et hostes expeditor. — acuta, crises. — belli: Intr. 64.

V. The occasion of this ode was the unexpectedly prolonged absence of the emperor in the western provinces in B.C. 16-13 (see intr. note to Ode 2). The avowed, and no doubt the main object of his western journey was the settlement of the affairs of that part of the empire ; but it was whispered in the capital that the real cause of his departure was the hostility of those whom he had offended by his measures of reform. Possibly it was the poet's sense of the injustice of these people that stirred him to the exceptional warmth which characterizes this ode. But however that may be, the malcontents were a small body ; the great majority of the citizens recognized their indebtedness to Augustus as the restorer of peace and security and the champion of good morals, and their dependence on his single life for the continuance of these blessings. The feeling of gratitude and devotion to which Horace here gives expression was one that was widespread and growing.—Metre, 172.

1. divis bonis : abl. abs. of attendant circumstances,—‘when the gods were in kindly mood’ (sc. towards mankind) ; equivalent to ‘whose birth was blest of Heaven,’ or the like. Cf. S. I. 5. 97 Gnatia (a town where water was scarce) Lymphis (= Nymphis) iratis extracta.—Romulæ : Intr. 65.

2. custos : cf. 15. 17 custode rerum Cesare.

4. sancto, august ; cf. Enn. Ann. 298 M. indu foro lato sanctoque senatu ; Verg. A. I. 426.

5. lucem : sc. tuam (‘the light of thy countenance’), as the next verse shows.—tuæ, thy own ; Intr. 116 c.—dux bone : see vs. 37 n.

6. instar : commonly used of size or quantity, rarely, as here, of quality.

7. it dies : cf. II. 14. 5 quotquot eunt dies.

8. soles : i.e. the sun of each successive day ; cf. 2. 41 n.

9. Notus, Carpathii : Intr. 117 ; I. 3. 14, 7. 15 n.—invido : reflecting the mother's feeling ; the obstructing winds seem to her to blow from pure spite.

11. spatio longius annuo: his business has detained him beyond the close of navigation in November, so that he has to stay all winter; cf. III. 7. 1 sqq.

13. votis, etc.: cf. Liv. Praef. 13 cum bonis potius ominibus votisque et precationibus deorum dearumque . . . libentius inciperemus.—vocat: expressing literally the action of the mother as she stands gazing at the shore, but used with the preceding instrumental ablatives in the wider sense of seeking to bring him back, by making vows for his safety, by looking for favorable omens, and by prayers.

14. curvo: a standing epithet of the shore, as Epod. 10. 21, Verg. A. III. 223, Ov. M. XI. 352, etc.

15. desideriiis: plural of repeated occurrence.—icta, smitten.

16. quaerit: for requirit; cf. III. 24. 32 and see Intr. 129.

17. tutus bos, etc.: the emphasis, enhanced by asyndeton, is on tutus (cf. I. 17. 5 impune tutum per nemus, etc.), nutrit, and pacatum; Intr. 116 b.—etenim: introducing the reason why the country cannot bear to have Augustus long absent,—namely, the blessings which his presence and care confer.—perambulat: i.e. in grazing.

18. rura: the repetition (after the emphatic nutrit) is without emphasis; it serves merely to continue the discourse (Intr. 116 b.) and to keep the reader's mind on the country, the improvement of which was an important consideration in the emperor's policy. rura is here used for arva, as in Epod. 2. 3, and in a comprehensive sense, to include both the land and the crops (implied in Ceres) that grow on it.—alma: a standing epithet of a goddess; cf. 15. 31 almae Veneris, I. 2. 42 almae Maiae, Verg. G. I. 7 alma Ceres, etc.—Faustitas: a personification that does not occur elsewhere in literature, but was probably not invented by Horace. It is (with alma) the same as Fausta Felicitas (Fertility), a divinity to whom annual offerings were made on the Capitol.

19. pacatum: by the suppression of piracy, with special reference to Sextus Pompey; see Epod. 4. 19 n. and cf. Mon. Anc. 5. 1 mare pacavi a praedonibus; Suet. Aug. 98 forte Puteolanum sinum

The figure has reference quite as much to the oars as to the sails; cf. Cat. 4. 4 sive palmulis opus foret volare sive linteo, and, conversely, Verg. A. I. 301 remigio alarum.

20. culpari metuit: i.e. shrinks from even the suspicion of unfair dealing. For metuit, cf. II. 2. 7, and see Intr. 94 l.

21. casta: proleptic.

22. mos et lex: i.e. law, with a healthy moral sentiment in the community to support it; cf. III. 24. 35 n. The allusion is to the lex Julia de adulteriis, passed by Augustus B.C. 18.—edomuit: the prefix denotes thoroughness; cf. I. 5. 8 n.

23. simili prole: instrumental ablative. For the meaning of simili, cf. Cat. 61. 217 sit suo similis patri | Manlio et facile omnibus | nascitur ab insciis | et pudicitiam suae | matris indicet ore.

24. premit comes: as in S. II. 7. 115 (Cura comes atra premit sequiturque fugacem; cf. III. 2. 31 sq.

25. Parthum: see I. 5. 6 n.—Scythen: cf. I. 42, III. 8. 23 n.

26. Germania quos, etc.: see intr. note to Ode 2.—parturit: cf. I. 7. 16 n.

27. fetus, spawn. The whole description represents them as something not quite human, the monstrous brood of an uncouth mother-land.

28. bellum Hiberiae: Horace has in mind particularly the stubborn struggle of the Cantabrians for their independence; cf. II. 6. 2 n.

29. condit, brings to a close, i.e. spends the whole (quietly, without interruption): cf. Verg. G. I. 458 at si, cum referetque diem condetque relatum, | lucidus orbis erit; E. 9. 51 saepe ego longos | cantando puerum memini me condere soles.—collibus: more graphic than agris (Intr. 117); the poet selects vine-dressing, as one of the lighter occupations of the farmer, for his picture of contented country life; cf. Epod. 2. 9 sqq.—suis: emphatic (Intr. 116 b). Secure possession of property was one of the blessings of the reign of Augustus (Vell. II. 89. 4), and a country population of small farmers who owned the land they tilled was always regarded by wise statesmen as the most solid foundation of Roman power.

30. viduas, unwedded; a common meaning of the word. For the figure, see note on caelebs, II. 15. 4.—ducit: here apparently for maritat (cf. Epod. 2. 10), though the subject of duco in this sense is regularly the bridegroom.

31. redit: sc. domum.—alteris mensis: for mensa secunda, when the guests sat over their wine. The poet skips the more substantial (and prosaic) part of the evening meal.

32. adhibet, invites; cf. Verg. A. V. 62 adhibete Penates epulis. The allusion, which is expanded in the following strophe, is to the libations made to Augustus—they were even enjoined by the Senate (Dio LI. 19. 7)—at public and private banquets. To that extent, as an invisible presence at the feast, he was put on a par with the gods (deum), particularly with the Lares, for whom a portion of the meal was always set aside. Cf. Ov. F. II. 633 et libate dapas ut, grati pignus honoris, | nutriat incinctos missa patella Lares; | iamque ubi suadebit placidos nox umida somnos, | larga precaturi sumite vina manu, | et 'Bene vos, bene te, patriae pater, optime Caesar' | dicite suffuso ter bona verba mero.

33. te prosequitur, thy name he hails. The verb retains its proper sense of 'accompanies' (sc. the thought of thee, the mention of thy name).—prece, with blessings; cf. vs. 37. For the number, see I. 2. 26 n.

34. defuso, with the pouring out of; Intr. 105 a.—Laribus: dative; Intr. 56.

35. uti Graecia, etc.: cf. Ep. II. 1. 1–17, where Horace points out that the Romans paid to Augustus in his lifetime the honors which Greece rendered her benefactors only after their death.—Castoris: sc. numen, whereas Herculis is in closer relation with memor; the result in the reader's mind is a dependence of the two proper names ἀπὸ κοινοῦ on both numen and memor; Intr. 76, 120.

37. o utinam: cf. I. 35. 38; Intr. 185. This prayer for long life to Augustus is conceived in the same spirit as that of I. 2. 45 sqq., the essence of it being that his country's happiness is bound up with his life. Similar is the fine tribute of Ep. I. 16. 25 sqq.—dux bone: repeated from vs. 5. The word dux conveys a much warmer expression of personal allegiance than the formal princeps; cf. Walt Whitman's M₃ Captain.—ferias: i.e. peace, regarded as an interval of repose

‘Longas o utinam, dux bone, ferias praestes Hesperiae!’ dicimus integro sicci mane die, dicimus uvidi, 40 cum sol Oceano subest.

VI.

Dive, quem proles Niobeae magnae and enjoyment between the wars which preceded and those which must (it is implied) follow this happy age.

38. integro die, when the day is whole, i.e. when the whole day is before us.

39. sicci: cf. I. 18. 3, Ep. I. 19. 9.—dicimus: Intr. 116 h.—uvidi: cf. II. 19. 18, S. II. 6. 70 seu quis capit acria fortis | pocula, seu modicis uvescit laetius.

VI. Horace's authorship of the hymn sung at the secular festival of B.C. 17 was deemed by the authorities worthy of mention on the pillars of marble and bronze erected to commemorate the occasion (see intr. note to C. S.), and the interesting line, CARMEN COMPOSUIT Q. HORATIVVS FLACCVS, is among the fragments of the inscription recently discovered. But Horace chose also to record his distinction in his own way, in a 'monumentum aere perennius.' It takes the form of a prelude to the hymn. Invoking the aid of the two divinities to whom the hymn is mainly addressed, and chiefly the minstrel Apollo, he calls upon the lads and maidens of the chorus to heed well his instructions, reminding the maidens in particular of the satisfaction they will have all their lives long in recalling their part in the memorable pageant, and closes with the seemingly incidental mention of his own name.—Metre, 174.

1. dive: Apollo. The invocation, interrupted by the long digression on Achilles, which recounts the invaluable service of the god to Rome, is resumed in vs. 25, and the actual prayer is contained in vs. 27. The verses extolling the prowess of Apollo and those relating to Diana (33 sq., 38-40) look like 'chips from the workshop' in which the Secular Hymn was constructed.—quem vindicem, whose vengeance; Intr. 105 a.—proles Niobeae: seven sons and seven daughters, slain by the arrows of Apollo and Diana to punish their mother Niobe for sneering at Latona as the mother of only two children (Il. XXIV. 602 sqq., Ov. M. VI. 155 sqq.). The story is the subject of a famous sculptured group now preserved in Florence (see Baumeister, III. pp. 1673 ff.). A similar (probably not the same) group, regarded as the work of either Scopas or Praxiteles (Plin. N. H. XXXVI. 28), existed in Rome in Horace's time, in a temple of Apollo built by C. Sosius.—magnae: i.e. boastful; so in Greek μεγάλη γλῶσσα (Soph. Antig. 127), ἔπος μέγα (Theogn. 159), etc.; cf. Ovid M. VI. 150 nec tamen ad

2. raptor: indicating the crime (see III. 4. 77 n) that drew down Apollo's vengeance on him, and so taking the place of magnae linguae with sensit.

3. sensit: cf. 4. 25 n. — prope victor: according to the prophecy put into the mouth of the dying Hector (Il. XXII. 359) Achilles was slain by Paris, with the aid of Apollo, in the very gate of the city: ἡματι τῷ ὅτε κέν σε Πάρις καὶ Φοῖβος Ἀπόλλων | ἐσθλὸν ἔοντ' ὀλέσωσιν ἐνὶ Σκαιῇσι πύλῃσιν. — altae, towering; the Homeric Ἴλιος αἰπεινὴ (Il. XIII. 773); cf. also I. 16. 18 n.

4. Phthius: from Phthia, in the southern part of Thessaly, the land of the Myrmidons (Il. II. 683).

5. For the positions of the two pairs of contrasted words, cf. II. 10. 13; Intr. 116 c.

6. filius Thetidis: in apposition with the subject, enforcing the concession, — 'although he was the son of Thetis and,' etc.

7. Dardanas: Intr. 65. — turris

quateret: a hyperbole like Lernam tremefecerit arcu (Hercules), Verg. A. VI. 803. For the mood, see Intr. 83. — tremenda cuspidē: modifying both quateret and pugnax (Intr. 76); for the latter, cf. Liv. XXII. 37. 8 pugnaces missili telo gentes; Intr. 73. The spear of Achilles is described in Il. XVI. 141 as βριθὺ μέγα στιβαρόν· τὸ μὲν οὐ δύνατ' ἄλλος Ἀχαιῶν | πάλαιεν, ἀλλὰ μιν οἷος ἐπίστατο πῆλαι Ἀχιλλεύς.

9–24. These strophes are parenthetical, and are introduced to enforce the indebtedness of the Romans to Apollo by a graphic picture of the ruthless fury with which Achilles would have exterminated the whole Trojan race, had the god not cut short his career and joined with Venus in entreating Jove to spare a remnant of the doomed people. — ille . . . ille: both emphatic (Intr. 116 b), but in different ways: the first is even he (mighty as he was); the second, he would not (as others did).

11. procidit late: see Intr. 123. Cf., however, Odys. XXIV.

12. Teucro: Intr. 65. This name of the Trojans is unknown to Homer, but was familiar to the Romans, when this ode was written, from the Aeneid.

13. Minervae: gen. with sacra, as Iunonis sacra, S. I. 3. 11.

14. sacra: for the plural, cf. Cat. 63. 9 typanum, tubam Cybelles, tua, mater, initia; Intr. 128.—mentito: see Intr. 51 e, and cf. Mart. III. 43. 1 mentiris iuvenem tinctis, Laetine, capillis.—male feriatos, keeping untimely holiday. For the whole story, see Verg. A. II.

16. falleret, steal upon, come upon them unawares; cf. I. 10. 16, III. 11. 40. The impf. subj. is that of softened assertion in past time, with a vaguely implied apodosis, 'if he had lived,' 'if he had been present,' or the like. This construction is naturally continued in ureret ni pater adnuisset, which is urat ni pater adnuerit transferred to past time. Cf. S. I. 3. 5 si peteret, non quicquam proficeret; si collibuisset, citaret; Gr. 311 a, 307 f.

17. palam captis: in contrast with the secrecy implied in mentito and falleret. It contains a distinct assertion: he would have captured them in open fight, and, etc.—gravis, with merciless hand.—heu . . . heu: a sigh of horror at the enormity to be described; cf. I. 15. 9.—nefas: exclamatory, as in III. 24. 30.

18. nescios fari: a paraphrase for infantes, and a reminiscence of the Homeric νήπια τέκνα; see Intr. 101 c.

19. latentem: more graphic than the plural, on the principle of Intr. 117.

21. ni: not found elsewhere in the Odes.

22. divum pater: cf. I. 2. 2, 12. 13 sqq.—adnuisset: Intr. 51 f.

23. potiore alite: cf. mala avi, I. 15. 5 n.—ductos, built; a natural word for construction that proceeds in a line; cf. ducere fossam, vallum, etc.

25. doctor, etc.: after propitiating the god by recounting his beneficent deeds, the poet now addresses him in the character (Apollo Musagetes) in which he wishes him to respond to the present appeal. The meaning of the strophe (even if we cannot accept the reading Argivæ for argutæ) is: Inspirer of the Greek lyrists, support now the Daunian poet.—argutæ: see III. 14. 21, and cf. Odys. XXIV. 62 μοῦσα Νῆλαια.—fidicen: serving as an attributive to doctor; Intr. 126 c.—Thaliae: Intr. 117; see also note on Clio, I. 12. 2.

26. Xantho: in Lycia.—lavis crinis: cf. III. 4. 61 n.

27. Dauoniae: for 'Italian,' as in II. 1. 34 (Intr. 117 b); but the word is chosen with special reference to Horace himself; see I. 22. 14 n, and cf. III. 30. 10 sqq.—Camenæ: see I. 12. 39 n.

28. lævis: i.e. beardless, youthful; see I. 21. 2 n, II. 11. 6 n.—Agyieus: an epithet of Apollo as guardian of the streets (ἀγυιαί).

29. From his prayer to the god the poet now turns to address the chorus, and begins, as in II. 19. 9, by declaring his commission.—spi- ritum: see II. 16. 38 n.—artem i.e. technical knowledge and skill, contrasted in the chiasmic order with spiritum. The main emphasis, however, is on Phoebus. Intr. 116 c, g.

30. carminis: limiting artem only.—poetæ: Gr. 214 f. The word occurs but twice in the Odes. Horace's favorite word is vates; cf. vs. 44, 3. 15, I. 1. 35, II. 6. 24, etc.

31. virginum primæ, etc.: see intr. note to C. S. (p. 331).

33. Deliaæ deæ: Diana (Artemis) was regarded by the Greeks as the special protectress of chaste youth and maidenhood (Preller-Robert, Gr. Myth. I. 320); cf. Cat. 34. 1 Dianæ sumus in fide | puellæ et pueri integri. This gives the poet an opportunity to bring in the goddess, who could have no place in the preceding invocation, and he dwells on some of her attributes, in this and the next strophe, so that she may not be left with a bare mention alongside of the elaborate praises of her brother.—tutela: here in a passive sense, —wards; cf. II. 17. 23, where it is active.—fugacis cohibentis, who stays . . . in their flight.

34. lynxas et cervos: perhaps suggested by Diana's words in bilon*, I. 1. 34 n.

36. pollicis ictum: sc. on the lyre. Horace represents himself as training the chorus (χοροδιδάσκαλος); but this is to be taken, as Porphyrio understood it ('suaviter hoc dicitur, quasi ipse lyram percutiat'), as a poetic fiction. In view of Horace's disposition and of the silence of the inscription, we cannot suppose that he actually directed the performance.

VII. The ingredients which go to make up this ode are the same as those of I. 4, — the coming of spring, the uncertainty of life and sureness of death, the wisdom of enjoying while we may. The materials, however, are here managed somewhat differently and with a freer hand. The rapid renewal of the seasons is made to remind us that the years are passing swiftly away, with no renewal for us; and the studied symmetry of the earlier ode, in which these two motives are nicely balanced on the lesson they inculcate, is abandoned for a more natural sequence of thought. Torquatus, for whom the ode was written, was an advocate of some distinction, and was on terms of familiar acquaintance with the poet, as appears from Ep. I. 5, which is addressed to him. — Metre, 163.

1. campis, arboribus: Intr. 53.

2. comae: cf. I. 21. 5 n, IV. 3. 11.

3. mutat terra vices: summing up what has been partially expressed in the first couplet. terra is the face of the earth, and is further limited, by flumina following, to the dry land. mutat is intransitive, as often in Livy, with vices as cognate object; cf. Verg. G. I. 418 ubi tempestas et caeli mobilis umor | mutavere vices. For the meaning of vices, cf. I. 4. 1, III. 29. 13. — decrescentia: after the winter floods, due to melting snows on the mountains (cf. 12. 3 sq.).

4. praetereunt, flow by (instead of over).

5. Gratia cum geminis sororibus: i.e. the three Graces (Aglaia, Euphrosyne, Thalia; Hes. Theog. 909); cf. III. 19. 16 n. For the scene cf. I. 4. 6, where Venus, instead of the Graces, leads the dance.

7. immortalia, immortality; cf. ima, I. 34. 12 n. — ne speres, monet: cf. I. 18. 7, 8 nn. — annus, etc.: i.e. (1) the swift panorama of the seasons (set forth in detail in vss. 9–12), which the revolving year keeps ever before our eyes, and (2) the rapid flight of time as we experience it in our daily concerns. — alnum: as the time of life-giving sunshine; cf. alme Sol, C. S. 9.

8. rapit hora: cf. III. 29. 48 quod fugiens semel hora vexit. It is the passage, not of the years, but of the hours, that brings home to us the rapid flight of time.

9. Zephyris : see note on Favoni, I. 4. 1. — proterit, tramples down; of the devastating effect of the scorching heat on the bloom of spring; cf. Ov. M. II. 791 (Invidia) quacumque ingreditur, florentia proterit arva | exuritque herbas.

10. interitura : Intr. 104 b.

11. pomifer : cf. III. 23. 8 n, Epod. 2. 17. As in the latter passage, autumn is personified. — effuderit : as from a horn of plenty; cf. I. 17. 14 sqq.

12. iners : in contrast with nature's activity in other seasons.

13. damna caelestia : i.e. those of the seasons, as just described, having their origin in the air and sky (caelum), in contrast with us men of earth. — celeris lunae : i.e. the rapid succession of the months (cf. soles, 5. 8 n). The moon, however, is put as a representative of the whole celestial system (Intr. 117). Cf. Cat. 5. 4 soles occidere et redire possunt : | nobis cum semel occidit brevis lux, | nox est perpetua una dormienda.

14. decidimus : cf. Ep. II. 1. 36 scriptor abhinc annos centum qui decidit.

15. quo pater Aeneas, etc. : sc. deciderunt. Cf. Ep. I. 6. 27 ire tamen restat Numa quo devenit et Ancus; Lucr. III. 1025 lumina sis oculis etiam bonus Ancus reliquit (quoted from Ennius). — pater : cf. I. 2. 50 n, Verg. A. II. 2, etc. — Tullus dives : cf. Liv. I. 31. 1 cum in magna gloria magnisque opibus regnum Tulli ac tota res Romana esset.

16. pulvis : in the tomb; umbra : in the underworld.

17. quis scit, etc. : cf. I. 9. 13 sqq., Ep. I. 4. 12 sqq. — hodiernae summae (sc. temporum; see I. 4. 15 n) : the sum that has accumulated thus far.

19. cuncta, etc. : cf. II. 3. 20, 14. 25 sqq. and Ep. I. 5. 13 (also addressed to Torquatus). This attitude towards the heir is eminently natural in a childless old fellow like Horace. — amico dederis animo : suggested no doubt by such expressions as Il. IX. 705 τεταρπόμενοι φίλον ἦτορ | σίτου καὶ

óvoio. But the habit of thought which marks off the emotions and appetites as a distinct portion of our nature (cf. aeger animi, etc.) easily takes the further step of attributing to the animus a quasi-separate existence and personality; cf. Plaut. Trin. 305 qui homo cum animo inde ab ineunte aetate depugnât suo, | . . . si animus hominem pépulit, actumst, animo servit, nón sibi; | sin ipse animum pépulit, vivit, victor victorúm cluet. The conception of this personality, as we have it here, however, as a sort of numen, to be kept contented and in good humor with us (amico), is more commonly expressed by genius (see III. 17. 14 n.).

21. semel: cf. I. 24. 16 n.—splendida, stately; Intr. 124. The splendor is that of his court.—Minos: cf. I. 28. 9; Verg. A. VI. 432 sqq.

23. genus: Torquatus belonged to the Manlian gens, among the oldest of the Roman noble houses.—facundia: there is an appropriateness in confronting the orator with the judgment-seat of Minos as a type of the inexorable doom of death. Notice that in the varying metrical accent on nón . . . non té . . . nón te, the stress here falls on te.

24. pietas: cf. II. 14. 2.

25–28. Birth, eloquence, piety must fail where a goddess' love and a hero's strength have been baffled.

26. Hippolytum: son of Theseus, beloved of Diana, and the victim of the fury of his step-mother, Phaedra, whose advances he had repulsed. Horace follows Euripides (Hippol. 1436 sqq.), and does not accept the Roman form of the myth (cf. Verg. A. VII. 761 sqq. and Ov. M. XV. 533 sqq.), according to which Hippolytus was restored to life and was the divinity worshipped in the grove of Diana at Aricia under the name of Virbius.

27. abrumperé: Intr. 94 n.

28. Pirithoo: see III. 4. 80 n.

VIII. In this ode, written for C. Marcius Censorinus (consul B.C. 8), a man of amiable disposition and literary tastes, Horace takes as his theme the value of poetry as a vehicle of enduring fame, and not only, as in III. 30, asserts its superiority over material monuments, but claims for it the power to confer actual immortality, and even divinity. The ode appears to have been sent as a present to Censorinus, perhaps at the season of the Saturnalia,—a circumstance that gives occasion for a preliminary comparison between poems and material works of art, as gifts to a friend.—Metre 169.

 Sed non haec mihi vis, non tibi talium

1. pateras: see I. 19. 15 n. — commodus: with donarem, as in Ep. II. 1. 227 (ut nos commodus ultro arcessas), and its opposite in Ep. I. 18. 75 (ne te incommodus angat). Here, from its close connection with grata, it has the meaning of 'anticipating their tastes.'

2. aera: the same kind of a plural as our equivalent, bronzes (Intr. 128), but referring here particularly to the bronze vessels (λέβητες) which, like bowls and tripods, were often given as prizes (praemia) in the Greek national games. The three are mentioned together in Pind. Isth. I. 18 ἐν τ' ἀέθλοισι θίγον πλείστων ἀγώνων καὶ τριπόδεσσιν ἐκόσμησαν δόμον καὶ λεβήτεσσιν φιάλαισι τε χρυσοῦ (cf. Il. XXIII. 259, 264, 267, 270). Specimens of these 'antiques,' often elaborately wrought, had been brought to Rome in great numbers, and were highly prized.

3. donarem: Intr. 116 h. — fortium, gallant; as winners in the games.

5. ferres: for auferres (cf. Intr. 129), as often with pretium, palnam, etc.; cf. vs. 22, III. 16. 22; Ep. I.

17. 43 tacentes plus poscente ferent — divite me: expressing the condition of donarem, and introduced by scilicet, I mean, of course. — artium: used concretely, works of art; cf. Ep. I. 6. 17; Intr. 66 c.

6. Parrhasius: of Ephesus, a famous painter at Athens in the time of Socrates. He was a contemporary and rival of Zeuxis, according to the well-known story of the painting of the grapes and the curtain. — protulit, created; cf. Ep. II. 3. 58, 130; Tib. I. 10. 1 quis fuit horrendos primus qui protulit enses? — Scopas: of Paros, the most eminent sculptor of his time (first half of 4th century B.C.). Many of his works were in Rome in Horace's day; cf. note on proles Niobe, 6. 1.

7. liquidis: suggesting by contrast the hardness of the stone.

8. ponere: apparently a technical word for representing an object, either in sculpture or painting: cf. 1. 20, Ep. II. 3. 34. For the mood, see Intr. 101 c.

9. non haec mihi vis, this is not in my power (i.e. to make such presents). For this use of vis cf. Epod. 5. 94.

10. res, animus : the meaning is that to make such presents to a man of means like Censorinus, even if Horace had the power to do it, would be merely giving him what he already had or could easily get, and did not really care for; whereas a poem, which Horace could give, was something he liked and could not buy. res is for res familiaris, as Ep. I. 1. 80, II. 1. 106, and often. — deliciarum, bric-a-brac. For the case, see Intr. 66 c.

11. For the arrangement of words in this verse, in which each of the three ideas expressed is in contrast with something that precedes, see Intr. 116 b and e.

12. pretium dicere : for the usual pretium statuere, pretium ponere, etc., and taking, like these, a dative of the thing assessed (muneri); cf. S. II. 3. 23 callidus huic signo (sc. pretium) ponebam milia centum.

13. Horace here begins his pretii dictio, which continues to the end of the ode. — incisa : with instrumental abl., as in Liv. VI. 29. 9 tabula his ferme incisa litteris (Gr. 225 d), instead of incisae marmoribus notae, or the more common prose construction, in marmoribus; but Horace is comparing with poetry, not the inscriptions, but the statues with their inscriptions. — notis : i.e. letters; cf. Ov. Tr. III.

3. 71 quosque legat versus oculo properante viator | grandibus in tituli marmore caede notis. — marmora : i.e. statues, as the relative clause shows. — publicis : set up by authority of the state (i.e. by order of the senate).

14. spiritus et vita : the same thing under two aspects (notice the number of redit); cf. 9. 10 sq. and 2. 28 n. For the thought, cf. Verg. A. VI. 847 excurrent alii spirantia mollius aera, ... vivos ducent de marmore vultus.

15. ducibus : Intr. 53. — non celeres fugae, etc. : i.e. the dramatic close of Hannibal's enterprise and (if we accept vs. 17) the burning of the great city which had well-nigh conquered Rome, were events so impressive and of such momentous import, that they would of themselves, without any written record, carry the name of Africanus down through the ages; but these brilliant memories cannot equal the glory conferred by poetry. — fugae : from the field of Zama (B.C. 202). For the number, see Intr. 128.

16. reiectae minae : i.e. the reduction of Carthage to the attitude of submission to which he had threatened to reduce Rome; cf. 3. 8.

19. lucratus, enriched by, richer by; an allusion perhaps to the indignant reply of Scipio to those who impugned his honesty in the management of his brother's Asiatic campaign, — that his surname was the only profit he brought home from Africa; 'nam cum Africam totam potestati vestrae subiecerim, nihil ex ea quod meum diceretur praeter cognomen rettuli' (Val. Max. III. 7. 1 d).

20. Calabrae Pierides: i.e. the poetry of Ennius, a native of Rudiae, in Calabria, whose historical epic, Annales, included the second Punic war. He was, moreover, a close friend and admirer of Scipio, and wrote one or more separate poems in his honor. For Pierides, see note on Haemo, I.
 12. 6.

21. chartae, books, literature.
 The word had come to be used for literary works, as in 9. 31, or even for definite portions of such works, as Cat. 1. 6 omne aevum tribus explicare chartis (i.e. in three volumes). — sileant: used transi-tively, as in 9. 31.

22. tuleris: the future perfect
 (Gr. 281 Rem.) carries the reader forward to the final result of the whole transaction: you will have done a good deed without having received your just reward for it.
 — Iliae Mavortisque puer: cf. 6.
 37, I. 12. 25, and see I. 2. 17 n.
Mavors is an old name of Mars, preserved in the ritual and adopted by the earlier poets.

23. taciturnitas invida: cf. 9.
 33 lividas obliviones. We need not think here of envious detractors, but only of the spite with which we readily endow whatever stands between us and what we regard as our just due. Cf. 5. 9 n.

25. Aeacum: see II. 13. 22 n.
 He was celebrated in particular by Pindar (Isth. 8. 23, etc.).

26. virtus, the genius; properly their excellence (sc. as poets); cf.
Ep. II. 3. 370 actor causarum medi- ocris abest virtute disertis Messalae.
 Some editors, however, understand by virtus the merit of Aeacus himself. — potentium: as having power to grant or withhold immortality.

vatum divitibus consecrat insulis.
 Dignum laude virum Musa vetat mori ;
 caelo Musa beat. Sic Iovis interest 30 optatis epulis impiger Hercules,

27. divitibus insulis: see Epod. 16. 42 n; for the case, Intr. 69.—consecrat, hallows, i.e. makes immortal; cf. sacrare, I. 26. 11 n. For the number, see Intr. 77.

29. caelo beat: i.e. deifies,—a step beyond the mere conferring of immortality (as in the case of Aeacus) expressed by vs. 28.—sic: i.e. through the power of poetry. The claim appears to involve a confusion between a purely subjective immortality in the memory and worship of mankind,—immortality of fame,—and a real, objective existence and activity after death (cf. Tac. A. IV. 38. 5 optimos quippe mortalium altissima cupere: sic Herculem et Liberum apud Graecos, Quirinum apud nos deum numero additos; . . . cetera principibus statim adesse: unum insatiabiliter parandum, prosperam sui memoriam); but it is not necessarily a denial of the latter. Granted that Romulus, Hercules, and the rest have been translated to heaven, they still cannot dispense with the aid of the poets, who have made their glory known to men; for without this they would not be worshipped, and so, in effect, would not be gods at all, but, like the rest of the dead, mere ‘pulvis et umbra.’ Cf. Ov. Pont. IV. 8. 55 di quoque carminibus, si fas est dicere, fiunt, | tantaque maiestas ore canentis eget.—interest epulis, etc.: in each of the three cases a particular privilege or function is put for the general fact that they are gods; Intr. 117 a.

30. optatis: as the object of his ambition; cf. Ep. II. 3. 412 optatam cursu contingere metam.

31. clarum sidus: in apposition with Tyndaridae; cf. I. 3. 2 n.—ab infimis aequoribus, from (going to) the bottom of the sea.

32. quassas ratis: cf. I. 1. 17.

33. viridi tempora pampino: repeated from III. 25. 20.

34. vota, etc.: so Vergil expresses the deification of Daphnis, E. 5. 79 ut Baccho Cererique, tibi sic vota quotannis | agricolae facient; damnabis (= bonos duces ad exitus) tu quoque votis.

IX. M. Lollius (cos. B.C. 21), to whom this ode is addressed, was a trusted lieutenant of the emperor, who employed him on various important missions. He organized, as first propraetor, the province of Galatia, and in B.C. 18 was made governor of Belgian Gaul, where, two years later, he suffered a humiliating defeat at the hands of the Sygambri (see intr. note to Ode 2). This reverse, however, in no wise lowered him in the esteem of his friends,—among whom we must reckon Horace,—

IX.

Ne forte credas interitura quae longe sonantem natus ad Aufidum non ante volgas per artis verba loquor socianda chordis :
 5 non, si priores Maeonius tenet sedes Homerus, Pindaricae latent nor of Augustus himself, who many years later (B.C. 1) gave him the most important of the imperial provinces, Syria, together with the confidential post of companion and adviser to his grandson, Gaius Caesar, who was sent at that time on a mission to Armenia. But the conduct of Lollius in the East, according to common report, was either a complete reversal of his previous career, or else, as Velleius charges (II. 97), his true character was at last unmasked; he was accused, it was said, of receiving bribes right and left from the potentates who had favors to ask of the young Caesar; and his sudden death, shortly after this came out, was attributed to suicide. He was succeeded by C. Censorinus, to whom the preceding ode is addressed.

It is singular that Horace should have placed on record, in one of his finest odes, his zealous testimony to the strict integrity of a man who died with such a reputation. But the evidence against Lollius is not free from doubt; Velleius, the chief witness, was a servile adherent of Tiberius, who was a personal enemy of Lollius. At any rate we may accept Horace's tribute, not only as the estimate in which Lollius was held when the ode was written,—probably not long after the disaster of B.C. 16, to which vs. 36 appears to allude,—but as good evidence that up to that time his conduct had deserved the praise so lavishly bestowed. — Metre, 176.

1. ne credas: expressing the purpose of introducing the examples in the second and following strophes; cf. II. 4. 1 n.

2. longe sonantem: cf. 14. 25 sqq., III. 30. 10; Intr. 3. — natus ad Aufidum: i.e. a mere provincial; see also III. 30. 10 n.

3. non ante volgas: a more moderate statement of his claim than in III. 30. 13 sq.; cf. Intr. 26.

4. verba socianda chordis: a paraphrase for 'lyric poetry.' — loquor: of poetical utterance, as in III. 25. 18, IV. 2. 45, etc.

5. non si: see II. 10. 17 n. The argument which begins here and extends through vs. 28 is very similar to that of Ode 8, with this difference, however, that Horace is here concerned to maintain the power of lyric poetry to confer permanent fame, and therefore begins by showing that lyric, though it yields precedence in dignity to epos, is no less enduring (vss. 5-12). — Maeonius: cf. I. 6. 2 n.

6. Pindaricae (camenae): see 2. 1-25 nn. — (non) latent, is not lost to sight.

7. Ceae : see II. i. 38 n. — Alcaeï : see Intr. 26. — minaces : alluding to his invectives against the tyrants of Lesbos ; see I. 32. 5 n, and cf. II. 13. 30 sqq.

8. Stesichori : a poet of Himera, in Sicily, contemporary with Alcaeus and Sappho, distinguished especially for perfecting the choral ode. His subjects were chiefly the heroic myths usually treated in epic poetry (hence graves) ; Quintilian (X. i. 62) describes him as maxima bella et clarissimos canentem duces et epici carminis onera lyra sustinentem ; reddit enim personis in agendo simul loquendoque debitam dignitatem. See also Epod. 17. 42 n. — camenae : here of Greek poetry, as (conversely) Pierides, 8. 20, of Italian. Cf. Graiae camenae, II. 16. 38 n.

9. nec si, etc. : i.e. and not only lyrics on serious themes (such as those just mentioned), but even those written in lighter strain survive. — olim, in his day ; see 4. 5 n. — lusit : cf. I. 32. 1 n ; Cat. 50. 4 scribens versiculos uterque nostrum | ludebat numero modo hoc modo illoc, | reddens mutua per iocum atque vinum. It is used here, as often, of love poetry ; cf.

Ov. Am. III. i. 27 quod tenerae cantent lusit tua musa puellae ; Cat. 68. 17. — Anacreon : born in the island of Teos (cf. Epod. 14. 10), but a resident of various Greek cities in succession ; for a time at the brilliant court of Polycrates, tyrant of Samos (B.C. 533–522), afterwards at Athens with Hipparchus. He was a courtier and man of pleasure, and a poet of love and gayety. (The collection of lyrics that bear his name are imitations, of a much later date.)

10. spirat vivuntque ; amor . . . calores : each pair expresses one thing under two aspects ; cf. spiritus et vita, 8. 14 n. For the use of the verbs, see Intr. 121.

11. commissi fidibus (with both amor and calores) : cf. S. II. i. 30 ille (Lucilius) velut fidis arcana sodalibus olim | credebat libris . . . quo fit ut omnis | votiva pateat veluti descripta tabella | vita senis ; so the warm passion of Sappho still lives and breathes before us in her poems.

12. Aeoliae puellae (genitive, limiting fidibus) : see Intr. 26 and II. 13. 24 sq.

13–28. The argument here is for poetry in general, although the examples are drawn from epic only (Homer). The verses should be read with careful observance of the emphasis, which is helped by rhythmical position (non sóla 13, primúsve 17, nón semel 18, só-lus 20, primus 24, múlti and ómnes 26) and anaphora (non); see Intr. 116 b and f.

13. comptos crinis: apparently the object ἀπὸ κοινοῦ of both arsit (Intr. 72) and mirata; but the former is gradually lost sight of as the sentence proceeds, and does not apply at all to comites. For this characterization of Paris, cf. I. 15. 14.

14. inlitum: lit. 'smeared on,' implying extravagant and showy embroidery, in oriental style (pic-turatas auri subtegmīne vestis, Verg. A. III. 483).

15. mirata, fascinated by; cf. I. 4. 19 n, Epod. 3. 10, Ep. I. 6. 1. — cultus, state.

16. Helene Lacæna: cf. Verg. A. II. 601 Tyndaridis Lacænae, I. 650 Argivæ Helenæ. The addition of the epithet is after the epic manner; cf. Vergil's Troius Aeneas, Sidonía Dido, etc.

17. Teucer: see I. 7. 21 n. He figures in the Iliad as the best bowman among the Greeks (Il. XIII. 313). — Cydonio: i.e. Cretan; see I. 15. 17 n. Cydonia was a town on the northern coast of Crete.

18. Ilios, a Troy; i.e. the siege (vexata) of Troy was not the only great siege that ever took place. For the form, see I. 10. 14 n.

20. Idomeneus: leader of the Cretans in the Trojan war. — Sthenelus: see I. 15. 24 n.

21. dicenda Musis proelia: cf. 4. 68 n. For proelia, as the object of pugnavit, see Intr. 51 b. — non ferox, etc.: two instances from the side of the defenders of the city.

22. vel: rarely used in subordination to a negative, as here, though -ve is common. — Deiphobus: brother of Hector, and one of the bravest of the Trojans. For his subsequent fate, see Verg. A. VI. 494 sqq.

25. vixere: standing first with the same emphasis that fuere would have in this position, — an emphasis corresponding to that of the preceding negatives. The series of particular negations is here cut short, and the fact implied in all of them, — that there have been in the world's history many Helens, many Teucers, many Troys, — is summed up in a general affirmative statement, which serves to introduce the application of the whole matter to the question in hand, the value of the poet.—ante Agamemnona: i.e. before the Trojan war, in which all these heroes distinguished themselves.

26. inlacrimabiles: not simply 'unwept,' but beyond the reach of tears, or the like; see II. 14. 6 n, and cf. flebilis, I. 24. 9.

27. urgentur nocte: cf. I. 24. 5 Quintilium perpetuus sopor urget; I. 4. 16 iam te premet nox.

28. quia: Intr. 114.—sacro: because inspired (cf. 3. 24, 6. 29), and singled out for the service of the Muses (III. 1. 3), and enjoying their favor and protection (III. 4. 21 sqq.). Cf. Cic. pro Arch. 18.

29. paulum, etc.: the moral of the whole discourse, forming the transition to the tribute to Lollius: The sluggard dies, and his frailties are buried with him and forgotten; the hero is in no better case if his merits are not made known to men.—inertiae, virtus: abstract for concrete, as in III. 2. 17, 21; 4. 67; Ep. II. 1. 88. For the case of inertiae, see Intr. 57.

30. non ego te: cf. I. 18. 11 n.

31. chartis silebo: cf. 8. 21 n.
 ---inornatum: proleptic.

32. labores: i.e. arduous exertions; cf. 4. 6. The word falls short of expressing achievement, and is appropriate in the defense of a man whose merits are under the cloud of temporary defeat (see intr. note).

33. impune, unhindered.—carpere, to prey upon. The word aptly expresses the wearing and disintegrating effect of time.—lividas obliviones: cf. 8. 23 n; Intr. 128.

34. animus, a soul.

35. rerum prudens: of the wisdom of experience (the opposite of rerum inscitia, Ep. I. 3. 33), in contrast with native gifts; cf. Verg. G. I. 416 ingenium aut rerum prudentia.

36. dubiis, critical; a variation on adversis; cf. II. 10. 13, Tac. Ann. I. 64. 6 secundarum ambiguarumque rerum sciens.—rectus, steadfast; properly 'erect' (cf. the literal use in 4. 48), 'not losing its balance.'

37. vindex, etc.: i.e. at once a champion and an example of strict integrity. This is the one idea which Horace dwells upon through this and the next strophe, —the strength of Lollius' charac-

Verg. A. IX. 205 animus lucis contemptor; Liv. I. 56. 8 liberator ille populi Romani animus (of Brutus).—avarae: i.e. prompted by greed.—abstinens pecuniae: see Intr. 66 c.

38. ducentis: sc. by its fascination.—cuncta, all the world, with the usual reservation in favor of a 'saving remnant.'

39. consul, etc.: in a purely figurative sense: incorruptible character has an intrinsic strength that exalts it above common men at all times when its power is displayed (quotiens, etc); its eminence is not temporary and accidental, like that of a politician raised to office for a few months. Cf. III. 2. 17 n, where the same figure is employed. It was suggested, no doubt, by the ideal sage of the Stoics, who unites in himself all perfections.

41. iudex, as a judge.—honestum utili, virtue to expediency.—

praetulit: in the manner indicated in the next clause.

42. reiecit: for the asyndeton here and in the next verse, cf. 5. 17-24, 8. 29-33, III. 18. 9-16.—dona, bribes.

43. catervas: sc. nocentium, who are compared to a swarm of foes through whom a brave warrior has to force his way to escape capture or the loss of his arms.

44. explicuit: i.e. has brought safely (out of the entanglement), has shaken them off, with his weapons intact. Cf. expediunt, 4. 76.

45. non possidentem, etc.: the poet's approval of the principles he has ascribed to his friend, not only as right, but as the true foundation of happiness. Cf. Ep. I. 16. 20 neve putes alium sapiente bonoque beatum.—possidentem: Intr. 103.—vocaveris: cf. scripserit, I. 6. 14 n. The subject is indefinite.

46. recte beatum, rectius beati: Intr. 116 g.—rectius occupat, takes with a better claim.

47. beati: defining gen., the regular construction in such phrases; cf. nomen poetae, 6. 30 n.

49. pauperiem pati: cf. I. 1. 18 n. For the inf., see Intr. 94 o.

50. peius: colloquial for magis, with expressions of fear and aversion; cf. Ep. I. 17. 30 cane peius et angui vitabit chlamydem; Cic. Fam. VII. 2. 3 oderam multo peius hunc quam illum ipsum Clodium. So male = valde, as Ter. Heaut. 531 timui male; Plaut. Rud. 920 nimis id genus odi ego male malacum. With a verb expressing favorable feeling, deterius is used with weakening effect (= minus) in S. I. 10. 89 si placeant spe deterius nostra (cf. I. 9. 24 n).

51. non ille: the pronoun serves to bring the subject into renewed prominence and single him out from the mass of mankind; cf. neque tu, I. 9. 16 n; Verg. A. I. 3.

52. timidus perire: Intr. 101 a.

X. The graver themes which preponderate in this book are here interrupted by four odes in lighter strain, dealing with love and social enjoyment. The first of them is constructed in the same form as I. 11, and, like that ode, is a warning: 'Beauty fades. Be not too disdainful, proud boy, of the admirers who now court your favor:

the time will quickly come when you will sigh in vain for the homage which you now hold so lightly.' Horace found his theme already treated in his Greek models; cf. Anth. Pal. XII. 35, 186. For the passionate admiration of the Greeks for youthful beauty, cf. Cat. 63. 64 sqq. — Metre, 170.

1. Veneris muneribus: cf. Il. III. 54 τὰ τε δῶρ' Ἀφροδίτης, ἣ τε κῆρυ τὸ τε εἶδος; I. 18. 7 munera Liberi.

2. insperata: i.e. before you have begun to think of it; to be taken with veniet. — tuae superbiae: poetical for tibi superbo; see Intr. 126 b, and, for the case Intr. 53. — pluma, down, precisely as we use the word; but it is not found elsewhere in this sense.

3. umeris involitant: cf. III. 20. 14, and, for the custom of boys wearing their hair long, like girls, II. 5. 21 sqq. — deciderint: i.e. when shorn. The occasion was attended with some formality; cf. Juv. 3. 186 crinem hic deponit amati; plena domus libis.

4. nunc: Intr. 114. — color: i.e. the cheeks (cf. in faciem verterit). — puniceae, red, red; cf. III. 15. 15, where purpureus is used. The

8. animis: Intr. 53.

XI. An ode in honor of Maecenas' birthday. The poet represents himself, in the midst of preparations for a festival, welcoming his fair neighbor Phyllis, and explaining to her the nature of the celebration which he has invited her to share. The scene, which is similar to that of III. 28, is in the country. We need not trouble ourselves to locate it more definitely. The ode is chiefly interesting for its quiet testimony to Horace's continued affection for his old friend Maecenas, who is mentioned here only in this book (see Intr. 32).—Metre, 174.

2. Albani: accounted one of the three or four best wines known to the Romans; cf. S. II. 8. 16.

3. nectendis coronis: dative of purpose or service (cf. Intr. 59), a construction surviving in prose chiefly in legal phrases (Gr. 299 b); cf. Liv. IV. 43, 10 non ducem scribendo exercitui esse.—apium: cf. I. 36. 16, II. 7. 24.

4. vis multa, a plentiful supply. Vis, in this apparently colloquial use, is often found in Cicero, as Verr. II. 4. 103 magna vis eboris; Tusc. V. 91.

5. qua: with fulges only.—crinis religata: cf. II. 11. 24; Intr. 42.—fulges: a stronger word than nites, I. 5. 13; so we speak of 'brilliant' or 'dazzling' beauty. It is probably from fulgeo, but may be future, from an old form fulgo, which Vergil has, A. VI. 826.

6. ridet: i.e. is bright and cheerful. The plate has been cleaned and polished for the occasion; cf. Juv. 14. 59 hospite venturo cessabil nemo tuorum; | 'Verre pavimentum, nitidas ostende columnas, | . . . hi

Catullus uses it even of odors, 64. 284 domus iucundo risit odore. — ara vincta verbenis: cf. I. 19. 13, 14 nn.

7. immolato agno = immolatione (caede) agni (Intr. 105 a); cf. Verg. A. IV. 21 sparsos fraterna caede Penates.

8. spargier: archaic pres. inf., found here only in the lyric poems, but eight times in the Satires and Epistles.

9. maus: i.e. familia.

10. pueris: see I. 19. 14 n; for the case, Intr. 56. — puellae: i.e. ancillae, as its connection with pueris shows. It is very seldom used in this sense.

11. sordidum, sooty. — trepidant: cf. III. 27. 17 n. Even the fire on the hearth seems to share in the general flutter of eager expectation pictured above in avet, festinat, cursitant. — rotantes vertice, whirling round.

13. ut noris: the purpose of the following explanation, Idus, etc.; cf. 9. 1 n; Ep. I. 12. 25 ne tamen ignores quo sit Romana locores, Cantaber, etc.; S. II. 1. 80. — advoceris: here in the sense of adhiberis, and with the same construction; cf. 5. 32 te mensis adhibet.

15. mensem Veneris: there were various explanations of this. Horace has in mind the one according to which Aprilis, like Ἀφροδίτη, derived its name from ἀπρός, sea-foam, being the month in which the goddess rose out of the sea (hence marinae; see III. 26. 5 n). The month was no doubt sacred to her because of her activity at that season of the year; see I. 4. 5 n, and cf. Ov. F. IV. 1 sqq.

16. findit: according to the supposed derivation of Idus from idurare, an old word of Etruscan origin, meaning 'to divide' (Macrob. Sat. I. 15. 17).

17. sollemnis: the same as festus in III. 8. 9. — sanctor: the difference between sollemnis dies and sanctus dies is much the same as between 'holiday' and 'holy day.' Cf. Tib. IV. 5. 1 qui mihi te,

18. paene: cf. prope, I. 14. 20 n.

19. luce: cf. 6. 42 n.—adfluentis, gathering; lit. 'flowing to' him. The word contains no suggestion of old age or decline, like our 'advancing' years, but rather of an increased store of what the years bring; see II. 5. 14 n.

20. ordinat, reckons. The literal meaning is, that he makes out the series of his years with the Ides of April for the starting point (ex hac luce) of each, and not e.g. the Kalends of January, as it would be in the case of the calendar year.

21. Telephum: the same name is used in I. 13. 1 and III. 19. 26.—petis: as in I. 33. 13, III. 19. 27, and often.—occupavit: with its usual sense of anticipation: 'has got possession of him before you.'

22. non tuae sortis: i.e. above your station in life.

23. dives: so that you cannot hope to compete with her. The warning carries with it the soothing intimation that her failure to win casts no reflection on her personal attractions; the contest was unequal from the outset. Observe the chiasmic arrangement of the attributes of iuvenem and puella.—tenet grata compede: cf. I. 33. 14.

25. terret: for the position, cf. monet, I. 18. 8.—ambustus Phaethon: Intr. 105 a.

26. grave: there is only mock seriousness, of course, in the present application of it.—ales: cf. I. 2. 42, III. 12. 2.

27. terrenum: hence unfit to consort with a creature of the air (ales), and teaching by his fate the lesson ut disparem vites, as well as the sin of unlawful ambition (ultra quam licet sperare nefas). It was said that Bellerophon, after his victory over the Chimaera (cf. I. 27. 24), attempted to fly to heaven on Pegasus, with the result here indicated.—gravatus: Intr. 51 a.

28. Bellerophontem: see III. 7. 15 n.

29. ut sequare, etc.: depending loosely on the notion of instruction contained in exemplum; cf. Ter. Heaut. 51 exemplum statuite in me, ut adulescētuli | vobis placere studeant potius quā sibi, and the use of an indirect question with exemplar proposuit, Ep. I. 2. 17.—digna: cf. ima summis, I. 34. 12 n.

30. putando: approaching the use of the present participle; Gr. 301 (footnote).

31. age iam, etc.: the conclusion of the plea: 'Better content yourself, then, with me; and come, let us enjoy the day together.'

32. finis: cf. Prop. I. 12. 19 mi neque amare aliam neque ab hac desistere fas est; | Cynthia prima fuit, Cynthia finis erit.—amorum: cf. I. 27. 17 n.

33. alia calebo: cf. quo calet, I. 4. 19 n; Intr. 72.

34. condisce: i.e. 'let me teach you.'

35. reddas: see 6. 43 n.—atrae curae: cf. III. 1. 40 n, 14. 13.

XII. We have in this ode the same elements as in I. 4 and IV. 7. It opens with a picture of spring. The increasing warmth brings thirst, and on this the poet hinges an invitation to his friend to join him in a carouse, to which each shall contribute an equitable share. The reminder of the shortness of life, so prominent in the two odes named, is brought in here also, but only as a momentary thought (vs. 26). Of the friend addressed, Vergilius, we know with certainty nothing beyond what the lines reveal. That it was the author of the Aeneid is not impossible, if we suppose that Horace published some years after Vergil's death a poem which he had written in his lifetime, and that two allusions (vss. 15 and 25) which appear to contradict what we know of Vergil had their explanations in circumstances unknown to us; but it is highly improbable. The Vergilius of this ode we may conjecture was

5 Nidum ponit, Ityn flebiliter gemens, aeternum opprobrium, quod male barbaras regum est ulta libidines.

Dicunt in tenero gramine pinguium

a younger friend of Horace, who was trying to better his fortunes by attaching himself to one and another of the great men of the day, or possibly a man who was brought into close relations with noble patrons by his professional work. In one manuscript he is called medicus Neronom, which is worthless as testimony, but contains a suggestion. (The 13th poem of Catullus, in which a similar invitation is given, may well be read with this ode, by way of comparing the two poets.) — Metre, 172.

1. veris comites : cf. 7. 9, I. 4. 1 n, Ep. I. 7. 13. For comites, cf. I. 25. 19 hiemis sodali, Euro. — temperant, calm.

2. impellunt lintea: i.e. navigation is already open; cf. I. 4. 2. — Thraciae: a literary epithet, as applied to the Zephyri, of Homeric origin; cf. II. IX. 5 Βορέης καὶ Ζέφυρος, τὼ τε Θρήκηθεν ἄητον. It is more commonly applied to Boreas (Aquila); cf. I. 25. 11 n, Epod. 13. 3.

3. prata: cf. I. 4. 4. — nec fluvii, etc.: cf. 7. 3 sq.

5. Ityn: son of the Thracian king Tereus and Procne, daughter of Pandion, king of Athens. His mother killed him, and served up his flesh to his own father in revenge (male ulta) for the outrage the latter had committed on her sister Philomela. When Tereus discovered the crime, and pursued the two sisters, all three were changed into birds. (See Ov. M.

VI. 424 sqq.) There is a confusion of names in the myth. According to the form adopted by Roman writers, Procne was turned into a swallow, and Philomela into a nightingale (e.g. Verg. G. IV. 15, Ov. F. II. 853 sqq.). For the case of Ityn, see Intr. 51 a. — flebiliter gemens: properly descriptive of the nightingale's plaintive note, and it is possible that Horace so intends it, following the other form of the myth and the example of the Greek poets, in whom the nightingale is associated with the spring (cf. Odys. XIX. 518; Sappho Fr. 19 ἦρος ἀγγελος, ἡμερόφωνος ἀηδὼν); but the swallow was proverbially, among both Greeks and Romans, the sign of spring, and is probably intended by avis infelix here. Cf. Ep. I. 7. 12 te, dulcis amice, reviset | cum Zephyris et hirundine prima.

6. Cecropiae domus: the Attic dynasty of which Cecrops was the founder.

7. male: in reference not to the act of vengeance, but to the manner of it. — barbaras: Intr. 124.

8. regum: the plural generalizes, and defines the conduct of Tereus as characteristic of his class, so that it is substantially equivalent to regias; cf. virginum, III. 27. 38 n.

9. dicunt carmina: cf. C. S. 8, and see I. 6. 5 n.

10. fistula: see I. 17. 10 n; and for the case, I. 17. 18 n.

11. deum: i.e. Faunus, here, as in I. 17. 1 sqq., identified with Pan. — nigri colles: cf. nigris Erymanthi silvis, I. 21. 7 n.

14. pressum Calibus: cf. I. 20. 9 n. — ducere: cf. I. 17. 22 n. — Liberum: Intr. 130.

15. iuvenum nobilium: the word iuvenum appears to indicate definite persons, but we have no means of knowing who they were. — cliens: i.e. accustomed to be invited to their tables, where he was not required to contribute anything, — the same thought that is expressed in vs. 24.

16. nardo: see II. 11. 16 n. — vina: Intr. 128. The plural here obviously refers to a single jar. — merebere: equivalent to a mild command; cf. Intr. 90.

17. nardi: Intr. 116 h. — parvus: the nard was very costly; cf. N. T. Mark 14. 3 sqq. — onyx: usually denoting, when masculine, a box to hold ointment, originally one made of alabaster (cf. Plin. N. H. XXXVI. 60 hunc aliqui lapidem (onychem) 'alabastriten' vocant, quem cavant et ad vasa unguentaria, quoniam optime servare incorrupta dicatur), but later an ointment box of any material. — eliciet: a personification of the cadus similar to that of III. 21. 1 sqq.

18. Sulpiciis: cf. Intr. 65; but this was the regular usage in the case of gentile and other personal names that were originally adjectives; cf. Claudia manus, 4. 73; lex Cornelia, Iulius (mensis), Colonia Agrippina, historia Augusta, etc. The horrea Sulpicia stood at the foot of the Aventine, where the hill borders on the river, among numerous other buildings of the kind, which gave to the district the name of 'the Warehouses' (Horrea). It was built by the Galba family (hence also called Galbiana), and existed in Porphyrio's day (4th century or earlier), 'vino et oleo et similibus aliis referta.' The poet's wine is stored there. — accubat, reclines, the cadus having no base; see Baumeister III. fig. 2335.

19. spes donare: cf. III. 21. 17. For the infinitive, see Intr. 101 b. — amara curarum: Intr. 64.

20. eluere: cf. III. 12. 1 mala vino lavere. For the mood, see Intr. 101 b.

21. properas: here expressing not haste in coming, but haste

22. merce : i.e. the nard.

23. immunem, scot-free, i.e. without paying your contribution; in Greek, ἀσύμβολον, which Terence has in Phor. 339 asymbolum venire (sc. ad cenam). — tinguere : colloquial, like siccus and uvidus (5. 39), irriguus (S. II. 1. 9).

24. plena domo : cf. II. 12. 24.

25. verum, but really (breaking off the banter); the word occurs here only in the lyric poems. — moras : the plural (Intr. 128), of delay persisted in for one reason after another. — studium lucri : see Intr. note.

26. nigrorum : see I. 24. 18 n.

27. consiliis, with your wisdom. Cf. III. 28. 4, and for the case, see Intr. 56.

28. dulce est desipere : a Greek idea; cf. Sen. Dial. IX. 17. 10 sive Graeco poetae credimus, 'aliquando et insanire iucundum est'; Menander IV. 196 M. οὐ πανταχοῦ τὸ φρόνιμον ἀρμόττει παρὸν, καὶ συμβανῆναι δ' ἐνια δεῖ. — in loco : cf. Ep. I. 7. 57 et properare loco et cessare; Ter. Ad. 216 pecūniam in locō neglegere mōximum interdūmst lucrum.

XIII. The Lyce who figures in this ode as a fading beauty may very well have been the same in the poet's fancy as the Lyce of III. 10, where her coldness and arrogance were well suited to call out the imprecations on her lover's part, the fulfillment of which he here recognizes with malicious glee. The subject is the same as that of III. 15 and I. 25. — Metre, 173.

1. audivere, etc.: the repetition (Intr. 116 g) is that of taunting exultation. — vota : cf. II. 8. 6 n.

4. ludis : cf. III. 15. 5, II. 12. 19 n.

5. tremulo: the effect of wine on a voice made unsteady by age.

6. lentum, torpid, unresponsive; different from lentus amor, III. 19. 28. The same difference exists between S. I. 9. 64 vellere coepi et pressare manu lentissima brachia and Epod. 15. 6 lentis adhaerens bracchiis. — virentis: cf. I. 9. 17.

7. psallere: Intr. 101 c. — Chiae: a name like Delia, Lesbia, etc. It occurs in several inscriptions as a freedwoman's name.

8. excubat, keeps watch; i.e. lurks there, ready to attack those who come within bowshot.

9. importunus, the unmannerly boy. — aridas: in contrast with virentis, 6; cf. I. 25. 17, 19.

10. quercus: a type of long life. — te quia . . . te quia: the ἀπὸ κοινοῦ construction (Intr. 76) is helped out by the anaphora, te in vs. 10 being felt to be the object of refugit, while in vs. 11, where its repetition with quia serves to continue the dependent clause with another subject (Intr. 116 h), it is felt to be a part of that clause and the object of turpant.

12. capitis nives: cf. Lowell's 'Singer with the crown of snow.' The metaphor, so familiar to us, appears not to occur in classical literature before Horace (though Catullus, according to some texts, wrote niveo vertice, 64. 309). Quintilian (VIII. 6. 17) condemns it as harsh and founded on too remote a likeness, coupling in his censure this passage with a verse of the poet Furius which Horace himself ridicules, S. II. 5. 41.

13. Coae: the silk stuffs manufactured in the island of Cos were notorious for their fine, semi-transparent texture, which made them a favorite material with the class of which Lyce is a type.

15. notis condita fastis inclusit: Intr. 76. The meaning is that she cannot get back her past years or disguise the fact that they are past, because they are, as it were, securely stored away and locked up in the calendar, where they are known to all men. For the part attributed to the volucris dies in the flight of time, cf. rapit hora diem, 7. 8 n.

18. illius, illius: Intr. 116 d. The genitive is partitive, limiting quid.

19. spirabat amores: Intr. 51 d (2); cf. Prop. I. 3. 7 (of the sleeping Cynthia) visa mihi mollem spirare quietem.

20. surpuerat: colloquial synecopation of surripuerat; cf. surpите, S. II. 3. 283, and see Intr. 183. For the thought, cf. Cat. 51. 3 qui sedens adversus identidem te | spectat et audit | dulce ridentem, misero quod omnis eripit sensus mihi.

21. felix post, favoured above all but. For post, cf. III. 9. 6 n. — Cinaram: see I. 4 n. — nota: she was one of the noted beauties of the day. — artium gratarum, of winning graces; descriptive genitive. Some, however, make et = etiam, and join the genitive with nota, as in II. 2. 6.

22. facies: here not the face, but her whole appearance, — a vision, a figure; cf. Ter. Eun. 296 o faciē pulcrā! dēleo omniſ de hinc ex animo mulieres.

24. servatura: Intr. 104 a. — parem: proleptic, — to equal, to attain.

25. vetulae, poor old; colloquial (cf. vs. 20 n) and disparaging; cf. the more dignified annosa cornix, III. 17. 13 n. — temporibus, the years (we require in English a definite measure of time to form such a plural).

26. possent ut, etc., to give . . . a chance to behold. The point of the sarcasm is that Lyce is a woman who will subject her fading charms to the ridicule of the iuvenes fervidi,—hence the fates have selected her as the instrument of their purpose.

28. dilapsam in cineres, crumbled to ashes. in expresses the result of the change, as in portus curvatus in arcum (Verg. A. III 533) and the like.

XIV. For the subject and occasion of this ode, see intr. note to Ode 4. Tiberius, who was barely alluded to in that ode, naturally receives the larger share of attention here, but the achievements of both brothers are treated as merely incidental to the praises of Augustus. His transcendent merits are extolled in the opening strophes, and, after disposing of its proper subject, the poem resolves itself into a song of praise to the great ruler before whose power all nations bow.—Metre, 176.

1. patrum . . . -ve Quiritium: a paraphrase for the formal senatus populusque Romanus.

2. plenis, adequate.—honorum: defining muneribus; cf. I. 28. 3.

3. in aevum: cf. III. 11. 35 in omne aevum. Here the idea of omne is supplied by aeternet.

4. per titulos: i.e. by statues, altars, trophies (see vs. 10 n), and other monuments inscribed with his achievements.—memores fastos: cf. III. 17. 4.

5. o qua, etc.: cf. Ter. Phor. 853 o omnium quantumst qui vivunt homo hominum ornatissime.—qua sol, etc.: i.e. in the whole habitable world.

6. principum: see I. 2. 50 n; but as there was no other princeps in this sense, the word must be used here vaguely for rulers in general, under whatever title.

7. quem didicere quid posses: such anticipation, in the main clause, of the subject of a dependent question occurs in Horace only here and in vs. 17 spectandus . . . quantis, etc. It is frequent in comedy, as Ter. Eun. 657 ego illum nescio qui fuerit (cf. 'I know thee who thou art').—legis expertes Latinae: i.e. not yet subjugated.

9. quid posses: cf. quid posset, 4. 25; Intr. 47.—Marte: cf. III. 5. 24, 34; Intr. 130.—milite tuo: referring to the operations of both brothers (vss. 10–16).

10. Genaunos . . . Breunosque: it is not clear whether Hor ace regarded these two tribes of the Inn valley as a part of the Vindelician nation, which included at least four tribes (Plin. N. H. III. 136), or as their allies, naming the Vindelici in vs. 8 and 4. 18, as he does the Sygambri in vs. 51 and 2. 36, because of their controlling influence in the confederacy. The inscription on a trophy erected a few miles from Nice to commemorate Augustus' conquest of the Alpine tribes (CIL. V. 7817; Plin. l. l.) is equally ambiguous.—implacidum genus, a merciless breed; cf. immanis, 15 n. Implacidus occurs here first in extant Latin literature.

11. velocis, agile; i.e. in their warfare.—arcis, etc.: cf. Ep. II. 1. 252.

13. deiecit, hurled down; applying equally well to the barbarians (cf. Ep. II. 2. 30) and their stronghold (cf. Verg. A. XII. 655 deiecturum arcis).—plus vice simplici: i.e. making them suffer greater loss than they had inflicted. For vice, cf. I. 28. 32 n. The ablative is modal, plus being used as a simple adverb without influence on the case, as often in prose.

14. maior Neronum: see 4. 28 n. His name, Tiberius, is excluded by its prosody. He was at this time in his twenty-seventh year.—proelium: according to Dio (LIV. 22. 4) he fought several pitched battles.

15. immanis: Strabo (IV. 6. 8) describes the cruelty of the Alpine barbarians towards the prisoners captured in their raids as similar to that attributed to Achilles in 6. 18-20.

17. spectandus, etc.: the passive of the personal construction exemplified in vs. 7, where see note. For the use of the gerundive, cf. donandus, 2. 9 n. For the neglect of caesura in this verse, see Intr. 155.

18. devota: Intr. 103.—pectora: cf. 4. 34 n.—liberae, a free-man's (cf. III. 5. 22): they were determined to die rather than surrender; a difficult foe, therefore, to conquer.

19. quantis: Intr. 114.—ruinis: cf. Liv. V. 43. 3 strage et ruina fudere Gallos. The plural expresses repeated occurrence, — crushing blows, or the like. Horace here and in the following comparison has in mind the Roman pursuit of the barbarians into their native valleys.

20. indomitas: parallel to devota morti liberae, 18 n.—prope (with qualis) = 'I had almost said.' It adds to the effect of the description, as a mark of the narrator's carefulness of statement. Cf. II. 18, S. II. 3. 268.

21. Auster: cf. III. 3. 4 sq. — Pleiadum choro: cf. Prop. IV. 5. 36 Pleiadum spisso cur coit igne chorus. They were harbingers of storm as they approached their setting in November; cf. Prop. III. 16. 51 non haec (fulmina) Pleiades faciunt neque aquosus Orion.

22. scindente nubis: the picture is of a black night with driving clouds, through the rifts of which the stars are now and then visible. — impiger vexare: Intr. 101 b.

24. medios per ignis: a stock phrase for extreme peril; cf. S. II. 3. 56 sq., Ep. I. 1. 46 per mare pauperiem fugiens, per saxa, per ignis. It seems inapt here, however, and possibly is used literally, in allusion to a definite incident known to Horace and his readers, but not to us, — a fight in a burning village, perhaps.

25. sic . . . ut: a rare inversion (in an affirmative sentence) of the usual form of comparison, giving up the main clause to the illustration, and remitting the subject illustrated to the relative clause; cf. Mart. IV. 13. 3 (of a wedding) tam bene rara suo miscetur cinnama nardo, | Massica Theseis tam bene vina favis. — tauriformis: such compounds are extremely rare in Horace. A river god was sometimes represented in the form of a bull with human face (see Baumeister, I. fig. 604, II. figg. 1136 sq.), suggested by the rush and roar of the stream. Cf. Verg. G. IV. 371 gemina auratus taurino cornua voltu Eridanus. — Aufidus: cf. III. 30. 10 n; Intr. 3.

26. regna Dauni: see I. 22. 14 n. — praefluit: see 3. 10 n.

29. Claudius: i.e. Tiberius; cf. vs. 14 n; Ep. I. 3. 2. — agmina ferrata, mailed ranks. The fact is not mentioned elsewhere, but Tacitus (Ann. III. 43. 3) mentions Gallic troops, thirty-five years later, 'quibus more gentico continuum ferri tegimen; cruppellarios vocant.'

30. diruit: as if they were a fortress or a wall; cf. Tacitus' account of the cruppellarii in battle (Ann. III. 46. 6): paulum morae attulere ferrati, restantibus laminis

31. metendo: cf. Verg. A. X. 513 proxima quaeque metit gladio. For this use of the gerund, cf. II. 30 n.

32. stravit humum: sc. with them; cf. III. 17. 9 n. — sine clade victor: so also Velleius (I. 95): Raetos Vindelicosque . . . maiore cum periculo quam damno Romani exercitus, plurimo cum eorum sanguine perdomuerunt.

33. te, te, tuos, etc.: see I. 10. 9 n. — tuos divos: i.e. the favor of the gods towards Augustus, as revealed in the auspices, was communicated to Tiberius and Drusus, who were simply his legati; see I. 7. 27 n.

34. nam: referring to tuos divos, and introducing the evidence of divine favor. — quo die: the 1st of August. The capitulation of Alexandria on that day in B.C. 30 was the end of the civil war, and the senate subsequently (B.C. 8) commemorated the event by changing the former name of the month, Sextilis, to Augustus, in honor of the emperor.

35. portus: there were three of them.

36. vacuam: having been deserted by Cleopatra, who had shut herself up in her mausoleum.

37. lustris tertio: i.e. at the expiration of fifteen years (from that day). We need not suppose that the coincidence of date was exact, but it must have been near enough to be striking.

38. reddidit, granted (as something due, something striven for and earned); cf. Cat. 76. 26 o di, reddite mi hoc pro pietate mea.

39. optatum: cf. 8. 30 n. — peractis imperiis: i.e. on the deeds done in pursuance of thy orders.

40. adrogavit, bestowed; cf. Ep. II. 1. 35 scire velim chartis pretium quotus adroget annus.

41. Cantaber: see II. 6. 2 n.

42. Medus: see I. 2. 22 n, and IV. 15. 6 n. — Indus, Scythes: cf. C. S. 55, Suet. Aug. 21; Mon. Anc. 5. 50 ad me ex India regum legationes saepe missae sunt, numquam antea visae apud quemquam Romanorum ducem; nostram amicitiam petierunt per legatos Bastarnae Scythaeque. — profugus: cf. I. 35. 9 n.

43. tutela: here in an active sense; cf. 6. 33 n. — praesens: cf. III. 5. 2, I. 35. 2 n.

44. dominae, imperial; cf. 3. 13.

45. qui celat origines Nilus: i.e. the Nile to its very source, standing for both the Egyptians and the Ethiopians. The source of the Nile was to the ancients much like what the north pole is to us; cf. Lucan X. 189 (Caesar speaks) nihil est quod noscere malim | quam fluvii causas per saecula tanta latentis | ignotumque caput; spes sit mihi certa videndi | Niliacos fontes, bellum civile relinquam; 263 quae tibi noscendi Nilum, Romanæ, cupido est | et Phariis Persis-que fuit Macetumque tyrannis, etc.

46. Hister: standing for the Dacians; see I. 26. 4 n. — rapidus: the name Tigris was said to mean 'arrow' (Varro L. L. V. 100). — Tigris: standing for the Armenians. For this use of the rivers to designate the peoples who dwell on their banks, cf. Tanais, III. 29. 28 n, and see II. 20. 20 n.

47. beluosus: not found elsewhere in classical Latin; cf. I. 3. 18, III. 27. 26. The ocean, however, was peopled, by common report, with creatures of monstrous form, not seen in Mediterranean waters: cf. Tac. Ann. II. 24. 6 (of Germanicus' soldiers, driven out into the North Sea in a storm) ut quisque ex longinquo revererat, miracula narrabant, . . . inauditas volucres, monstra maris, ambiguas hominum et beluarum formas, visa sive ex metu credita.

48. obstrepit Britannis: cf. II. 18. 20 n. — Oceanus: standing, in this context, for the Britons, some of whose chiefs had sent envoys to Augustus to seek the alliance and protection of Rome (Strabo IV. 5. 3).

49. non paventis funera: Intr. 51 a. This well-known characteristic of the Gauls (cf. Lucan I. 459 quos ille timorum maximus haud urguet, leti metus) was attributed to the teachings of the Druids; cf. Caes. B. G. VI. 14. 5 imprimis hoc volunt persuadere, non interire animas, . . . atque hoc maxime ad virtutem excitari putant, metu mortis neglecto. — funera: Intr. 128. — Galliae: like Hiberiae, gen. with tellus; Intr. 65, 119 a.

50. audit, heeds.

51. caede gaudentes, blood-thirsty; cf. ferocis, 2. 34. — Sygambri: see intr. note to Ode 2.

XV.

Phoebus volentem proelia me loqui victas et urbis increpuit lyra, ne parva Tyrrhenum per aequor vela darem. Tua, Caesar, aetas

XV. This ode, in honor of Augustus, which fittingly closes the volume, is a companion-piece to Ode 14 (just as the similar tribute in Ode 5 was coupled with the praises of Drusus in Ode 4); and as early as the fourth century it was an open question whether the two were not written by Horace as one ode. Porphyrio held that they were, and they so appear in a few of our codices. But although both odes are devoted to the praises of Augustus, the subject is here treated in a different aspect. In Ode 14 Augustus is the invincible champion of Roman safety and supremacy against all nations; here he is the bulwark of peace and prosperity at home, the restorer of good morals and of good old customs, and of that old-time discipline which made Rome great. The ode was probably written not long after the return of Augustus from Gaul in B.C. 13. — Metre, 176.

1. Phoebus, etc.: the fancy was suggested to Horace, perhaps, by Verg. E. 6. 3 cum canerem reges et proelia, Cynthia aurem | vellit et admonuit.—volentem, etc.: cf. Ep. II. 1. 250 (written about the same time) nec sermones ego mallet | repentis per humum quam res componere gestas | . . . si quantum cuperem possẽm quoque, where, however, he is protesting his unfitness to write epic poetry; here, as in Ode 2, he has in mind lyric treatment (loqui lyra) of warlike themes; cf. I. 6. 5 sqq., II. 1. 37 sqq.—proelia: Intr. 116 b. — loqui: cf. 2. 45 n.

2. increpuit ne, cried out at me, not to. Porphyrio explains this correctly: non 'lyra increpuit,' sed 'volentem me proelia lyra loqui,' id est, lyrico carmine. Most modern editors take lyra with increpuit, quoting Ov. A. A. II. 493 haec ego cum canerem, subito manifestus Apollo | movit inauratae pollice fila lyrae. But there the striking of the lyre is simply to attract the poet's attention to what the god is about to say, and there is no suggestion of 'rebuking with the lyre.' The only reason for this explanation of the text is the position of increpuit; but cf. vs. 15, porrecta; II. 6. 11 regnata petam Laconi rura Phalantho; IV. 1. 19 Albanos prope te lacus ponet; Epod. 6. 16 inultus ut flebo puer.

3. parva: of lyric, in comparison with more stately verse; cf. III. 3. 72, IV. 2. 31, Ep. II. 1. 257 parvum carmen.—Tyrrhenum: Intr. 117 a.

4. vela darem: a metaphor often used of poetical enterprise; cf. Prop. IV. 9. 3 quid me scribendi tam vastum mittis in aequor? | non sunt apta meae grandia vela rati; Verg. G. II. 41; Ov. Tr. II. 329.—tua aetas: put forward, in contrast with the forbidden proelia, etc., as a theme affording abundant scope for his lyre, in the varied blessings which he proceeds to recount.

5. fruges agris rettulit: sc. after the decay of agriculture due to the civil wars.—et . . . et . . . etc.: the polysyndeton, continuing the enumeration without pause through three strophes, gives the impression of a throng of benefits pressing for utterance. This is succeeded through two more strophes (vss. 17–24) by an enumeration of averted evils, which are brought out with individual distinctness by the anaphora of non (Intr. 116*f*). Cf. I. 13 and 29 nn.

6. signa: those captured from Crassus at Carrhae (see III. 5. 5*n*) and Antony (III. 6. 9*n*). In B.C. 20 Augustus, then in the East, organized an expedition against the Parthians, and King Phraates, who was just then in too much trouble at home to fight the Romans, purchased a peace by surrendering, among other things, the famous standards. This demonstration of the power of Rome, without the shedding of a drop of blood, Horace naturally includes in his enumeration of the triumphs of peace.—nostro, our own; Intr. 116*b*.—Iovi: cf. III. 5. 12*n*. It appears from this passage that the standards were first deposited in the Capitol, and they remained there during Horace's lifetime. They were afterwards transferred to the temple of Mars Ultor (Mon.

Anc. 5. 40), but this temple was not dedicated till B.C. 2.

7. derepta: hardly accurate, as denoting eagerness or indignation in the act, but well expressing the feelings of the Romans.

8. postibus: sc. of their temples; cf. Ep. I. 18. 57 sub duce (i.e. Augusto) qui templis Parthorum signa refigit.—duellis: Intr. 66*c*, N.

9. Ianum Quirini: the famous temple of Janus, not far from the Curia, on the north side of the Forum. Horace purposely varies from the official and prosaic designation, Ianus Quirinus, which he evidently understood to mean 'Gateway of Quirinus' (Intr. 65); cf. Ov. M. XIV. 836 colle Quirini (= Quirinali). Tradition ascribed to Numa both the temple itself and the injunction to close it only in time of peace (Liv. I. 19. 2).—clausit: for the first time in more than 200 years. It was closed three times under Augustus (Mon. Anc. 2. 42),—B.C. 29, 25, and a third date, not definitely known, but later than the composition of this ode.—ordinem evaganti: Intr. 51*f*. The figure is military.

10. frena licentiae iniecit: cf. III. 24. 29.

12. artis, virtues, as the context shows; cf. III. 3. 9*n*.

13. nomen: cf. III. 3. 45.—Italiae: cf. II. 13. 18, III. 30. 13*n*.

14. imperi: for the position, see Intr. 119 a.

15. porrecta: sc. est. With maiestas it means 'made widely known and felt.'—ortus solis: poetical for orientem (solem). The plural is that of repeated occurrence (Intr. 128), i.e. not the places (regions of the East) where the sun rises, but the part of the earth (the East) where it rises day by day; cf. 5. 8 n. With the whole phrase, cf. Sall. Cat. 36. 4 cum ad occasus ab ortu solis omnia domita armis parerent.

17. custode, etc.: cf. 5. 2, III. 14. 15 sq.—furor civilis, political madness (= civium ardor prava iubentium, III. 3. 2); distinct from ira, below; cf. I. 37. 12, III. 27. 36.

18. exiget: used in this literal sense, with rare exceptions, only of persons (cf. II. 13. 31), and therefore in keeping with the half personification which runs through the whole sentence.

19. ira, quae, etc.: cf. I. 16. 18 sqq.

21. qui Danuvium bibunt: cf. II. 20. 20 n. The frontier of the empire was firmly established on the Danube by Augustus before he died, and remained so for centuries; but at this time the conquest of the tribes on the south bank was only half accomplished, and their submission had not lost, to Horace's readers, the impressiveness of novelty.

22. edicta Iulia: a general expression for the orders issued by Augustus and the terms imposed by him.—rumpent: the future is in keeping with the fact, stated above: the nations named will be reduced to obedience and made to keep the peace.—Getae: see III. 24. 11 n.

24. Tanain prope orti: cf. vs. 21 n, and see III. 29. 28 n.

25. nos: in contrast with the foreigners. The close of the ode is similar to that of Ode 5.—et profestis et sacris: i.e. every day alike. The picture is of cheerful every-day life, not merely of occasional enjoyment on holidays (cf. vs. 27 n).—lucibus: cf. 6. 42 n, II. 19.

26. iocosi: cf. III. 21. 15 n.—munera Liberi: cf. 10. 1 n.

27. cum prole, etc.: i.e. each in his own family circle.

28. adprecati: a rare word, found only here in classical Latin.

29. virtute functos, whose good work is done. For the form of expression, see note on functum laboribus, II. 18. 38.—more patrum: with canemus. The custom was recorded by the elder Cato; cf. Cic. Tusc. IV. 3 in Originibus dixit Cato morem apud maiores hunc epularum fuisse, ut deinceps qui accubarent canerent ad tibiam clarorum virorum laudes atque virtutes.

30. Lydis: said by Donatus (on Ter. Ad., Praef.) to have been suited to grave themes.—remixto:

another rare word, used also Ep. II. 3. 151, but not found elsewhere before Seneca. The re- lends to the action a suggestion of iteration or persistence, as in respergo.—tibiis: here ablative, the instrument being secondary to the song.

31. -que: introducing a distinct topic (cf. famaque 14, nosque 25),—the Julian line, which stands preëminent among the great throng of Roman worthies, and is a subject that takes us back to Troy and the divine founders of the Roman race.—Anchisen et progeniem Veneris: i.e. Anchises and Venus and their offspring,—different from C. S. 50 Anchisae Venerisque sanguis (i.e. Augustus). The theme of song is to be the whole Julian house; but the interest, of course, centres in the one great figure who represented the house to Horace and his readers. The compliment to Augustus is indirect, but no less obvious than if he had been mentioned by name; cf. Iulium sidus, I. 12. 47 n.—almae: cf. Lucr. I. 2 alma Venus, and see 5. 18 n.

CARMEN SAECVLARE.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

IN the summer of B.C. 17 Augustus instituted a remarkable festival, — one that, in the words of the herald who proclaimed the coming event, no living man had ever seen or would ever see again. The Quindecimviri, who had charge of the Sibylline Books, had produced an oracle which called for the celebration of the ludi saeculares.

The origin of this long forgotten festival was obscure. It appears to have grown out of the ludi Terentini, a religious observance associated with the oldest traditions of the Valerian family, and with a place in the Campus Martius called Terentum (or Tarentum), where there were hot springs and other evidences of volcanic influence. It was on the banks of the river, at the great bend below the Ponte Sant'Angelo. The healing properties of these springs were said to have been first revealed to Valesius the Sabine, who commemorated his gratitude for the miraculous healing of his three children by the institution of sacrifices, with other ceremonies and entertainments, on three successive nights, at the ancient subterranean altar of Dis and Proserpina, which under the guidance of an oracle he had discovered on this spot. (See Val. Max. II. 4. 5.)

Tradition ascribed the first celebration of the ludi Terentini as a public institution to the consul Valerius Poplicola, in the first year of the Commonwealth, and mentioned subsequent celebrations by other Valerii. The first celebration known to history occurred about the middle of the third century B.C. It was instituted under instructions from the Sibylline Books, which had been consulted in consequence of certain alarming portents; and the oracle gave further directions that the celebration should be renewed every hundred years (Varro ap. Censor. 17. 7). It was at this time, then, according to Varro, that the ludi Terentini became ludi saeculares.

A saeculum was the longest span of human life. It was an idea borrowed from the Etruscans, in whose system, we are told, the life of a city or a state was measured in saecula, as a man's life is measured in years. The first saeculum was the life of that one of the children born at the time of founding the city who survived all his fellows; the second saeculum began at his death, and was measured in the same way; and so on. This system, which of course never existed except in theory, left the length of the saeculum a variable quantity, and when the Romans came to fix it arbitrarily, there was a conflict of views and of practice. Varro's notion of a saeculum was 100 years (L. L. VI. 11); and according to Livy (Perioch. XLIX) a celebration of the ludi Terentini at the beginning of the third Punic war occurred a hundred years after the last preceding celebration. The Quindecimviri under Augustus, on the other hand, found in their Sibylline oracle (vs. 2), — which, whatever its origin, was composed apparently as early as the Social war, — 110 years as the length of the saeculum (cf. C. S. 21). As the accounts of celebrations in the past were imperfect and contradictory, it is evident that there was room for wide divergence of opinion as to the proper year for celebrating the jubilee. The Quindecimviri found or constructed in their records a series of four dates, at intervals of 110 years, at which the festival had been, or ought to have been, observed; and the celebration of B.C. 17 was set down as the fifth. The emperor Claudius, taking 100 years as his saeculum and the foundation of the city as his starting-point, celebrated the festival in A.D. 47 (A.V.C. 800); so that some people who witnessed the pageant under Augustus did live to see it again, after all. Domitian chose the year 88; for what reason, is not clear. The ninth centennial of the city was celebrated by Antoninus Pius. Subsequent celebrations are recorded for A.D. 204 (2×110 years from B.C. 17), 247 (A.V.C. 1000), 259, and 298.

Vergil's fourth eclogue shows that certainly as early as B.C. 40, when the poem was written, and probably much earlier, a Sibylline oracle was current, which foretold the near approach of a regeneration of the world and the advent of a new Golden Age. It was perhaps this prophecy and the expectations and aspirations roused by it that suggested to Augustus and his advisers the policy of signaling his reign as a new era of peace and happiness by celebrating the ludi saeculares with a magnificence that would at once please and impress the people. The main outlines of the celebration were prescribed by the oracle, which has been preserved (Zosimus II. 5), and the details were worked out by Ateius Capito, the most learned expert of the time in pontifical law. Everything was done to make the occasion memorable, and a lasting record was provided by the erection of two pillars, one of marble and one of bronze, inscribed with a full account of the celebration. These monuments, which must have stood many centuries, were finally destroyed and their material turned to other uses; but in 1890 some fragments of the marble pillar were exhumed in the neighborhood of Terentum, and a considerable portion of the inscription was thus recovered.* It originally consisted of 168 lines, and contained full particulars of all the preparations for the festival and of the celebration itself, including the text of decrees, formulas of prayer, and minute details of the ritual.

* The inscription was edited, with a commentary, by Mommsen in the Monumenti Antichi della Reale Accademia dei Lincei, Vol. I., p. 618 (1891). The article has also been printed separately.

The celebration was preceded by a 'distributio suffimentorum' and a 'frugum acceptio.' For three days (May 26-28) citizens who presented themselves, with their wives and children, at certain designated places on the Capitoline and Palatine, were supplied by the magistrates with pitch-pine, sulphur, and bitumen (suffimenta) for purposes of purification. During the following three days the magistrates received from the citizens offerings of wheat, barley, and beans (fruges), which were used in part to remunerate the musicians and actors in the scenic performances. The celebration proper began in the night before June 1, and was continued without interruption through three nights and three days. The addition of the three days, in which the gods of heaven were joined in the honors of the festival, was a signal departure from the old ludi Terentini, which were devoted wholly to the gods of the underworld. The ceremonies were all conducted by Augustus in person, partly with the assistance of Agrippa. They took place by night 'in campo ad Tiberim,' i.e. at Terentum; by day, at the appropriate temples.

The sacrifices of the first night were whole burnt offerings (hostiae prodigivae), nine she-lambs and nine she-goats, to the Fates (Moerae; cf. C. S. 25 sqq.). On the second night the Ilithyiae (cf. C. S. 13 sqq.) were propitiated with oblations of consecrated cakes; and on the third a pregnant scow was sacrificed to Mother Earth (Terra mater; cf. C. S. 29 sqq.). The sacrifices of the first night were followed by scenic entertainments, which were given, as in the days of Plautus, on a temporary stage, with no seats provided for the audience (IN SCAENA QVOI THEATRVM ADIECTVM NON FVIT, NVLLIS POSITIS SEDILIBVS). These 'ludi Latini scaenici' were kept up without interruption through the three nights and days, but after the first night they were given IN THEATRO LIGNEO QVOD ERAT CONSTITVTVM SECVNDVM TIBERIM. The ludi scaenici of the third day were followed by ludi circenses in a temporary circus near the same place, and the people were further entertained by a series of scenic performances and other shows not prescribed by the oracle (ludi honorarii), which lasted seven days after the close of the festival proper (June 4-11). The religious ceremonies of the first night were supplemented by sellisternia in honor of Juno and Diana (i.e. Lucinae duae, according to Mommsen), conducted by 110 matrons; and these were repeated on the following days.

On the first day of the festival (June 1) Augustus and Agrippa each sacrificed a white bull to Jupiter, and on the second day each a white cow to Juno Regina, on the Capitol; and after the latter sacrifice and its accompanying prayers, Augustus (probably) led the 110 matrons in a special prayer to Juno. On the third day the chief ceremonies were on the Palatine at the temple of Apollo (cf. I. 31, intr. note), where Augustus and Agrippa made an offering of consecrated cakes to Apollo and Diana. 'And on the completion of the sacrifice,' the inscription goes on, '27 boys who had been summoned for this service, sons of fathers and mothers still living (patrimi et matrimi), and as many girls, sang a hymn; and in the same way on the Capitol. The hymn was composed by Q. Horatius Flaccus.'

It is clear from these words that Horace's hymn was first sung on the Palatine, and that it was also sung on the Capitol. Mommsen supposes that it was sung in solemn procession from the Palatine to the Capitol and back, the middle strophes, where the sacrifice of white cattle by Augustus (vs. 49) evidently refers to the offerings of the first and second days, being sung on the Capitol itself. There was in all probability a procession, but the inscription does not connect the hymn with it in any way. In the hymn, not only Jupiter and Juno are invoked, but all the divinities who were honored in the whole festival; and Jupiter is appealed to, not in the middle strophes alone, but in the closing verses, where the chorus confidently claims the favor of 'Jove and all the gods.' There seems to be no good reason to depart from the plain meaning of the words of the inscription, that the ceremonies of the Palatine in their main features, including the singing of the hymn, were repeated on the Capitol; for the words EODEMQUE MODO IN CAPITOLIO do not appear to refer to the hymn alone. The explanation is perhaps to be found in the fact that the ceremonies of this third day were evidently the crowning event of the whole festival; and that while Augustus was desirous of exalting his patron god Apollo to the position of patron god of Rome, he may not, or his religious advisers may not, have felt at liberty to exclude the old gods of the Roman state from the honors of the day.

Horace adopted for his hymn the Sapphic strophe (Intr. 174). A striking feature of the poem is the very large proportion of feminine caesuras. It was rendered, we must assume, with instrumental accompaniment, and was made, for those who heard it, a beautiful and impressive performance. The number of the chorus, 27 of each sex, was prescribed by the ritual, as we may infer from Liv. XXVII. 37. 7 and XXXI. 12. 9, where choirs of 27 maidens are mentioned as singing hymns especially composed for ceremonies of propitiation. In every case, however, the number is stated not as 'twenty-seven,' but as 'thrice nine,' which probably had some religious significance connected with the number three, but may have been used as a subdivision for musical purposes. The division of the chorus into two main groups (boys and girls) was prescribed by the oracle (χωρὶς δὲ κόραι χορὸν αὐταὶ ἔχοιεν | καὶ χωρὶς παίδων ἄρσην στάχυν, vs. 20). The distribution of the various parts of the hymn between the two half-choirs, or among smaller groups, was probably a complicated matter; at any rate, it cannot now be determined. The only indications in the hymn itself are in the ninth strophe (vss. 33-36), which was apparently divided between the two half-choirs, and in the first two and the last, which were probably sung by the full choir. Beyond this neither poem nor inscription gives any light.

Phoebe silvarumque potens Diana,

5 quo Sibyllini monuere versus

1. Phoebe, Diana: although the hymn belongs in a sense to the whole festival and invokes in turn all the gods who were worshipped in the various ceremonies, it was first sung at the rites in honor of Apollo and Diana, before their temple on the Palatine, and these two deities are given a corresponding preëminence in it. This arrangement was determined by the policy of Augustus to raise the Palatine Apollo to the position of especial guardian of the Roman state.—silvarum potens: cf. nemorum (custos), III. 22. 1 n, and for this use of potens, I. 3. 1 n.—Diana: cf. vs. 70, and see Intr. 178.

2. decus: referring to both divinities (as Sol and Luna; cf. vss. 9, 36).—colendi et culti: i.e. who shall be worshipped in the future, as in the past; a comprehensive phrase, perhaps borrowed from the ritual, like our 'As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be.' For the tenses, cf. tulit et feret, Ep. I. 7. 21 (Intr. 80).

5. quo: with dicere, vs. 8.—versus: they were Greek hexameters. The old Sibylline books, which King Tarquin was said to have purchased of the Sibyl, were burnt up in the fire which destroyed the Capitol in B.C. 83, but a new collection of oracles had since been gathered from various sources.

due form Rite maturos aperire partus lenis, Ilithyia, tuere matres, 15 sive tu Lucina omene probas vocari seu Genitalis.

6. lectas, castos: both attributes belong to the whole chorus; Intr. 121. For lectas, cf. IV. 6. 31, and see introd. note.

7. dis: referring to the gods in general. — placuer: used here, as in III. 4. 24, like the perfect of an inceptive verb; Rome has won (and now enjoys, is established in) their favor.

8. dicere carmen: cf. dic melos, III. 4. 1 n.

9. alme: cf. almum diem IV. 7. 7 n. — Sol: so also in the oracle, vs. 16 Φοῖβος Ἀπόλλων, | ὅστε καὶ Ἥελιος κικλήσκειται. — diem celas: i.e. by taking the day with him, as it were, when he 'hides' his chariot (under the earth); a poetical expression of the fact that night, as well as day, is due to the sun; cf. III. 6. 44.

10. alius et idem: i.e. through all change forever the same. It introduces the following prayer, as if he had said 'In thy everlasting course mayest thou,' etc.

12. visere: cf. I. 37. 25, II. 15. 3.

13. aperire: see Intr. 101 a, 102.

14. lenis: a part of the prayer. — Ilithyia: goddess of the labor of childbirth. In Homer she is sometimes one (Odys. XIX. 188), usually more in number, as II. XI. 270, where the Εἰλειθυῖαι are daughters of Hera. See Preller-Robert, Gr. Myth. I. 511. In the ceremonies of the second night the offerings were made DEIS [I]LITHYIS, but the prayer began ILITHYIA VTI TIBI, etc.; so that they do not appear to have been regarded as distinct divinities, but as one; as a 'diva triformis,' perhaps, but not distinctly identified with Diana. Here, however, this identity (cf. III. 22. 2 sq.) is silently assumed, furnishing, as it does, an excellent justification of the prominence which the policy of Augustus required to be given to Diana.

15. sive tu, etc. = vel Lucina, si tu Lucina probas vocari, vel, etc.; cf. I. 2. 33 n. It was supposed to be pleasing to the gods to be addressed by many titles, and the choice of names was also a pious precaution against giving offense to a divinity, especially one whose personality was so elusive as in this case. Cf. Cat. 34. 21 sis quocumque tibi placet | sancta nomine, and Callim. Hymn. in Dian. 7, where Artemis prays Zeus for πολωνυμίη. — Lucina: see III. 22. 2 n. — vocari: Intr. 94 a.

16. Genitalis: not found elsewhere as a title of this goddess; perhaps intended as the Latin equivalent of Γενετυλλίς, which was an epithet of Aphrodite, and was also used in the plural, like Ελλειθυιαί, to denote attendant divinities who presided over childbirth (Preller-Robert I. 377, with n. 4).

17. producas, rear; cf. II. 13. 3. For the mood, see Intr. 87. — patrum decreta, etc.: the measure referred to was really a law (lex Iulia de maritandis ordinibus), passed by the votes of the comitia, with the approval of the senate, which was very reluctantly given; but it was the policy of Augustus to govern through the senate, which became, from now on, the law-making body of the empire, although the comitia continued to be held some years longer. The law was passed in B.C. 18. It discouraged celibacy by penalties, and encouraged marriage and the raising of children by relaxing somewhat the strictness of the conditions of legal marriage and by conferring on fathers of three or more children certain privileges and immunities. See Merivale, Ch. XXXIII.

18. super: see I. 9. 5 n. Its use with the gerundive is very rare.

19. prolis: Intr. 66 a.

20. marita: see Intr. 65, and cf. Prop. V. 11. 33 facibus maritis.

21. certus, etc.: the two emphatic words of the strophe are the first and last (Intr. 116 b), the rest being a poetical paraphrase for the saeculum and the festival (see intr. note). The goddess is implored to propagate the race, that the repetition of the jubilee, age after age, may be assured (certus), and that each festival may be celebrated by great throngs of citizens. — per: i.e. extending through; the prepositional phrase here taking the place of a defining genitive (Madv. 298. 2).

22. orbis, cycle. — ut: Intr. 114. — referatque: Intr. 119 b.

25. ceciniisse: see I. 15. 4 n, and, for the construction, Intr. 102. — Parcae: the Μοῖραι of the oracle and the inscription, who were worshipped on the first night. They were usually represented as three aged sisters, forever spinning the thread of destiny; see Cat. 64. 305 sqq. Originally goddesses of childbirth, their functions had special reference, on the one hand, to the individual (see II. 3. 15 n); but in a wider sense they were regarded as developing the general course of human events in accordance with the righteous decrees of an omnipotent power. Cf. Hes. Theog. 904, where they are the daughters of Zeus and Themis.

26. quod semel dictum est: a paraphrase for fatum; cf. III. 3. 58 n. It refers to the whole course of Roman destiny, past and to come. For semel, see I. 24. 16 n. — stabilisque: for quodque stabilis (cf. I. 1. 5 n), in which quod (unlike the first quod) is the object of its verb. — rerum terminus: a figurative expression for immutable destiny; cf. Verg. A. IV. 614 et sic fata Iovis poscunt, hic terminus haeret.

27. servet: optative subjunctive, hardly consistent with semel dictum est; but the inconsistency is no greater than we usually fall into when we grapple with the problem of free will and fate. It anticipates the prayer that follows (bona, etc.), which is also superfluous, if we insist on strict logical consistency.

29. fertilis frugum pecoris- que: a part of the prayer. For the genitives, see Intr. 66 a. With pecoris, fecundus would be more usual, but cf. S. II. 4. 31 mare fertile testae, Liv. V. 34. 2 (Gallia frugum hominumque fertilis). — Tellus: worshipped as Terra Mater on the third night.

30. spicea, etc.: a prayer for abundant harvests. The figure is based on the practice of making an offering of first fruits to Ceres in the shape of a wreath of ripe ears of grain; cf. Tib. I. 1. 15 flava Ceres, tibi sit nostro de rure corona | spicea, quae templi pendeat ante foris; II. 1. 4 spicis tempora cinge, Ceres.

31. fetus: of the fruges only, continuing the thought of vs. 30. — salubres, Iovis: Intr. 121. For Iovis, see I. 1. 25 n.

33–36. After invoking in turn the powers to whom the nocturnal rites of the festival were dedicated, the chorus closes this part of the hymn with an interlude, addressed to Apollo and Diana, which, however, is not disconnected in thought with the preceding: Apollo spares man and beast from pestilence (cf. I. 21. 13 sqq.), Diana (as Luna)

37. Roma, etc.: here begins an invocation to the great gods of the Roman state, the gods of the Capitol, and more particularly Jupiter and Juno, who were honored on the first and second days of the festival (see vss. 49 sq.).—si: cf. III. 18. 5 n. Here the appeal is to the interest of the gods in their own handiwork.—Iliæ: Intr. 65.

38. litus Etruscum: here for the coast generally about the mouth of the Tiber.—tenuere, gained; cf. Liv. I. 37. 4 montes Sabini petebant, et pauci tenuere.

39. iussa pars: i.e. if they were a remnant under divine protection (sospite) and guidance. In this dependent clause, and especially in iussa (Intr. 116 b), lies the gist of the whole condition, which is concerned, not with the well-known fact of the migration of the Trojans to Italy, but with its explanation.—laris, their homes.

40. cursu: with mutare.

41. sine fraude: cf. II. 19. 20 n.

42. castus: in contrast with the wickedness of the rest, which had brought down the wrath of the gods upon them; cf. III. 3. 18 sqq. It is equivalent to Vergil's constant epithet, pius.—patriæ: dative; cf. mihi, Epod. 5. 101.

43. daturus: Intr. 104 b.

44. plura relictis: i.e. a greater city than Troy.

45. probos mores, etc.: in keeping with the policy of Augustus, which this jubilee was meant to emphasize, the blessings of peace are made most prominent in this prayer.—docili, placidae: both proleptic and a part of the prayer; intimating a fit state of mind on the part of the citizens as a requisite condition of receiving the blessing.

47. Romulae: Intr. 65.—rem, wealth.—prolemque: Intr. 174 b.

49. quae veneratur: for this use of veneror with the construction of a verb of asking, cf. S. II. 6. 8 si veneror stultus nihil horum. — bobus albis: the sacrifices of the first and second days, as the inscription records. The tenor of the prayer to each of the two deities was in the main as follows: Iuppiter optime maxime (or Iuno regina) . . . te quaeso precorque uti imperium maiestatemque populi Romani Quiritium duelli domique auxis, utique semper Latinum nomen tuearis, incolumitatem sempiternam victoriam valetudinem populo Romano Quiritibus tribuas, faveasque populo Romano Quiritibus legionibusque populi Romani Quiritium, remque publicam populi Romani Quiritium salvam serves, uti sis volens propitius populo Romano Quiritibus XVrum collegio mihi domo familiae.

50. sanguis: i.e. descendant; cf. II. 20. 6, III. 27. 65, IV. 2. 14. This paraphrase for Augustus, instead of the use of his name, is more in keeping with the proprieties of the occasion, and also served, like Romulae genti, to keep up the main thought of the whole sentence, — the connection between Rome's present and future and her divinely ordered beginnings.

51. bellante prior, etc.: cf.

Vergil's famous parcere subiectis et debellare superbos (A. VI. 853). The thought is here the same: tu regere imperio populos, Romane, memento, . . . pacique imponere morem. Victory is the stepping-stone to peace and order (see vs. 45 n). This is set forth more fully in the next two strophes: in the first, victory; in the second, the advent of peace and her attendant blessings.

53. iam, etc.: from this point on the chorus abandons the attitude of supplication to the gods and assumes that of confidence in their favor; cf. Ep. II. 1. 134 poscit opem chorus et praesentia numina sentit.

54. Medus, Scythae, Indi: cf. IV. 14. 42 n. — Albanas: for 'Roman,' with the same suggestion as above (see vs. 50 n).

55. responsa petunt: a phrase implying recognized superiority in the power appealed to, being applied commonly to the consultation of an oracle or to an embassy coming to the senate with a definite request or a question to be settled.

57. Fides, etc.: most, if not all, of these personified abstractions were deified and worshipped by the Romans. For Fides, see I. 35. 22 n. Augustus erected an altar to Pax on the Campus Mar-

59. audet: Intr. 77.

61. augur Phoebus: cf. I. 2. 32.—et: Intr. 114.—fulgente: in Homer his bow is silver (as Il. I. 37, 49); in the other poets sometimes golden (e.g. Pind. Ol. 14. 10). Here the bow is simply ornamental (cf. decorus and vs. 33 n); Apollo is relied upon as the prophet-god who foresees the happy future, and who promotes it as patron of arts and letters and as god of healing. These are his chief functions, for which the poet finds a place here; they could not well be brought in at the outset (vs. 9), in the form which the invocation there took.

62. acceptus Camenis: cf. II. 10. 18. For Camenis, see I. 12. 39 n.

Ann.* II. 71. 1 fesso corpore, ubi finis (i.e. mors) aderat.

64. corporis artus, our frame; cf. Lucr. III. 128 est igitur calor ac ventus vitalis in ipso | corpore, qui nobis moribundos deserit artus.

65. si: the conditional form implies no doubt of the truth of the proposition, but puts it, with full confidence, as the basis of the conviction expressed in the conclusion; cf. vs. 37, and III. 18. 5 n.—aequus: cf. I. 2. 47 n.—aras: Intr. 128.

66. remque, etc.: a reminiscence, perhaps, of Enn. Ann. 477 M. audire est operae pretium, procedere recte | qui rem Romanam Latiumque augescere voltis.—felix: proleptic, with Latium.

strum. The word is chosen probably with reference to the successive periods of five years for which Augustus received the imperium. — semper: see note on usque, III. 30. 7.

69. Aventinum: the seat of the chief temple of Diana in Rome, built originally, under Servius Tullius, as a common shrine of all the Latin communities. — tenet: cf. III. 4. 62 n. — Algidum: see I. 21. 6 n.

70. quindecim virorum: a board, originally of two members (IIviri sacris faciundis), charged with the safe-keeping and interpretation of the Sibylline books, and with the conduct of certain religious ceremonies. The number was increased to ten, then to fifteen, with corresponding change of name. At this time, however, there were actually 21 members, with Agrippa as magister conlegi. No prayers offered by them on this occasion are mentioned, but they took a leading part in all the ceremonies, and prescribed the forms of prayer. — Diana: cf. vs. 1 n.

71. votis adplicat auris: cf. S. I. 1. 22 votis ut praebeat aurem. — puerorum, children; cf. Ep. I. 7. 7 pueris pater et matercula pallet. In old Latin the singular also was used of either sex; cf. Naev. Bell. Pun. 30 M. Cereris puer, Proserpina.

72. curat, adplicat: emphatic; Intr. 116 b.

73. haec sentire (depending on spem), that this is the mind of; referring to what has been said in the last three strophes. Apollo and Diana, who have assumed as their special charge the welfare of Rome, have done so with the full consent and good will of all the gods.

74. reporto: the chorus speaks in the singular number, as in the Greek drama; cf. dices, IV. 6. 41 n.

Q. HORATI FLACCI

E P O D O N

LIBER

I.

Ibis Liburnis inter alta navium, amice, propugnacula,

For a general account of the Epodes and the significance of the name, see Intr. 18-20.

I. This epode, which serves as a virtual dedication of the collection to Maecenas, is characterized by a much warmer expression of feeling than any of the other dedicatory poems, belonging as it does to a period when the poet's place in his patron's regard was assured, but the impulse of affection and gratitude had not yet lost its freshness. The occasion was the proposed departure of Maecenas, in the spring of B.C. 31, for the seat of war. Octavian, before setting out for the campaign of Actium, summoned all the most influential senators and knights to join him at Brundisium; and Maecenas naturally went with the rest. In this poem Horace begs to be allowed to go to the war with him, pleading the unhappiness and anxiety he would suffer if separated from his friend, while deprecating the suspicion of any selfish motive. Maecenas, it seems most probable, did not actually cross the sea, but returned to take charge of Rome and Italy during the absence of his chief (Dio L.I. 3. 5, Vell. II. 88. 2), — though some scholars, in spite of these authorities, hold that he was present at the battle; and some think, mainly on supposed evidence in Epode 9, that Horace was with him. But the indications of that poem are very slight, and have little weight against the absence of any positive testimony and the silence of Horace himself. — Metre, 159.

1. ibis: the emphasis may be compared with that of C. I. 7. 26, II. 17. 10, Ep. II. 2. 39. In these instances, however, the emphasis is that of assurance; here it is that of reluctant conviction: 'You are really going!' The tone is half interrogative. Cf. Tibullus' appeal to Messala under the same circumstances: Ibitis Aegaeas sine me, Messala, per undas, I. 3. 1. — Liburnis: see C. I. 37. 30 n. The abl. is instrumental, though we render it with in; cf. Liv. XXVIII. 9. 10 quodrigis urbem incuntem. — alta: in contrast with the light Liburnian biremes; suggesting the peril Maecenas will incur.

2. propugnacula, battlements.

The ships of Antonius were not only of enormous size, but were furnished with towers (turritis puppibus, Verg. A. VIII. 693), so that their bulwarks looked like the walls of a fortress (Florus II. 21. 5)

4. subire tuo (sc. periculo): a choice paraphrase for 'to share,' corresponding with the expression in vs. 15 for sharing toil.

5. si: sc. vivitur; cf. vs. 8 n. The unusual insertion of si with the abl. abs. is explained by the fact that te (observe its position) is in thought the subject of two abl. abs. constructions, expressing alternative events. Expressed fully, his meaning is: quibus vita si te superstite vivitur, iucunda; si mortuo, gravis, or in more condensed form, quibus te vita—si superstite, iucunda; si mortuo, gravis. This natural conception of the thought is fixed by the euphemistic substitution of si contra (in which si is indispensable) for si mortuo. — superstite: here simply in the sense of continuing to live, unlike C. II. 17. 7, III. 9. 12, 16.

7. utrumne: the enclitic -ne, though frequently attached to an emphatic word after utrum, is not found attached to utrum itself in any writer before Horace, who uses it here and twice elsewhere, S. II. 3. 251, 6. 73. Cf. also uterne, S. II. 2. 107; quantane, S. II. 3. 317; quone, ibid. 295. None of these forms occur in the Odes. Vtrumne is used by later prose writers. See Hand Turs. IV. p. 80. — iussi, obediently. Maecenas, then, it seems, had once refused Horace's request to be allowed to go. — persequemur, consign myself to. Cf. Cic. de Off. III. 1. a re publica forensibusque negotiis prohibiti, otium persequimur.

8. ni: sc. persequimur or the like. Cf. vs. 5 n.

9. laborem takes its construction from otium 7, but by a slight zeugma, on account of the different character of the object, the verbal notion suggested to the mind is not that of persequor, but rather of suscipio, fero, or the like, and first takes definite shape in laturo; hence the answer, feremus II. — mente laturo, etc.: i.e. ea mente (eum) laturo, qua decet, etc.

10. non mollis: cf. non amicos, II. 21, non auspicatos, C. III. 6. 10.

12. inhospitalem Caucasum: cf. C. I. 22. 6.

13. sinum, nook; suggesting remoteness, — places off the line of ordinary travel and traffic. Cf. Verg. G. II. 122 India, extremi sinus orbis.

15. roges: for si roges; Gr. 310 b. — tuum . . . meo: parallel with Caesaris . . . tuo, vss. 3 sq.; but labore (not laborem) is required here by the metre, and standing before the hepthemimeral caesura gives a balance to the verse like that of 2. 19.

16. firmus parum: referring to his health and strength.

18. maior habet, takes stronger possession of.

19. adsidens, brooding. Its meaning is determined by the dative pullis, which, however, is not so closely connected with it, — since the bird is supposed to be absent from the nest, — as with timet, fears for. See Intr. 76.

21. relictis, when she has left them. — non latura, though she would not afford. For the conditional force of the fut. part., see Intr. 104 d. — ut adsit, even if she were there. Gr. 266 c.

22. praesentibus: added (after adsit) for contrast with relictis. The Latin is fond of expressing both sides of a mutual relation; cf. Plaut. Most. 1075 adsum praesens praesenti tibi; Verg. A. IV. 83 illum absens absentem auditque videtque; Sat. II. 6. 81. But the repetition is not strictly tautological. Here the meaning is: 'without any thought that if she were there, they would find safety in her presence.'

23. militabitur bellum: cf. pugnata bella, C. III. 19. 4, and see Intr. 51 b.

25. non ut, etc.: i.e. not with an eye to the increase of my possessions (pluribus and meis contain the main ideas; Intr. 116 b.) in farm-lands or pastures, or the acquisition of splendid villas.

26. nitantur: the straining of the oxen, here poetically transferred to the plough, suggests ? rich, heavy soil.

✓ Beatus ille qui procul negotiis, ut prisca gens mortalium,

27. pecusve, etc.: sc. mihi, suggested by meis 26.—Calabris, etc.: cf. C. I. 31. 5 n.

28. mutet: for the cases, see Intr. 74.

29. superni: the lofty situation of Tusculum, commanding a magnificent view over the Campagna, together with the beauty of the surrounding scenery and its nearness to the capital (15 miles distant), made it a favorite resort for wealthy Romans, whose villas covered the slope below the town (in the neighborhood of the present Frascati), as those of their successors do now. Besides Cicero's famous Tusculanum, Lucullus, Hortensius, Cato, and Julius Caesar had villas in the neighborhood. Some of these country houses were probably of marble, and their brilliant whiteness (candens), against the darker background of the hills or even of the walls of the town itself (tangat moenia), made them conspicuous for miles around.

30. Circaea: as having been founded, according to tradition, by Telegonus, the son of Circe. Cf. C. III. 29. 8 n.

31. satis superque: cf. 17. 19; and, for the sentiment, C. II. 18. 12. — benignitas: cf. benignius, C. I. 9. 6 n., and malignus, I. 28. 23 n.

32. paravero: fut. perf., because he is thinking of what he would do with riches after they had been acquired. The indicative is emphatic: not 'I would not' (haud paraverim), but 'I shall not.'

33. Chremes: presumably a typical miser in some well-known comedy, not now extant. There is a Chremes in four of Terence's plays, but he is in no case a miser.

34. nepos: like avarus in the preceding verse, in apposition with the subject of the verb. In many MSS. an ut is inserted before nepos, as in 2. 5 before miles.

II. The banker's dream of the delights of country life. The humorous surprise to which the reader is treated at the end of this really charming picture is thoroughly characteristic of Horace, who gives us some of his most poetic passages while protesting that he has no gift for the higher flights of poetry (e.g. C. II. 1, III. 3, S. II. 1. 12 sqq.). For a genuine account of Horace's enjoyment of country life, see S. II. 6. — Metre, 159.

2. prisca gens: the Golden Age

3. paterna: see C. I. 1. 11 n. The ideal farmer is owner of the farm he tills, but unspoiled by ambition or avarice.

4. faenore, money-lending.

5. neque excitatur, etc.: cf. Verg. G. II. 539 necdum etiam audierant inflari classica. The farmer's quiet life is contrasted with the excitement of war, the dangers of the sea (vs. 6), and the worries and annoyances of the city (vss. 7 sq.), as in S. I. 1. 4 sqq. Cf. Verg. G. II. 501 sq. and the whole passage (vss. 495–540). — miles: cf. nepos, I. 34 n.

7. forum: i.e. lawsuits and other legal business, in which one might be involved as suitor or defendant, advocate, bondsman, etc., and money transactions. — superba, etc.: i.e. the humiliation of paying court to the great, alluding particularly to the morning call (salutatio).

9. ergo, and so; i.e. with his mind free from such cares and annoyances. — adulta: after three years' growth in the seminarium.

10. maritat: cf. platanus caelebs, C. II. 15. 4 n, IV. 5. 30. The figure appears to have passed early into current speech; cf. Cato, R. R. 32 arbores facito ut bene maritae sint. — populos: these, with the elm, were regarded as the most suitable, on account of the thinness of their foliage. Their branches were trimmed to form a series of stages (tabulata, Verg. G. II. 361), over which the vine was trained.

11. in reducta valle: cf. C. I. 17. 17. It is to be taken with errantis. — mugientium: cf. Verg. G. I. 272 balantum (sheep); III. 541 natantum (fishes).

13. ramos: sc. of fruit-trees.

14. feliciores, more fruitful, its original meaning (cf. fē-cundus, fē-tus, fē-mina). 'Felices arbores Cato dixit quae fructum ferunt, infelices quae non ferunt' (Fest ap. Paul. p. 92). — inserit: i.e. grafts; cf. insitiva, vs. 19 n.

15. pressa: sc. from the comb. Verg. G. IV. 140 spumantia cogere pressis | mella favis. — amphoris: Intr. 69.

16. infirmas: a standing epithet; cf. Ov. Ib. 43 pecore infirmo.

17. decorum, graced. Autumn is personified; cf. C. IV. 7. 11. — mitibus: i.e. ripe; cf. immitis uvæ, C. II. 5. 10.

18. agris: Intr. 69. — extulit, has lifted up.

19. ut gaudet, how happy he is. For the participle decerpens, which here approaches the meaning of the infinitive, with gaudeo (Intr. 94 d), cf. Ep. II. 2. 106 ridentur mala qui componunt carmina, verum gaudent scribentes. — insitiva: cf. vs. 14. The better varieties can be propagated only by grafting.

20. et: Intr. 114. — purpuræ: see C. II. 5. 12 n, and, for the case, Intr. 57.

21. qua: relating to pira as well as uvam (Gr. 198 a). — Priape: a genius of fertility, whose statue, commonly of wood, was set up in gardens and orchards, 'half god and half scarecrow.' See

S. I. 8. 2 n. — pater: cf. C. I. 2. 50 n.

22. Silvane: a very old Italian divinity, whose attributes bear the stamp of a time when the farmer was a pioneer, and the forest covered a large part of the land. The 'god of the woods' was felt to be very near to his life in all its interests, was the protector of his home, of his fields and flocks (arvorum pecorisque deo, Verg. A. VIII. 601; cf. Ep. II. 1. 143), and of his borders (custos finium). His statue was common in groves and gardens. See Preller-Jordan, Röm. Myth. I. 392.

23. iacere, etc.: cf. C. I. 1. 21, Verg. E. 1. 1.

24. tenaci: i.e. growing thick and luxuriant, with matted roots, in contrast with the sparse grass of a light soil, which can be easily pulled up.

25. altis: the scene is in summer or autumn, when the water in the streams is low. — interim: as he lies there. — ripis: cf. C. I. 2. 19 n; here by or between their banks, as in Lucr. II. 362 summis labentia ripis.

26. queruntur, warble; cf. Ov. Am. III. 1. 4 et latere ex omni dulce queruntur aves.

27. frondesque, etc.: i.e. the rustling of the leaves mingles with the plashing of the water. Cf. Prop. V. 4. 4 multaque nativis obstrepit arbor aquis. If the MSS. reading, fontesque, be retained, lymphīs is instrumental abl., and obstrepunt is used absolutely (as in C. III. 30. 10) in the sense of striking upon the ear. In either case obstrepunt has as direct object a cognate acc., understood as the antecedent of quod, a sound that.

28. levis: cf. C. II. 16. 15.

29. tonantis: here not merely a stock epithet (cf. C. III. 5. 1), but helping to indicate the character of the season.—annus, time (of year); cf. C. III. 23. 8 n, and frigidus annus, Verg. A. VI. 311.—Iovis: see C. I. 1. 25 n, C. S. 32.

31. trudit: of close pursuit. Cf. the metaphorical use, C. II. 18. 15, Ep. I. 5. 17.—hinc et hinc, on every side; cf. 5. 97. It is a poetical variation (but adopted in later prose) of hinc (et) illinc; cf. C. IV. 11. 9 huc et illuc.—multa cane: Intr. 127.

32. plagas: cf. C. I. 1. 28 n.

33. amite: according to Porphyrio, this name was given in his day to furculae quibus retia in venatione vel in aucupio suspenduntur; but the epithet lēvi seems to show that Horace had here in mind the poles (Intr. 127) of the clap-net. See Rich, Dict. s.v.—rara, wide-meshed (as compared with fishing-nets).

34. turdīs: Intr. 59. Cf. Mart. III. 58. 26 sed tendit avidis rete subdolum turdis.

35. pavidum, laqueo: Intr. 135.—advenam: i.e. migratory.

37. malarum quas . . . curas: Intr. 118.

39. quod si: the apodosis begins at vs. 49.—in partem: strictly, equivalent to partim (cf. in unum versum, etc.); but the expression is a condensed one for 'shares his lot in caring for,' etc.

41. Sabina: cf. C. III. 6. 38 n; Stat. Silv. V. 1. 122 sqq., where this description is imitated.—perusta, tanned.—solibus: the plural expresses the repetition of the exposure, as in Lucr. V. 251 perusta solibus adsiduis; cf. C. IV. 5. 8 n.

42. pernecis Apuli: cf. C. III. 16. 26.

43. sacrum, etc.: preparations to welcome her husband home to his evening repast,—pleasing details of the picture of housewifely devotion. The clauses stand in a sort of apposition with in partem iuuet; hence the asyndeton.—sacrum: sc. to the Lares; cf. C. III. 23. 15 n.—vetustis, well seasoned.

44. sub: cf. C. III. 7. 30 n.

45. textis cratibus: i.e. in a fold made of these.—laetum, lusty; so Verg. G. II. 144 armenta laeta. Cf. C. IV. 4. 13 n.

47. dulci: Intr. 124.—dolio: the vessel in which the new wine was fermented, before bottling, which the country people commonly did not wait for (cf. horna).

48. inemptas: i.e. costing nothing. Cf. Verg. G. IV. 133; Mart. IV. 66. 5 saltus aprum, campus leporem tibi misit inemptum.

49. Lucrina conchyliis: probably oysters, rather than the Lucrina peloris (S. II. 4. 32), a large bivalve, which, at a later period at least, was regarded as much inferior to the Lucrine oyster. Cf. Mart. VI. 11. 5 tu Lucrina voras, me pascit aquosa peloris; III. 60. 3 sq.—iuverint magis: Intr. 120.

50. scari: called by Ennius (Heduphagetica 7) cerebrum Iovis paene supremi.

51. si quos: sc. scaros. The scar was found chiefly in the eastern part of the Mediterranean, but was also caught in the neighborhood of Sicily, and in larger numbers after a storm, by which it was thought the fish were driven to those seas.—intonata, thundering down upon. Cf. vs. 29; Intr. 51 f.

53. Afra avis, the guinea-fowl, imported from Numidia; a new delicacy in Horace's day (Varro R. R. III. 9. 18).

54. attagen: a species of grouse,

- non Afra avis descendat in ventrem meum, brought from Asia Minor (Ionicus), 'quondam existimatus inter raras aves' (Plin. N.H. X. 133).

55. pinguissimis: Intr. 124.

57. herba lapathi: used in the promulsis of the more elaborate city dinner; cf. S. II. 4. 29. — gravi: from torpid digestion.

58. malvae: cf. C. I. 31. 16. — salubres corpori: cf. Mart. X. 48. 7.

59. vel agna, etc.: the farmer's ordinary diet was vegetables with salt meat; and fresh meat was a rare treat, indulged in only on occasions of public or private festivity (cf. S. II. 2. 116 sqq.), unless offered by some unexpected chance, as here (vs. 60). — Terminalibus: the festival of Terminus, on the 23d of February. The victim sacrificed was either a lamb or a suckling pig. See Ov. F. II. 655 sqq.

60. haedus, etc.: cf. Mart. X. 48. 14 haedus inhumani raptus ab ore lupi. The wolf was supposed to have good taste in selecting his victim; cf. Plutarch, Symp. II. 9 τὰ λυκόβρωτα πρόβατα λέγεται τὸ κρέας γλυκύτερον παρέχειν.

61. has inter, etc.: the description closes with a picture of the rest and simple enjoyment of the evening hour. Cf. the opening lines of Gray's Elegy.

63. videre: Intr. 116 h.

65. positosque vernas, the home-born slaves (in contrast with the costly imported slaves of wealthy houses) seated (on stools or on the ground) around the hearth (focus Larium, quo familia convenit, Plin. N.H. XXVIII. 267) in the atrium (C. I. 9. 5 n). Cf. S. II. 6. 66 sq. These slaves were seldom sold, if the master could afford to keep them, and, like the 'man-servants and maid-servants' of patriarchal times, formed a conspicuous part of the wealth of a rich household. Cf. Tib. II. 1. 23 turbaque vernerum, saturi bona signa coloni. For the prosody of positos, see Intr. 135.

66. renidentis: an added touch

to the cheerfulness of the scene. The wooden figures of the Lares (see C. III. 23. 15 n), blackened with smoke, were cleansed from time to time, especially on any festive occasion, and rubbed with oil and wax to make them shine in the firelight. Cf. Juv. 12. 87 graciles ubi parva coronas | accipiunt fragili simulacra nitentia cera.

67. locutus: sc. est. — Alfius: a well-known faenerator of this name, probably of Cicero's time, is mentioned by Columella, I. 7. 2. The device of introducing a familiar character of a past generation as the type of a class is one Horace often adopted in his Satires.

68. iam iam futurus: cf. Tac. Ann. I. 47. 5 ut iam iamque iturus, legit comites, conquisivit impedimenta, adornavit naves.

69. redegit: the creditor could call in his loans at will, on giving his debtors due notice. Settlements were generally made on the Kalends, Nones, or Ides. Cf. S. I. 3. 87.

70. quaerit, etc.: the full force of the surprise is reserved for the very last verse, and is enhanced by the dry way in which this brief concluding item of the story is given, without comment. Notice the tense of quaerit, which brings the story close to us: it was only last week that Alfius called in his money; he will invest it again next week, if he can. — ponere: cf. Ep. II. 3. 421 positis in faenore nummis. For the mood, see Intr. 94 c.

III. A humorous diatribe against garlic, to which the poet attributes some acute sufferings that followed a dinner with Maecenas. The garlic, it would seem, was among the ingredients of a dish of herbs, such as the one of which Cicero once partook at an augural banquet ('nam dum volunt isti lauti terra nata . . . in honorem adducere, fungos, helvellas, herbas omnis ita condiunt ut nihil possit esse suavius,' ad Fam. VII. 26. 2) with similar results. Horace treats it as a practical joke on the part of Maecenas. — Metre, 159.

Trin.* 339 dē mendico mālē meretur qui ēi dat quod edit aut bibat. — cicutis: the poison given to condemned criminals at Athens, made famous by the case of Socrates. Horace proposes garlic as a more efficient substitute. The plural of cicuta occurs also in Ep. II. 2. 53. — nocentius, more poisonous; cf. her-

17. munus: the robe which the centaur Nessus, when mortally wounded by the poisoned arrow of Hercules, gave to Deianira, who sent the fatal gift to her husband on hearing of his love for Iole (Ov. M. IX. 101 sqq.); cf. 17. 31 sq.

18. inarsit (with umeris), seared.

19. at: in imitation of imprecations, where it expresses strong emotion, as Ter. And. 666 at tibi di dignum factis exitium duint, Cat. 3. 13 at vobis male sit, malae tenebrae | Orci. Verg. A. II. 535. — concupiveris, crave.

IV. The proscriptions and confiscations of the civil wars, which brought ruin to so many families, brought sudden wealth to others, and the rich upstart was a familiar figure in the society of the day. The vulgar striving of this personage for social recognition and political distinction call out more than once the expression of Horace's scorn, and in S. I. 6 he sets forth at length his view of the matter, illustrating it by a frank discussion of his own case. The present epode is an attack on one of these parvenus, the bitterness of which, in strong contrast with the good-natured tone of the satire, leaves little doubt that the poet is here not merely dealing with a social type, but assailing a real person, and probably one who had crossed his own path. But we are not informed who the person was. The inscription in some mss., 'ad Sextum Menam, Pompei libertum' (see C. III. 16. 15 n) is based on a highly improbable guess; and there is not much more to be said for the inscription in other (and even in some of the same) mss., which names one Vedius Rufus (perhaps the man described by Cicero, ad Att. VI. 1. 25) as the object of the attack. It is to be observed that what excites the poet's 'liberrima indignatio' is not the servile origin of the man, but his arrogant presumption in pushing himself into notoriety and usurping, in virtue of his ill-gotten wealth, the distinctions which belong to merit. — Metre, 159.

1. lupis et agnis: immemorial types of irreconcilable hostility; cf. Il. XXII. 263. Ovid makes a similar use of them, Ib. 43 pax erit haec nobis, donec mihi vita manebit, | cum pecore infirmo (cf.

2. 16 n) quae solet esse lupis. — sortito: i.e. by nature; properly an impersonal abl. abs. (Gr. 255 c). For this use of the word, referring to the original allotment in the constitution of nature, cf. S. II. 6. 93 terrestria quando | mortalis animas vivunt sortita.

3. Hibericis: i.e. made of Spanish spartum, a rush of exceedingly tough fibre, of which ropes, as well as coarse articles of clothing, were made. — peruste, tanned. Cf. Ep. I. 16. 47 loris non ureris. — funibus: used for flogging slaves. — latus, hide; see C. II. 7. 18 n.

4. crura: also taken with peruste (galled); cf. Ep. I. 10. 43. For the two accusatives, see Intr. 43 — compe: worn only by the lowest class of slaves in the country, but by them even while they were at work.

5. ambules, walk abroad; cf. S. I. 4. 65

6. fortuna: i.e. wealth.

7. Sacram viam: the favorite promenade of Rome. Cf. 7. 8 n, S. I. 9. 1. — metiente te, as you stride along; cf. Plaut. Pseud. 1049 quin hinc metimur gradibus militariis?

8. cum: i.e. wearing. Cf. Cic. Brut. 56 cum . . . sacrificium pu- blicum cum laena faceret. — bis trium ulnarum: sc. in breadth. The ulna was about half a yard. The effect would be conspicuous in the ample folds which fell from the shoulders, draped with elaborate care; cf. S. II. 3. 183 latus ut in Circo spatiere.

9. ora vertat: i.e. they flush with indignation. Cf. S. II. 8. 35 vertere pallor tum parochi faciem. — huc et huc, up and down; to be taken with euntium. Cf. hinc et hinc, 2. 31 n. In prose, huc (et) illuc is used.

10. liberrima, outspoken (in the words that follow). Cf. liber amicus, S. I. 4. 132; multa cum libertate notabant, ib. 5.

11. sectus: a vivid variation on the usual caesus; cf. Tib. I. 9. 22 verbera terga seca; Juv. 10. 316. — triumviralibus: i.e. by order of the triumviri capitales, police commissioners charged with the execution of criminals and the preservation of order. In exercising the latter function they had power to inflict summary punishment on slaves and other low characters.

12. praeconis: who stood by while the flogging was administered, and proclaimed the offense

13. arat: i.e. has under cultivation, owns. — Falerni: the ager Falernus was a rich wine-growing district on the Campanian side of Mt. Massicus. — fundi, farm-land.

14. Appiam: sc. viam. — mannis, ponies, fashionable for driving. The reference may be, however, to his journeys to his estates in Campania. Cf. C. III. 27. 7 n. — terit: cf. Mart. XI. 13. 1 quisquis Flaminiam teris viator.

15. sedilibus primis: the fourteen rows of seats in the theatre immediately behind the orchestra, which was occupied by the senators. These front rows, under a law passed by L. Roscius Otho, tribune of the plebs, B.C. 67, were reserved for the equestrian order. — magnus: ironical; cf. S. I. 6. 72 magni | quo pueri magnis e centurionibus orti.

16. contempto: the law in his case defeats its own object, which was to exclude just such persons as he from the seats in question.

17. ora rostrata, beaked fronts, a fanciful expression for the usual term rostra. — navium: used generically; cf. virginum, C. III. 27. 38 n. — gravi pondere, ponderous. The freshness of these allusions gives the impression that the construction of the ships referred to was in progress or recently completed when the epode was written.

This would assign it to the year 37 or 36, when Octavian, after his disastrous defeat by Sextus Pompeius in 38, was engaged in building a new fleet of larger and stouter vessels.

19. latrones, etc.: the pirates and runaway slaves in the service of Sextus. Of the latter class Augustus asserts that he captured and returned to their masters about thirty thousand (Mon. Anc. 5. 1).

20. hoc, hoc: Intr. II 6 d. — tribuno militum: cf. the case of Tillius, S. I. 6. 24 sqq., and also 45 sqq., where Horace admits the justice of the objection in his own case.

V. The clairvoyants and mediums of the present day had their counterpart in the professors of necromancy and magic who plied their trade with abundance of patronage and profit among a people so superstitious as the Romans. In this epode Horace exposes the practices of these persons in their worst form, where absurdity was carried to the point of crime. Four old hags, who have enticed a boy away from his home, suddenly seize him and drag him into their house, where he is to be subjected to a lingering death, buried in the ground up to his chin, with food in sight, that they may make a philter out of his marrow and liver. That children actually were made away with in the manner described, or at least that this was firmly believed, is shown by an epitaph (CIL. VI. 19747) on a boy, Iucundus, who had been so stolen: IN QVARTVM · SVRGENS · COMPREN- SVS · DEPRIMOR · ANNVVM | CVM POSSEM · MATRI · DVLCIS · ET · ESSE PATRI | ERIPVIT · ME · SAGA · MANVS CRVDELIS · VBIQVE | CVM · MANET IN · TERRIS · ET · NOCIT · ARTE SVA | VOS · VESTROS · NATOS · CONCVSTO- DITE PARENTES | NĪ · DOLOR · IN TOTO · PECTORE · FIXVS · EAT. The leader of the unlovely quartet is Canidia, whom Horace has made a conspicuous figure in his earlier writings. Her real name, the scholiasts profess to know, was Gratidia, her birthplace Naples, and her trade the manufacture of perfumes. Tradition further asserts that Horace had been her lover, that the bitter lampoons which he has left us in this and the seventeenth epode were the outcome of a lover's quarrel, and that these are none other than the celerēs iambi which he recants in C. I. 16. All this is highly improbable, and may be safely dismissed as an ill-contrived hypothesis to connect together the data of the poems. The earliest published poem in which Canidia is mentioned is perhaps S. I. 8, where her magic performances are ridiculed, but without a trace of bitterness. Equally devoid of personal feeling are the verses (S. II. i. 48, 8. 95. Epod. 3. 8) where Horace makes a passing allusion to her as a poisoner. If she was a real person,—which seems, on the whole, probable,—we may safely assume that she was an unguentaria; as such she would be resorted to by the ignorant and superstitious for love potions and other nostrums known to the quackery of the day, and, unless her reputation belied her, she was also ready, like her famous successor, Locusta, to concoct more harmful drugs. She was a notorious character, whom Horace felt at liberty to use as a type of her class, in holding up their practices to ridicule.—Metre, 159.

1. at: expressing sudden emotion; cf. its use in imprecations (see 3. 19 n). The words are those of the boy, who has been seized by the women and dragged into the atrium of the house. — deorum quicquid: cf. Liv. XXIII. 9. 3 iurantes per quicquid deorum est; S. I. 6. 1 Lydorum quicquid. — in caelo: simply used to round out the phrase, like ‘all the fish in the sea,’ etc. A distinction between the gods of heaven and those of the underworld is not to be thought of in the mind of the frightened boy.

3. fert, means; lit. ‘brings,’ i.e. what will it lead to? — quid: sc. ferunt.

4. voltus in me truces: cf. acer . . . voltus in hostem, C. I. 2. 39.

5. te: Canidia.—si vocata, etc.: see 17. 50 n. The allusion in both places assumes that the poet's readers are familiar with the story.

6. Lucina: cf. C. S. 15, C. III. 22. 2 n.—veris: the poet's own malice breaks through the fiction in this insinuation, which is quite out of character in the mouth of the child.

7. inane: as not having secured him the respect which it ought.—purpurae decus: the purple border of his toga, which was a mark at once of tender years and of gentle breeding.

8. improbaturum: a mild term, but sufficient when applied to the deity, whose mere displeasure is to be dreaded.

9. ut noverca: cf. Sen. Contr. IV. 6 hic tuus est; quid alterum novercalibus oculis intueris? and see note on patruae, C. III. 12. 1.

12. insignibus: his praetexta and the bullæ or locket which he wore on his breast, suspended from his neck.

13. impube corpus: in apposition with puer. Even if the ordinary symbols of youth and innocence had failed to affect them, the sight of his tender body might have touched the heart of a savage.

15. brevibus, etc.: Canidia's make-up is that of a fury, which she is called in S. I. 8. 45. Cf. Lucan's description of Erichtho, VI. 654 sqq.

16. crinis, caput: Intr. 42.

17. sepulcris: Intr. 70.—caprificos: the wild fig-tree grew on walls and tombs, and, sending its roots into their cracks and joints, sometimes split them apart,—a type of the destructive forces which mock the elaborate efforts of man to immortalize his memory. Cf. Mart. X. 2. 9 marmora Messalae findit caprificus; Juv. 10. 144 sq. Here it is chosen from its association with the tomb and death.

18. cupressos: also associated with the tomb, but here branches used at some funeral (funebri) are meant. See C. II. 14. 23 n.

19. uncta, smeared. Cf. C. II. 1. 5. — ranae: sc. rubetae, a poisonous frog; cf. Plin. N. H. VIII. 110 ranae rubetae, quarum et in terra et in humore vita, plurimis refertae medicaminibus deponere ea cotidie ac resumere pastu dicuntur, venena tantum semper sibi reservantes. Cf. Juv. 1. 69.

20. strigis: limiting both ova and plumam. The strix was a bugbear of the nursery, described as a screeching, owl-like bird which carried off unguarded babies from their cradles (Ov. F. VI. 131 sqq.). Pliny was unable to identify it (N. H. XI. 232), and it was probably nothing but a mythical distortion of the screech-owl itself, which from its appearance and habits was naturally regarded as a bird of ill omen (funebri et maxime abominatus, . . . noctis monstrum . . . ; itaque in urbibus aut omnino in luce visus dirum ostentum est, Plin. N. H. X. 34).

21. Iolcos: cf. vs. 45 and C. I. 27. 21 n. — Hiberia: under the Caucasus range, adjacent to Colchis.

22. venenorum: Intr. 66a.

23. ieiunae: in order to impart to the potion the craving of baffled appetite.

24. Colchicis: i.e. kindled with certain forms and spells which were supposed to give them magic potency; cf. C. II. 13. 8 n. With this whole witch's outfit, cf. Prop. IV. 6. 27 illum turgentis ranae portenta rubetae | et lecta exsectis anguibus ossa trahunt | et strigis inventae per busta iacentia plumae | cinctaque funesto lanea vitta toro.

25. expedita: i.e. with her skirt tucked up (cf. succincta, S. I. 8. 23) so as not to impede her brisk movements. — Sagana: Canidia's companion in S. I. 8, where it is implied that there were two sisters of this name.

26. spargens, etc.: the usual form of purification (lustratio) in sacrifices to the gods below, funeral rites, etc.; cf. Verg. A. IV. 635, VI. 229 sq. — Avernalis: cf. Verg. A. IV. 512. Lake Avernus was supposed to be connected with the underworld.

28. currens: not added in reference to capillis asperis, — as if his bristles were erect only when he runs, — but as part of the picture which Sagana rushing about the house suggests.

29. Veia: the third witch, who digs in the impluvium the hole in which the boy is to be buried.

30. ligonibus: Intr. 128. — duris: the epithet hints at the laboriousness of her task, the hardness of the tool implying a difficult substance to dig into, as the earth in the impluvium was. Cf. ingemens laboribus, below.

31. exhauriebat: properly used of removing the earth after digging it loose with the hoe (Caes. B. G. V. 42. 3 gladiis caespites circumcidere, manibus sagulisque terram exhaurire cogebantur); here it stands for both operations. — ingemens: cf. Verg. G. I. 45 depresso incipiat iam tum mihi taurus aratro | ingenere.

32. quo: adverb (lit. 'into which') with infossus; cf. Caes. B. G. VII. 73. 9 (taleae in terram infodiebantur).

33. longo: sc. to the boy, in his torture. — bis terque, again and again; cf. Ep. II. 3. 440 bis terque expertum frustra. — mutatae: to tempt his appetite by variety.

34. inemori, pine to death at;

found only here. The prefix has the same force as in ingemere, 31 indormire, S. I. I. 71, etc., and the simpler form immori, Ep. I. 7. 85. Cf. also intabuissent, 40 n. The poor boy's passionate craving for food was to be conveyed, through his vital parts, into the philter, and endow the latter with the power of exciting insatiable desire.

36. suspensa mento: a fanciful paraphrase for natantia.

37. exsecta, aridum: see Intr. 121. — medulla: the innermost part of the body and the hardest to reach; cf. its figurative use, Ep. I. 10, 28, Cat. 64. 93 imis exarsit tota medullis, etc.; hence imagined to be the most potent medium of magic influence. — iecur: the seat of the passions; cf. I. 13. 4.

39. semel: with cum, and applying to the whole clause. — fixae, fastened upon. — cibo: dative with both fixae (Intr. 56) and intabuissent (cf. Sen. de Cons. ad Polyb. 5. 2 quid iuvat dolori intabescere?); Intr. 76.

41. defuisse: implying more than afuisse, — that she belonged in the company, and would have been missed if absent. — libidinis: Intr. 61.

42. Foliam: apparently a notorious character at Naples. There is no little art in the way she is introduced: by basing her presence only on hearsay, and attempting no details of her part in the orgy, the poet gives the impression that the evidence as to the others was explicit and trustworthy.

43. otiosa: and hence gossipy (otium serendis rumoribus natum, Curt. VIII. 9. 1); a characteristic, according to the Roman standard, of the Greeks (gens lingua magis strenua quam factis, Livy VIII. 22. 8). Cf. NT. Acts, 17. 21: 'Now all the Athenians and the strangers sojourning there spent their time in nothing else but either to tell or to hear some new thing.' Naples in particular was proverbial for its idle life; cf. Ovid M. XV. 711 in otia natam Parthenopen. The shores of the bay, too (omne vicinum oppidum), were lined with villas, the resort of people of leisure, and no doubt hotbeds of gossip.

45. sidera: cf. 17. 4. sq., and Tib. I. 2. 43 hanc (sagam) ego de caelo ducentem sidera vidi. — Thes- sala: i.e. magic; cf. Colchicis 24 n, and see C. I. 27. 21 n.

46. lunam: cf. 17. 78, and Verg. E. 8. 69 carmina vel caelo possunt deducere lunam. — deripit: present of customary action, not historical.

47. hic, then; but it refers not so much to the time as to the circumstances and surroundings of the act,—the stage of preparation described in what precedes. Cf. Verg. A. I. 728 hic regina gravem gemmis auroque poposcit | implevitque mero pateram. — inresectum: cf. S. I. 8. 26 scalpere terram unguibus . . . coeperunt. For the prefix re- cf. C. III. 24. 34 n.

48. rodens: in her violent agitation.

49. tacuit: i.e. 'thought,' since tacere with an object means to refrain from saying what one knows or thinks. The words that follow are to be regarded as partly spoken or muttered, and partly expressing the thoughts which passed through her mind, but were not spoken aloud. — rebus meis, my cause, my fortunes (cf. C. IV. 6. 23), in contrast with hostilis domos 53; dat. after adeste (cf. tuis rebus adero, Cic. ad Fam. VI. 14. 3), with which arbitrae is joined as predicate nominative.

50. non infideles: i.e. true to the obligation of secrecy which her trust imposed upon them.—arbitrae: equivalent, under the circumstances, to consciae. See next note.

51. Nox et Diana: cf. Ov. M. VII. 192 (of Medea) 'Nox,' ait arcanis fidissima, . . . | tuque triiceps Hecate, quae coeptis conscia nostris | adiutrixque venis cantusque artisque magorum, and see C. III. 22. 4 n.—silentium: essential for magic rites.

53. nunc, nunc: Intr. 116 d.—hostilis: not those of her rivals (which would require inimicas), but those of 'the enemy' in general—a common clause in ancient prayers. Cf. C. III. 27. 21 n.

54. iram atque numen, your all-powerful wrath. Intr. 126 a.

55–60. Though she has already made preparations for concocting a more potent drug, she is not without hope that an ointment previously applied, though thus far ineffective, may still do its work.

57. senem: named Varus in vs. 73, an old fop. There is no evidence to show whether Horace had a real person in mind.—quod omnes rideant, amid general laughter. The laughter is at the foppery of the old man; cf. Plaut. Cas. 222 sénectan actate unguentatus pér vias, ignáve, incedis?

58. latrent: transitive as in Ep. I. 2. 66; Intr. 51 c (2). She hopes to hear the barking of the dogs as an indication of his approach; cf. Verg. E. 8. 107.—Suburanae: i.e. those of the neighborhood. The Subura, the slums of Rome, was in the hollow, east of the forums, between the Esquiline and the Quirinal and Viminal hills. It was the most densely settled and the busiest and noisiest (clamosa Mart. XII. 18. 2) part of the city, full of small shops, eating-houses, and low resorts. Cf. Pers. 5. 32 sq. Here was the house of Canidia.

59. nardo: see C. II. 11. 16 n.—quale non: quo non would be more usual. With quale the other term of the comparison (tuli) is understood: 'of a sort, of which . . . none more perfect (than this)'; cf. S. I. 5. 41 (Varius Vergiliusque) animae qualis neque candidiores terra tulit.

61. quid accidit: as the stillness remains unbroken, she tries to think what unforeseen circumstance has counteracted her drugs.—minus: here equivalent to pa-

rum, expressing simply failure to come up to her expectations; cf. Cic. Div. I. 24 at non numquam ea quae praedicta sunt minus eveniunt; Plaut. Cas. 918 monebo, si qui meministi minus.

62. Medae: i.e. identical in their composition with those Medea used on the occasion referred to. Cf. Tib. I. 2. 51 (of a saga): sola tenere malas Medae dicitur herbas.

63. quibus: with ulta which here contains the main statement, like delibutis, 3. 13. — superbam: as a triumphant rival. — paelicem: cf. 3. 13 n.

65. tabo imbutum, plague-tainted; tabum here in the sense of tabes, as in Ov. M. XV. 627 pallidaque exsanguisqualebant corpora tabo.

66. abstulit: cf. C. II. 16. 29, S. I. 9. 31.

67. nec fefellit: i.e. I have found and gathered every one (of those required by Medea's recipe).

69. indormit, etc.: as there are still no signs of his approach, she casts about for the cause of her failure. Her first thought is that her spells have proved ineffective: 'Can it be that he is going to sleep over (and in spite of) the magic drugs with which I have anointed his bed?' For indormit, cf. inemori, 34 n.

71. a, a: Intr. 185. Her second thought flashes upon her as the true explanation, — 'Some rival has done this!' — and at once puts her in a fury that spurs her on to redoubled efforts. — solutus: cf. C. I. 27. 21. — ambulat: cf. 4. 5 n.

 Sub haec puer iam non, ut ante, mollibus

 85 sed dubius unde rumperet silentium, misit Thyesteas preces :

75. nec vocata, etc.: i.e. and the incantations which will draw your heart back to me will not be of the Marsic sort. Others, following Porphyrio, interpret thus: ‘And your heart (when I once get control of it) will not return (to those who now control it) at the call of Marsic spells.’ But the contrast of the emphatic Marsis (Intr. 116 b) with maius 77 makes the former more probable. For mens in this sense, cf. C. I. 13. 5 n.

76. Marsis vocibus: here used disparagingly for the simple spells of the Italian countryside. The Marsi were especially noted for snake-charming and magic cures (Gell. XVI. 11. 1); cf. 17. 29 n.

77. maius: i.e. in quality, more powerful. — infundam, administer; stronger than dabo; cf. Cic. Phil. 11. 13 at hic nuper sororis filio infudit venenum, non dedit.

79. inferius: for the prosody see Intr. 135.

81. uti bitumen, etc.: a comparison drawn from her own occupations. Cf. Verg. E. 8. 82.

82. atris: here used of the actual color of the flames, and not like nigris, C. IV. 12. 26.

83. sub haec, hereupon; cf. S. II. 8. 43, and see C. III. 7. 30 n.

84. lenire: Intr. 91.

85. dubius, etc.: i.e. with varied emotions pressing for utterance. — unde, etc.: i.e. what he should say first, unde being used as with a ‘word of beginning,’ which rumperet silentium is in effect; cf. Cornif. ad Herenn. I. 14 inde incipimus narrare, unde necesse erit.

86. Thyesteas preces: familiar to Romans from the Thyestes of Ennius. Cf. Cic. in Pis. 43 Thyesteas est ista exsecratio poetae vulgi animos, non sapientium movens. The curse is quoted LL. and Tusc. I. 107. Varius also, and, subsequently, Seneca, wrote a Thyestes. For preces in this sense, cf. S. II. 6. 30; Caes. B. G. VI. 31. 5 omnibus precibus detestatus Ambiorigem. For an actual instance of such dying imprecations, see Tac. Ann. VI. 24. 3.

87. venena, etc.: an obscure and undoubtedly corrupt passage for which no satisfactory expla-

‘Venena magnum fas nefasque non valent

90 nulla expiatur victima.

nation or emendation has been suggested. See Crit. App. The general meaning appears to be this : Sorcery (venena) has no power to reverse, after the manner of men (humanam vicem), the great law of righteousness and sin ; i.e. your drugs may influence mortal minds, as you claim ; if you incur the sin of taking my innocent life, they cannot save you from the vengeance of heaven, which will give effect to my dying imprecations ; and when these have been pronounced, repentance will come too late (nulla expiatur victima). For fas nefasque convertere, cf. Verg. G. I. 505 fas versum atque nefas ; Ov. M. VI. 585 fasque nefasque | confusura ruit ; for humanam vicem, Sardanapali vicem in meo lectulo mori, Cic. ad Att. X. 8. 7, is quoted. For the infin. convertere, see Intr. 94*n.*

89. diris, curses, as in Tac. l. l. dira detestatio is a more solemn expression for the same thing.

90. nulla, etc. : such was the current belief. Cf. C. I. 28. 34 ; Plin. N.H. XXVIII. 19 defigi quidem diris precationibus nemo non metuit.

92. furor : here used as a masculine form for furia, an avenging spirit.

93. umbra : cf. Verg. A. IV. 386 omnibus umbra locis adero ; dabis, improbe, poenas.

94. quae vis : i.e. the power to return to earth and torment their murderers ; cf. Val. Flacc. III. 384 sqq.—deorum manium : the (sanctified) spirits of the righteous. Cf. Liv. III. 58. 11 manesque Verginia . . . per tot domos ad petendas poenas vagati, nullo relicto fonte, tandem quieverunt.

95. inquietis : proleptic.—adsidens : as a nightmare.

97. hinc et hinc : cf. 2. 31 n.

98. obscaenas, uncanny, gruesome ; the cause of the popular aversion ; cf. Verg. G. I. 470.

99. post : adverb.

100. Esquilinae : those that neque hoc parentes, heu mihi superstites, effugerit spectaculum.'

VI.

Quid immerentis hospites vexas canis ignavus adversum lupos?

Quin huc inanis, si potes, vertis minas et me remorsurum petis?

haunted the hill when it was the Potters' Field of Rome. Cf. S. I. 8. 8 sqq. For the hiatus, see Intr. 185.

101. neque hoc effugerit (fut. pf.): i.e. and it will not pass by without their having seen it. — heu mihi superstites: the boy forgets for the moment his own horrible situation in pity for the unhappy lot of his parents, doomed to suffer an affliction from which in the regular course of nature they should be spared. The double pathos of this reversal of the order of nature impressed the ancients, whose vague and cheerless notions of future life afforded them no consolation for bereavement or untimely death, with a force which we cannot well appreciate. With admirable art the poet breaks off at this point, having carried us, along with the tender thoughts of the boy, past the repulsive scene about to be enacted, and leaving us with the picture of the bereaved parents consoled by the punishment of the murderers of their child. He illustrates here in narrative the precepts which he gives for the stage, Ep. II. 3. 182 sqq.

VI. A challenge, addressed to a scurrilous poet, who is taunted with prudently confining his abuse to those who were powerless to respond. The person addressed is unknown to us. The character attributed to him corresponds with the account given by Tacitus (Ann. I. 72. 4.) of Cassius Severus, who was banished by Augustus under the law of treason, — the first instance in which that law was applied to restrict liberty of speech. Cassius, however, belonged to a younger generation than Horace, and the inscription 'ad Cassium Severum,' found in some manuscripts, can be no more than a guess. Equally conjectural is the inscription ad Mevium (cf. Epode 10), and the suggestions of Bibaculus, Anser, and others have no evidence to rest on. — Metre, 159.

1. hospites, passers by, wayfarers; frequently used in this sense (like viator, e.g. Mart. XI. 13. 1) in epitaphs in which the reader is directly addressed. Cf. Allen's Remnants of Early Latin, 137, 138. — canis: i.e. one set to watch the flocks; cf. vs. 6.

3. inanis: i.e. all bark and no bite. — si potes, if you dare; cf. C. III. 11. 31 n.

4. remorsurum: Intr. 104 c.

5. Molossus aut Lacon: without canis; cf. our 'Newfoundland,' 'Skye,' etc. These superior breeds are mentioned together by Vergil, G. III. 405. The Molos

7. sublata : i.e., arrecta.

9. complesti : Intr. 183.

10. proiectum, flung to you, with a suggestion of contempt in the action, proicere meaning usually 'to throw away.' The ordinary word in this connection is obicere. But see Crit. App. — odoraris cibum : i.e. you are ready to be bribed to hold your tongue; you are seeking blackmail.

11. cave, cave : Intr. 116 d.

12. parata : Intr. 124. — tollo cornua : a metaphorical expression, not inconsistent with what precedes, because the figure of the two dogs has been abandoned, and Horace begins in vs. 11. to speak in his own person. Cf. S. I. 4. 34.

13. Lycambae : attacked with such bitterness by the poet Archilochus, to whom he had first promised and then refused (infido) his daughter Neobule, that both father and daughter were driven to suicide. Cf. Ep. I. 19. 25, 30 sq. The dative depends on the general notion of hostile attack, derived from tollo cornua 12. — spretus : Intr. 103. — gener, as a son-in-law.

14. hostis : the poet Hipponax. His resentment against Bupalus was roused by a joke of the latter, who, with another sculptor, named Athenis, had made a likeness of the poet's features, which are said to have been uncommonly homely, and exhibited it for the entertainment of their friends (Plin. N. H. XXXVI. 12).

15. an, etc. : with this conclusion, cf. 17. 76 sqq. — atro dente : i.e. with malicious abuse. Ater seems to be used as in versibus atris, Ep. I. 19. 30 ; cf. the similar use of niger, S. I. 4. 85, 91, 100. The tooth is figuratively the weapon of envy and malice ; cf. C. IV. 3. 16 ; Ov. Tr. IV. 10. 123 nec . . . livor iniquo | ullum de nostris dente momordit opus ; *Mart. VII. On the threatened renewal of civil war. The occasion cannot be determined with certainty, but it was probably the outbreak of hostilities between the triumvirs and Sextus Pompeius in the spring of B.C. 38, owing to their failure to carry out the stipulations of the treaty made at Misenum the preceding August. The treaty had been hailed with delight by the people, as affording them a prospect of peace at last, after a dozen years of civil dissension and bloodshed; and the rude shattering of their hopes within a twelvemonth might well awaken the gloomy feeling which Horace expresses, — that the curse of fraternal strife had been fastened upon the nation by the crime with which its career had begun. A poem in this spirit could hardly have come from Horace at a later date. It is cast in dramatic form, the poet throwing himself in front of the combatants, as it were, to make his appeal. — Metre, 159.

1. quo, quo: Intr. 116 d. — scelesti: cf. C. I. 2. 29, 35. 33 sqq., II. 1. 5. — ruitis: cf. C. I. 3. 26. — cur dexteris, etc.: i.e. why do you grasp the hilt of your sheathed swords?

2. conditi: sc. in the scabbard. Cf. 'put up your sword.'

3. campis: Intr. 69. — Neptuno: Intr. 130. — super: Intr. 115 b. For the meaning cf. C. I. 9. 5 n.

5. non ut: added as if the fact implied in the preceding question had been stated affirmatively, — 'blood enough has been shed, and not (as of old) to destroy a powerful rival, nor to win new conquests, but, etc.' — invidae: cf. *Sal. 7. intactus: cf. C. III. 24. 1 n. The epithet is here substantially, though not literally, accurate, as the raids of Julius Caesar into Britain had made no permanent impression, and the Romans had no foothold in the island. With this allusion cf. C. III. 5. 3, and see intr. note to C. I. 35.

rum; a favorite promenade of Rome at this time (cf. 4. 7, S. I. 9. 1) and the most brilliant portion of the route of the triumphal procession, which passed from the Campus Martius through the Velabrum and the Circus Maximus, along the foot of the Palatine to the Velia, and thence down the Sacra via (cf. C. IV. 2. 35 n), and through the Forum to the foot of the clivus Capitolinus.—catenatus: i.e. as a prisoner before the triumphal car.

9. secundum, etc.: cf. C. II. 1. 31 n; II. I. 255 ἡ κεν γηθήσαι Πηλεΐδης Πριάμοιό τε παῖδες | ἄλλοι τε Τρῶες μέγα κεν κεχαρομένοισιν θυμῷ, | ἐλ σφῶν τὰδε πάντα πυθολάτο μαρναμένους. The feeling is the complement of that referred to in 5. 53, C. III. 27. 1 n.—Parthorum: the successors of Carthage as the most powerful rival of Rome.—sua: emphatic; Intr. 116 c. For the thought, cf. 16. 2.

14. culpa, guilt (of fratricide; cf. C. I. 35. 33), which pursues you like a curse, and goads you on to new wickedness.

15. tacent, etc.: he pauses a moment for a reply, and then turns, as it were, to the bystanders.—albus, ghastly; cf. 10. 16 n.

16. percussae, with dismay; sc. at the thought that they are swept on by some mighty force.

17. acerba fata: the vis acrior of vs. 13, as scelus, etc. repeats culpa, 14.—agunt: cf. 5. 89 diris agam vos.

VIII. An affected taste for literature combined with gross sensuality is the subject satirized, with a degree of coarseness to which Horace rarely descends, in this epode. The person attacked is represented as a woman of wealth and noble family, and the portrait appears to have been drawn from life. — Metre, 159.

1. rogare te : the inf. expresses indignation (Intr. 92), the ground of which is given in putidam, etc. — longo saeculo : hyperbole for longa aetate.

3. dens : used collectively; Intr. 127. — ater : cf. C. II. 8. 3. — vetus, extreme.

12. triumphales : i.e. of ancestors who had triumphed. This would be indicated by the insignia worn with the mask, and would be a mark of the highest nobility.

13. nec : Intr. 89 N. — marita : for matrona. Cf. Ov. F. II. 139 hic castas duce se iubet esse maritas. — rotundioribus : i.e. more perfect in shape; cf. Plin. N. H. IX. 112 dos omnis (sc. unionibus) in candore, magnitudine, orbe, levore, pondere.

IX. To Maecenas, on the arrival at Rome of the first tidings of victory from Actium. The poet calls on his patron (who, according to the best evidence, was in Rome at this time; see intr. note to Epode 1) to institute a thanksgiving banquet for the great victory, as he had done a few years before, on the defeat of Sextus Pompeius. Meantime he pursues his own reflections on the contest and its glorious issue, and bids his slave bring larger cups and wine, which 'artehac nefas depromere,' but in which they may now wash away their anxieties for Caesar's fortunes. The epode was written in September, B.C. 31, nearly a year before C. I. 37, which celebrates the death of Cleopatra. — Metre, 159.

6. hac, etc.: a construction according to the sense, as if the preceding words had been carmen sonantibus mixtim tibiis lyraque, or the like. — Dorium: spirited, but serious, adapted to warlike themes; barbarum: i.e. Phrygian (cf. C. III. 19. 18, IV. 1. 22, Cat. 63. 22), a more lively style, suited to revels and orgies (cf. Cat. 64. 264).

10. servis: cf. 4. 19 n. For the case, Intr. 76.—perfidis: as having run away from their masters, and now fighting against them.

11. Romanus, a son of Rome; referring to the soldiers of Antonius; see Intr. 127.—posterī negabitīs: cf. credite posterī, C. II. 19. 2 n.

12. emancipatus, in bondage to.

13. fert, etc.: i.e. marches in the ranks, serves as a soldier; enhancing the humiliation of his subjection to a woman. In the same way miles, in the next clause, is contrasted with spadonibus. Cf. C. III. 5. 9.—et: Intr. 114.

14. potest: cf. C. III. 11. 31 n.

15. turpe (with conopium), a disgraceful sight.

16. sol adspicit: implying a sense of shame that the Roman soldiery should be seen in the light of day in such effeminate company.—conopium: cf. Prop. IV. 11. 45 foedaque Tarpeio conopia tendere saxo (ausa). The scorn concentrated upon this foreign word is pointed not only at the foreign abomination itself, but at the outrage to Roman tradition and sentiment in allowing a woman to exercise authority in camp; cf. Tac. Ann. III. 33. 2 haud enim frustra placitum olim ne feminae in socios aut gentes externas traherentur; inesse mulierum comitatu quae . . . Romanum agmen ad similitudinem barbari incessus convertant.

17. vertērunt: Intr. 178.

18. Galli: Galatians, under the younger Deiotarus, who deserted to Octavian before the battle.—canentes Caesarem: cf. Verg. A. VII. 698 ibant aequati numero, regemque canebant.

19. hostiliumque, etc.: an obscure passage, not explained by any account of the battle that has come down to us. It seems clear, however, that Horace is speaking of a defection in the naval forces of Antonius, corresponding to that just referred to in his land army; and we may suppose that the first account that reached Rome not only reported such a defection, but described the manœuvre by which it was accomplished. What this manœuvre was we cannot determine. sinistrorsum is very likely a nautical term, and with citae means 'with a swift movement to port.' By this movement, it would seem, the ships were reported to have abandoned the fleet and taken refuge in the harbor from which they had sailed out to battle.

21. io Triumphe: cf. C. IV. 2. 49 n. — tu moraris: equivalent to an exhortation to make haste; cf. the colloquial use of cessare, as Ter. And. 343 cessas adloqui? C. III. 27. 58. — aureos currus, the gilded car, in which Caesar shall ride to the Capitol. Intr. 128.

22. intactas (sc. ingo): an essential requirement in sacrificial animals. — boves: with the sacrifice of which on the Capitol the ceremonies of the triumph closed.

23. nec Iugurthino, etc.: i.e. a greater than Marius is awaiting his triumph, — a greater than Africanus (Minor). The mention of the Jugurthine war, rather than the repulse of the Germanic invasion by Marius in B.C. 102 and 101, a far greater achievement, may have been due to the recent appearance of Sallust's Iugurtha. — parem: sc. huic quem nunc reportaturus es.

24. reportasti: more commonly used of the spoils of war, of glory, or even of the triumph itself (Plin. N. H. Praef. 30); sometimes, as here, of the triumphant general; cf. Cic. post Red. 28 non reducti sumus in patriam, . . . sed equis insignibus et curru aurato reportati.

25. neque Africanum: sc. huic parem reportasti. — super: in a figurative sense. Cf. C. III. 5. 39 o magna Carthago, probrosis | altior Italiae ruinis!

26. sepulcrum: here (with virtus condidit) thought of as the monument rather than as the place of burial.

27. hostis: Antonius. — punico: used like Tyrius (e.g. S. II. 4. 84 Tyrias vestis) for purple. Puniceus is the commoner form in this sense; cf. C. IV. 10. 4 n. A purple or white cloak was usually worn by a general going into battle. Cf. Val. Max. I. 6. 11. (of Crassus at Carrhae) pullum (the color of mourning) ei traditum est paludamentum, cum in proelium exeuntibus album aut purpureum dari soleat. For the case see Intr. 74.

28. lugubre, sombre; the change was like putting on mourning. — sagum: a plain soldier's mantle in place of the general's cloak

(more properly called paludamentum); see vs. 27 n. This change of dress Horace probably assumes as a matter of course; he could hardly have received any authentic report to that effect. The same was told of Pompey after Pharsalus (Caes. B. C. III. 96. 3): equum nactus detractis insignibus imperatoriiis decumana porta se ex castris eiecit).

29. ille . . . petit: Intr. 120.—centum, etc.: cf. C. III. 27. 33 n.—nobilem, famous. Cf. C. I. 8. 12, 12. 27.

30. iturus: Intr. 104 b.—non suis: i.e. not favorable.

31. exercitatas: cf. C. IV. 14. 20 undas exercet Auster.—Syrtis: see C. I. 22. 5 n; II. 6. 3 n.

32. incerto: i.e. in which he has lost his bearings; Intr. 124.

33. puer: see C. I. 19. 14 n.—scyphos: see C. I. 27. 1 n.

34. Chia . . . Lesbia: sweet and mild Greek wines, likely to be drunk in excess, with the result mentioned (no doubt with less offense to Roman taste than to ours) in the next verse. The effect was counteracted by drinking the harsher Italian wines along with the Greek (see S. II. 8. 15), and sometimes the two were mixed (S. I. 10. 24).—aut, or (else); one of the two.

36. metire: sc. with cyathi. See C. III. 19. 11 n.

37. curam solvere: cf. curis expeditis, I. 22. 11 n.—rerum: objective genitive; cf. Verg. A. II. 413 ereptae virginis ira.

X. Bavius and Mevius, two poets of the old school, made themselves so offensive by their criticism and detraction to the literary circle to which Horace belonged, that their names have become inseparably associated with those of their betters whom they decried, and have thus escaped the oblivion which speedily overtook their works. The milder tempered Vergil confines his expression of dislike to a single verse, E. 3. 90 qui Bavium non odit amet tua carmina, Mevi. Horace, in this epode, makes a voyage of Mevius to Greece the occasion of a vituperative personal attack, in which he gives free rein to his hatred and contempt, and which acquires additional force by contrast with the good wishes usually spoken on such an occasion.—Metre, I 59.

1. mala alite: cf. mala avi, C. I. 15. 5 n; to be taken with soluta, for which cf. C. III. 2. 29.

3. ut verberes: optative subj. (Gr. 267 b), memento being parenthetical.—latus: sc. of the ship.

4. Auster, etc.: all the winds unfavorable to a voyage to Greece are called upon to concentrate their fury on the ill-fated ship.

5. niger: cf. C. I. 5. 7 n.—Euris: cf. C. I. 28. 25.—inverso mari: cf. Verg. A. I. 84 incubuere mari, totumque a sedibus imis | una Eurisque Notusque ruunt (upheave).

6. differat: cf. 5. 99.

7. quantus, as powerful as when.—montibus: Intr. 69.

10. tristis: cf. C. I. 3. 14.—Orion: see C. I. 28. 21 n; Intr. 178.—cadit: cf. C. III. 1. 27 n.

12. Graia victorum manus: cf. Cat. 31. 13 Lydiae lacus undae. The shifting of the attribute is similar to that of Intr. 124.

13. cum Pallas, etc.: for the story see Odys. IV. 499 sqq., Verg. A. I. 39 sqq.—Illo: see C. I. 10. 14 n.

14. impiam: Intr. 124. Ajax had dragged Cassandra from the altar of Pallas; cf. Verg. A. II. 403 sqq.

15. quantus instat, etc.: cf. C. I. 15. 9.

16. luteus: expressing the greenish yellow hue of paleness in dark complexions, such as are common in southern Europe; cf. Tib. I. 8. 52 nimius luto corpora tingit amor; Cat. 64. 100 magis fulgore expalluit auri; C. III. 10. 14 n.

XI.

Petti, nihil me sicut antea iuvat scribere versiculos amore percutsum gravi,

17. illa: insinuating that it was habitual with him. — non virilis: cf. Cic. Tusc. II. 55 ingemescere non numquam viro concessum est, idque raro; eiulatus ne mulieri quidem.

18. et: Intr. 114. — aversum: cf. C. III. 23. 19 n.

19. Ionius sinus: the same as Hadriae sinus, C. III. 27. 19. The adjective should not be confused with Ionicus, 2. 54, C. III. 6. 21. — udo: i.e. rainy.

20. Noto: ablative with remugiens; cf. ventis, C. III. 10. 7.

21. opima praeda, a rich treat. — quod si: introducing the conclusion as in C. I. 1. 35. Intr. 114. The savage bitterness of this closing malediction is not softened, but rather enhanced by a cynical observance of the proprieties of language in abstaining from any direct mention of death and suppressing the real subject of the sentence, — either tu (if iuveris had been used) or corpus tuum, which is implied, however, in porrecta (cf. C. III. 10. 3).

22. mergos: among the most voracious of birds, but Horace is wrong in thinking they eat carrion.

23. immolabitur: even the usual thank-offering for a friend's safe return from sea is to have its counterpart on the luckless end of this voyage.

24. agna Tempestatibus: cf. Verg. A. V. 772.

XI. The poet professes to have lost all interest in writing verses, being once more a victim of love, after a long respite. Of Pettius, to whom the piece is addressed, we know no more than what here appears, — that he was the friend to whom Horace confided his feelings in his last love-affair, the description of which occupies the greater part of the poem. The names Inachia and Lyciscus are of course fictitious. — Metre, 165.

1. nihil: Intr. 47.

2. versiculos: the diminutive conveys mild disparagement. — amore: not consciously personified in this verse, though the thought takes that turn in the next (qui me, etc.); hence the simple

- amore qui me praeter omnis expetit mollibus in pueris aut in puellis urere.
 5 Hic tertius December, ex quo destiti ablative. — gravi : an attribute in accordance with the conception of love implied in percussum, with which it may well be rendered adverbially, sorely smitten.

3. amore : for this use of anaphora, cf. arva, 16.42 n; aere, ib.65.

4. in : cf. C. I. 17. 19 n.—urere : Intr. 94 h.

5. hic tertius, etc., this December, which is smiting, etc., is the third since, etc.—December : used in the same way Ep. I. 20. 27.

6. Inachia : Intr. 72.—honorem, their glory, i.e. their foliage; cf. C. I. 17. 16; Verg. G. II. 404 frigidus et silvis Aquilo decussit honorem.

7. nam, etc. : excusing the exclamation heu me.

8. fabula, food for gossip; cf. Ep. I. 13. 9, and the use of risus, S. II. 2. 107 o magnus posthac inimicis risus.—quanta, et : Intr. 114.—paenitet, I dislike; historical present.

9. quis : see C. I. 26. 3 n.—amantem (sc. me) arguit : cf. C.

I. 13. 7; Ep. I. 19. 6 laudibus arguitur vini vinosus Homerus.—languor, listlessness.

11. contrane, etc., to think that, etc. For the construction, see Intr. 92.—candidum : cf. S. I. 5. 41.

12. adplorans : accompanying (ad-) my lament with tears.

13. simul : see C. I. 4. 17 n.—inverecondus : cf. verecundum Bacchum, C. I. 27. 3 n. Here the epithet indicates the actual effect of the wine, breaking down the restraints of modesty.

14. mero : abl. with calentis.—arcana : sc. mea; calentis agrees with the implied possessive genitive, as in mea ipsius and similar phrases.—promorat : Intr. 86, 183.—loco : from their place, i.e. the place where they are kept (as secrets).—his own knowledge.

15. quod si, etc. : continuing the quotation of his words to Pettius on former occasions.

16. libera bilis : cf. liberrima

- fomenta volnus nil malum levantia, indignatio, 4. 10 n. For bilis, cf. C. I. 13. 4 n.—ut: expressing result: if my wrath could burn so hotly as to burst forth and scatter to the winds the 'poultices' with which I now vainly try to nurse my sore, etc.—ingrata, thankless, unprofitable. Cf. Lucr. III. 937 commoda perfluxere atque ingrata interiere.—ventis: cf. C. I. 26. 2 tradam ventis.

17. fomenta: i.e. the querellae (cf. quererbar, 12) with which he tried to console himself and keep alive his hopes.

18. desinet submotus pudor: poetical for desinam submoto pudore (Intr. 105 a). pudor is the false pride which keeps him from giving up the contest.—imparibus: cf. vs. 11 sq., and see Intr. 57.

19. haec laudaveram, had uttered these praiseworthy sentiments; lit., had commended this course (as the one I should pursue). For the construction, cf. promorat, vs. 14, and see Intr. 86.—severus: in contrast with his subsequent conduct.—te palam: for coram te; cf. Ov. Trist. V. 10. 39 meque palam de me tuto mala saepe loquuntur.

20. iussus: sc. by Pettius, urging him to carry out his sensible resolution.—ferebar: observe the tense.—incerto, irresolute. Intr. 124. Cf. Tib. II. 6. 14.

21. non amicos: cf. 1. 10 n. heu . . . heu: to be taken, not with non amicos and dura, but with the whole sentence, a sigh over the collapse of his brave purpose.—postis: for the door itself, where he was not admitted.

22. dura: in a literal sense, explained by the words that follow; cf. C. III. 10. 2 sqq.—infregi: Intr. 119 a.

24. vincere: Intr. 94 d.

25. expedire: cf. C. I. 27. 24.

26. libera, frank. Cf. vs. 16.—contumeliae: sc. of Lyciscus.

27. puellae: objective genitive with ardor (= amor); cf. the use of ardere with the accusative, Intr. 72.

28. teretis: cf. C. II. 4. 21 n.—renodantis: equivalent to nodo solventis, re- having the same force as in refigere, recludere, etc.;

renodatam pharetris. For the practice of boys wearing their hair long, cf. C. II. 5. 23 sq., III. 20. 14, IV. 10. 3. The knot was presumably for convenience on undress occasions, or to make the hair wavy when it was let down.

XII. A coarse lampoon on a woman whose advances had become repulsive. — Metre, 162.

2. tabellas, notes.

3. naris obesae: i.e. with a dull sense of smell; in contrast with sagacius, 4.

4. unus: common with the superlative, but seldom used, as here, to add force to the comparative; cf. Verg. A. I. 15 quam Iuno fertur terris magis omnibus unam | posthabita coluisse Samo.

5. pōlypus: an offensive tumor that grew in the nose; hence we must supply from cubet in alis
some such general idea as adsit.
In the quantity of the o, Horace here and S. I. 3. 40 follows the Doric form πώλυπος. — gravis, reeking. — cubet hircus: an extravagant figure, but based on a common colloquial use of the word hircus in this sense.

7. qui: exclamatory. The poet here drops the form of address and turns to the reader. — vietis: Intr. 181. For the position of vietis and membris, see Intr.
120.

10. umida: sc. with perspiration.
— creta: i.e. a cosmetic made of it.

11. stercore crocodili: cf. Plin.
N. H. XXVIII. 108 (of the smaller species of crocodile) in terra tan-tum odoratissimisque floribus vivit; ob id intestina eius diligenter exquiruntur, iucundo nidore farta;
'crocodileam' vocant; . . . inlita quoque ex oleo cyprino molestias in facie enascentis tollit, ex aqua vero morbos omnis quorum natura ser-pit in facie, nitoremque reddit.
color, then, is rouge made from crocodilea.

12. tecta, the canopy.

 ne foret aequalis inter conviva, magis quem

 25 O ego non felix, quam tu fugis ut pavet acris agna lupos capraeque leones.'

13. vel cum: the ellipsis after vel is to be supplied from the general sense of the preceding sentence,—quam odiosa est or the like.

14. Inachiā: Intr. 72.—minus ac: cf. 15. 5 artius atque. This use of atque or ac for quam after a comparative occurs repeatedly in the Satires, in these two places in the Epodes, in the later poems not at all.

17. Lesbia: an ancilla or lena. For the order, see Intr. 118.

18. Cous Amyntas: a made-up name, like Cnidius Gyges, C. II.

5. 20, Thressa Chloe, III. 9. 9, etc.

20. nova: i.e. young.

21. iteratae: cf. bis Afro murice tinctae, C. II. 16. 35 n.

22. cui: Intr. 114. Here the pronoun itself gains emphasis (Intr. 116 b).—properabantur: transitive as in C. III. 24. 62.

23. ne foret, etc.: i.e. that this might be inferred from the fact that he had received such a costly present from her.—magis quem. the construction is quem magis diligeret mulier sua (= amica) quam te tua diligeret.

25. o ego: Intr. 185. For the case, cf. C. III. 27. 34 n.—pavet: Intr. 51 a.

26. agna lupos: cf. 4. 1 n.—caprae leones: cf. C. IV. 4. 13 sqq.

XIII. A light piece, constructed of the same materials as C. I. 9, and probably, like that ode, a study from the Greek. A stormy day, keeping the poet and his friends indoors, gives them at once the inclination and excuse for 'taking a portion from the solid day' to enjoy a jar of old wine together. Horace's usual maxims on the enjoyment of life are here illustrated by a story of Chiron and Achilles, as in C. I. 7 by that of Teucer.—Metre, 164.

1. contraxit: i.e. has drawn it closer about the earth; referring to the heavy storm clouds, in contrast with the open expanse of the clear sky.

2. deducunt Iovem: the descent of Jupiter (see I. I. 25 n) to earth in shower was an old conception of primitive physical speculation, and became a commonplace in later Greek and in Latin literature. Cf. Verg. E. 7. 6. Iupiter et Iovis venientem pluvium imbrī; G. II. 325 tum pater omnipotens fecundis imbribus aether coniugis in gremium laetae descendit. — silvae: Intr. 182.

3. Thracio Aquilone: cf. Thracio vento, I. 25. 11 n, and see Intr. 185. — amici: see note on vs. 6.

4. de die: the meaning simply is, that the day brings with it this opportunity, and will carry it away out of our reach if we do not promptly lay hands on it; cf. C. III. 8. 27. — dum virent genua: i.e. while our physical powers are in full vigor; a part (where the weakness of age is conspicuous) standing for the whole body; Intr. 117 b.

5. decet: cf. C. III. 15. 8. — oblata: clouded. — solvatur fronte: cf. curis expeditis, I. 22. 11 n. — senectus: here for the qualities commonly associated with that time of life; cf. Cic. C. M. 65

morosi et anxii et iracundi et difficiles senes. For the contrast with virent, cf. C. I. 9. 17 sqq.

6. tu: the poet here turns to one of the company, and investing him with the office of master of ceremonies, addresses him in this representative capacity through the rest of the ode, as in C. I. 9. The abruptness of the address, without any name, is a little awkward, and has led some editors to suspect amici, vs. 3 (see Crit. App.), or to explain it as nos amici (nom.), meaning the poet and a single companion. — Torquato: see C. III. 21. 1 n. — move: cf. (testu) moveri digna bono die, ibid. 6. — pressa: cf. C. IV. 12. 14. — meo: i.e. in the year of the poet's birth.

7. cetera: cf. C. I. 9. 9 n. Here, however, it appears from what follows that Horace had something definite in mind, — perhaps the unsatisfactory state of political affairs. — mitte, forbear. — loqui: Intr. 94 j. — deus, Heaven; see C. I. 3. 21 n. — benigna vice, with generous reparation; cf. C. IV. 14. 13 plus vice simplici. The allusion is probably to the losses which Horace and his friends had suffered in the civil war.

9. nardo: see C. II. 3. 13 n.—Cyllenea: as having been invented by Mercury (cf. C. I. 10. 6), who was born on Mt. Cyllene in Arcadia. For the metre, see Intr. 132.

10. levare, etc.: cf. C. IV. 11. 35 minuentur atrae carmine curae.—diris, ill-boding.

11. grandi, tall; cf. Juv. 7. 210 metuens virgae iam grandis Achilles.—cecinit: implying an oracular character in his utterance. Cf. C. I. 15. 4 n.—centaurus: Chiron.—alumno: Achilles.

12. invicte: used substantively, as in Verg. A. VI. 365 eripe me his, invicte, malis.—mortalis dea: Intr. 116 a.

13. Assaraci: king of Troy, brother of Ganymede, great-grandfather of Aeneas.—parvi: probably more accurate than the Homeric μέγας πόντος (Il. XX. 73).

14. findunt, cleave; poetical for 'flow through.'—flumina, streams. For the plural (a reminiscence perhaps of the Homeric πέεθρα), see Intr. 128.—lubricus, i.e. flowing with a smooth, swift current.—et: Intr. 114.

15. unde: used attributively with reditum; cf. unde periculum, C. II. 12. 7 n.—certo subtemine: i.e. by an immutable decree; cf. C. S. 25 n, Verg. A. X. 814 sq., Gray, The Bard, 48 sqq. The ablative is better taken as instrumental.

16. rupere: cf. 16. 35 reditus abscindere.—nec mater, etc.: cf. Tib. I. 7. 1 Parcae fatalia nentes | stamina, non ulli dissoluenda deo.—caerula: as a sea-goddess; cf. Ov. Her. 9. 14 Nereus caerulus, and see C. III. 28. 10 n.

17. illic, etc.: the envoys sent by Agamemnon find him engaged with the lyre, Il. IX. 186.—levato: cf. abstineto, III. 27. 69 n; the time is implied in illic.

18. deformis: Intr. 125.—adloquiis, solace; in apposition with vino cantuque.

XIV. In reply to Maecenas's urgent expostulation at the poet's indolence and delay in completing some poetry (apparently the book of Epodes), Horace protests that he is in love and can't help himself, quotes the example of Anacreon, and turns upon his patron with an argumentum ad hominem: 'You are in love yourself, and you may thank your stars your plight is not so bad as mine.' The tone of familiarity with which he addresses Maecenas is very noticeable. — Metre, 160.

1. mollis inertia, etc.: indirect question, containing the gist of Maecenas's reproaches. — cur: Intr. 114. — imis: i.e. to their very centre; it pervades them through and through.

2. sensibus: dative, as with divido (e.g. 11. 16), distribuo, etc.

3. Lethaeos somnos: the sleep of utter forgetfulness. Cf. Verg. A. VI. 714 Lethaei ad fluminis undam | securos latices et longa oblivia potant. — ut si, etc.: illustrating, not so much the degree of forgetfulness, as the completeness (imis sensibus) with which it has possessed him. — ducentia: cf. Ep. I. 2. 31 ad strepitum citharae cessatum ducere somnum; Ovid M. II. 735 (of Mercury's wand) qua somnos ducit et arcet. — somnos: Intr. 128.

4. arente fauce: i.e. eagerly and copiously; cf. Ov. M. XV. 330 parum moderato gutture traxit.

5. candide: referring to Maecenas's character in general (cf. candidum ingenium, 11. 11), though called out by his frank reproof on this occasion, as iocose Maecenas, 3. 20; cf. Ep. I. 4. 1 Albi, nostrorum sermonum candide iudex, I. 6. 67 si quid novisti rectius istis, candidus imperti. — occidis: an extravagance of colloquial language; cf. Plaut. Pseud. 931 occidis me quom istuc rogitas; C. II. 17. 1 n.

6. deus, deus: made emphatic (Intr. 116 d, 114) because it sums up his whole plea: 'a superior power controls me and I am not responsible.' The god is of course Love.

7. inceptos, etc.: for the order, cf. Ep. II. 1. 234 acceptos regale nomisma Philippos, Verg. E. 2. 3 inter densas umbrosa cacumina fagos. Intr. 109. — olim promissum: i.e. for which the public has long been waiting; cf. Ep. II. 3. 45 promissi carminis auctor. — carmen: apparently used here not of a single poem, but generically (verse), like nomisma, quoted above. — iambos: probably the whole collection of epodes, which Horace designates by this name Ep. 1. 19. 23, II. 2. 59; see Intr. 18.

8. ad umbilicum adducere,

- Non aliter Samio dicunt arsisse Bathyllo
 10 Anacreonta Teium,
 qui persaepe cava testudine flevit amorem
 non elaboratum ad pedem.
 Vreris ipse miser ; quod si non pulchrior ignis
 accendit obsessam Ilion, 15 gaude sorte tua : me libertina nec uno contenta Phryne macerat.

to bring to the end of the scroll, i.e. to finish. The umbilici of a Roman book were the ends (often ornamented) of the stick or reed on which the long strip of papyrus was rolled, and there is some reason to believe the name was also applied to the stick itself. In reading, the scroll was held horizontally, the left hand gradually rolling up the part already read, while the part in the right was gradually unrolled. The pages followed one another laterally from left to right, the last being next to the stick.

9. non aliter : more commonly used in returning to the main theme after an illustration, as Verg. A. I. 399, Ov. M. VIII. 473, etc.; cf. C. IV. 14. 25 n. — Bathyllo : a favorite boy. For the case see Intr. 72.

11. testudine : see C. I. 10. 6 n. — flevit amorem : i.e. gave expression to it in woful chants. The corresponding word for light and cheerful strains is ludere, as si quid olim lusit Anacreon, C. IV. 9. 9 n; cf. C. I. 32. 1 n. For the construction see Intr. 51 a.

12. non elaboratum : this criticism is not very well understood, as none of Anacreon's verses on Bathyllus are preserved. But apparently it is intended to enforce Horace's plea by pointing out that Anacreon, in similar circumstances, could not bring his mind to the proper tension for composing polished verses. For the litotes, cf. I. 10 n.

13. ureris : cf. C. I. 19. 5. — ipse : no need for me to tell you how it is. — quod si : here, as in C. III. 1. 41, introducing a supposition assumed to be true, like si quidem. — ignis, flame (cf. C. I. 27. 20 n), with a play on the double meaning of the word: if the 'flame' that warms you is as beautiful as the one (Helen) that fired Ilion, etc. The scholiasts profess to know that the 'flame' referred to was Terentia, who subsequently became Maecenas's wife; see C. II. 12 intr. note.

15. nec : adding to libertina another characteristic, that carries the disparagement still farther, — and not . . . either.

16. macerat : see C. I. 13. 8 n. He comes back at the end to the idea (mollis) with which he began.

XV. In the character of a slighted lover, Horace heaps angry reproaches on the faithless Neaera, recalls her ardent vows of eternal devotion, tells her she will find he is man enough to resent her perfidy, and turns away with a parting shaft over the shoulders of his unknown rival, whom he warns of her treachery, which must inevitably bring upon him a like fate, and then the man over whom he is now enjoying his short-lived triumph will have his turn to laugh. The subject is similar to that of C. I. 5, but there is a marked contrast in the tone of the two poems. The greater vehemence of the epode is no doubt due to the fact that Horace was not only younger but was dealing with a fresh experience. — Metre, 160.

2. inter, etc.: cf. C. I. 12. 47.

3. laesura: Intr. 104 c.

4. in verba mea: i.e. repeating after me the oath as I dictated it. The expression, originally applied to the sacramentum, or military oath administered by the consul to his soldiers, came to be used for an oath of allegiance in general (cf. Tac. Ann. I. 7. 3 consules primi in verba Tiberii Caesaris iuravere), or figuratively of other kinds of devotion, as Ep. I. 1. 14.

5. artius, etc.: cf. C. I. 36. 20.—atque: see 12. 14 n.

7. dum pecori lupus: left without a verb by a change of the sentence from the form in which it was first conceived, dum pecori lupus et nautis Orion infestus esset; into this the description of Orion as turbator hiberni maris, coming in as an after-thought, was, instead of being simply added, incorporated in such a way as to supersede esset. For the comparison, see 4. 1 n.—Orion: see C. I. 28. 21 n and Intr. 178.

9. intonsos, etc.: another paraphrase for 'forever,' for the god's long locks were the mark of his eternal youth; see C. I. 21. 2 n.

10. hunc: i.e. 'my.'—mutuum, returned, as in animi mutui, C. IV. 1. 30.

11. dolitura: Intr. 104 b.—virtute, spirit; see C. III. 2. 17 n. The consciousness of the fundamental meaning of the word appears in si quid viri, 12.

12. Flacco: there is a touch of self-respect in the use of the name. Cf. Teucro, I. 7. 27 n.

- non feret adsiduas potiori te dare noctis, et quaeret iratus parem ;
 15 nec semel offensi cedet constantia formae, si certus intrarit dolor.
 Et tu, quicumque es felicior atque meo nunc

 sis pecore et multa dives tellure licebit 20 tibi que Pactolus fluat, nec te Pythagorae fallant arcana renati,
 formaque vincas Nirea,
 heu heu, translatus alio maerebis amores ;
 ast ego vicissim risero.

13. potiori: see C. III. 9. 2 n.

14. et: see note on -que, C. I.

27. 16. — parem: i.e. one who will reciprocate his feelings.

15. offensi: sc. Flacci, limiting constantia; cf. calentis, II. 13, 14 n. — formae, to beauty. Cf. Ov. Am. III. 11. 37 nequitiam fugio, fugientem forma reducit.

16. certus, confirmed. This verse betrays his weakness in spite of his brave words: the door to a reconciliation is not yet absolutely closed; cf. II. 15 sqq.

17. et tu . . . felicior, etc.: cf. Tib. I. 2. 87; 5. 69 at tu, qui potior nunc es, mea fata timeto.

18. superbus incedis malo: cf. 4. 5.

19. sis pecore, etc.: no wealth, no wisdom, no beauty can save you from the inevitable result of her caprice. — sis licebit: conformed to the time of maerebis, 23.

20. tibi fluat: i.e. you enjoy the benefit of it; cf. tibi tollit, C. II. 16. 34. — Pactolus: in Lydia, famous for the gold found in its sands.

21. nec te fallant: i.e. you have the capacity to comprehend them. — arcana, the mysteries, i.e. his abstruse philosophical speculations. — renati: see C. I. 28. 10 n.

22. Nirea: see C. III. 20 15. n.

23. heu heu: here expressing scornful pity.

24. ast: a quaint form, in colloquial use as late as Cicero, who sometimes used it in his letters (e.g. ad Att. I. 16. 17). It was much affected by Vergil, but Horace used it only in his earliest writings (here and twice in the first book of the Satires). — risero: expressing stronger assurance than the simple future; cf. Ter. Heaut. 85 crede inquam mihi: aut consolando aut consiliis aut re iuvero.

XVI. This epode, the best of Horace's political poems, is probably the earliest also. It belongs to the first years after his return from Philippi, before his introduction to Maecenas, — the period of sollicitum taedium (C. I. 14. 17), when he was still the mourner for a lost cause, and could see no hope for his country in any of the contending factions, and no prospect but the wasting away of her strength in civil strife that could end only in her falling a prey to some foreign invader. The verses are full of a genuine feeling which we miss in the odes that deal with matters of state; they glow with youthful enthusiasm and a patriotic fervor which has not yet yielded to the seductive charm of personal friendship or been cooled into political wisdom. In form, as well as in poetic sentiment, the epode is among the most perfect pieces that Horace has left us. — Metre, 161; see also 184.

1. altera, a second; looking back to the times of Marius and Sulla. — teritur, is wasting away. — aetas, generation.

2. suis ipsa: in prose, suis ipsius.

3. quam, her whom. In his list of the dangerous enemies whom Rome had withstood, Horace follows the order of distance rather than of time. — neque, etc.: notice the variety in the use of conjunctions. — perdere: Intr. 94 n. — Marsi: see C. III. 14. 18 n, I. 2. 39 n.

4. aut: Intr. 114. — Etrusca, etc.: cf. 10. 12 n. — Porsenae: king of Clusium, who took up the cause of the banished Tarquins, forced the city to surrender, and imposed terms of peace, which did not, however, include the restoration of the kings. Cf. Tac. Hist. III. 72 (referring to the burning of the Capitol in A.D. 69 in much the same spirit in which Horace writes here) nullo externo hoste, propitiis si per mores nostros liceret deis, sedem Iovis optimi Maximi, . . . quam non Porsenna dedita urbe neque Galli capta temerare potuissent, furore principum excindi.

5. Capuae: cf. Cic. Leg. Agr. 2. 87 quo in oppido maiores nostri nullam omnino rem publicam esse voluerunt; qui tres solum urbes in terris omnibus, Karthaginem, Corinthum, Capuam, statuerunt posse imperii gravitatem ac nomen sustinere. This jealousy of the Romans was aroused by the conduct of the Capuans after the battle of Cannae, when they joined Hannibal and openly aspired (aemula) to supplant Rome in the hegemony of Italy. — Spartacus: see C. III. 14. 19 n.

6. novis rebus, in times of treason; referring to the Catilinarian conspiracy, when the Allobrogian envoys were tampered with by the conspirators, but thought it for their own interest to betray them. The tribe itself, however, which occupied the district between the Rhone and the Isère, soon after revolted, and was reduced by C. Pomptinus, B.C. 54. Cf. Cic. in Cat. 3. 4 sqq., Sal. Cat. 40 sqq. Their treachery at such a critical time seems to have exaggerated their importance in the eyes of the Romans, as in the case of Capua.

7. caerulea, blue-eyed, a noted characteristic of the German; cf. Juv. 13. 164 caerulea quis stupuit Germani lumina? Tac. Ger. 4 (omnibus) truces et caerulei oculi, rutilae comae, magna corpora.—Germania: referring to the great invasion of the Cimbri and Teutones, who were defeated and destroyed, the latter at Aquae Sextiae in B.C. 102, the former at Vercellae in 101, by Marius,—probably the greatest peril to which Rome had been exposed since the destruction of the city by the Gauls.

8. parentibus abominatus: cf. matribus detestata, C. I. 1. 24. Intr. 54.

9. impia aetas: in apposition with the subject of perdemus. Cf. C. I. 35. 34. — devoti sanguinis, with a curse in our blood. Cf. 7. 20.

10. feris: Intr. 55. — rursus: as in the times before Romulus. How this is to be brought about is indicated in the next two couplets.

11. barbarus: such as the Parthian (I. 12. 53), the Dacian (III. 6. 14), the German, etc. — cineres: sc. of the burned city. — insistet, will set his foot upon; with acc. as in Ter. Eun. 294 quam insistam viam, incertus sum.

12. eques (with barbarus), on horse. — sonante: in fancy the poet hears the clatter of the hoofs breaking the stillness of the deserted street.

13. carent, are sheltered from; in contrast with the profanation to which they are to be exposed. — solibus: cf. 2. 41 n, C. IV. 2. 46 n. — ossa Quirini: according to Varro, as quoted by Porphyrio, Romulus was buried behind the Rostra; it would appear that the story of his apotheosis (Liv. I. 16) was by no means generally accepted at this time.

14. nefas (sc. est) videre: cf. scire nefas, I. 11. 1; the act of desecration is a sin so abominable that one would turn away or cover his eyes to avoid the pollution of even beholding it. For the omission of est, cf. C. I. 11. 1, 37. 5; III. 24. 24; Verg. A. VIII. 173 quae differre nefas. — insolens: cf. C. I. 16. 21.

15. forte: here equivalent to forsitan, the clause being virtually a condition, si forte quaeritis, etc.

- 15 Forte quid expediat communiter aut melior pars malis carere quaeritis laboribus.
Nulla sit hac potior sententia: Phocaeorum velut profugit exsecrata civitas agros atque laris patrios habitandaque fana 20 apris reliquit et rapacibus lupis, ire pedes quocumque ferent, quocumque per undas
Notus vocabit aut protervus Africus.
Sic placet, an melius quis habet suadere? Secunda ratem occupare quid moramur alite?

— quid expediat, what it is best to do. — communiter: equivalent to omnes. — pars (sc. vestrum): in apposition with the subject of quaeritis; cf. aetas, vs. 9 n.

16. carere, to be rid of. Best taken as infinitive of purpose (Intr. 93); cf. Verg. E. 4. 54 quantum sat erit tua dicere facta; Lucr. III. 1030 iter dedit legionibus ire per altum. If we read quod expediat (see Crit. App.), carere is complementary infinitive with quaeritis; Intr. 94 c.

17. sit, . . . perhaps . . . is; potential subjunctive. — sententia: the technical term for a proposition brought forward in a deliberative body. The poet in fancy addresses his countrymen of kindred spirit (melior pars) sitting in council. The actual proposition begins with ire, 21, which is in apposition with hac (sc. sententia). — Phocaeorum: the inhabitants of Phocaea, a powerful Athenian colony in Ionia, itself the mother city of Massilia and other important colonies in the West. According to Herodotus (I. 164 sq.), they left their city in a body to escape subjection to the Persians, and sailed away to Aleria, in Corsica. A part of them, however, subsequently returned. For the metre, see Intr. 132.

18. velut: Intr. 114. — profugit: here transitive; a poetical usage in Horace's time. — exsecrata: used absolutely, — having sworn (with imprecations) sc. that they would not return; under a curse. 'They pronounced powerful curses on any of their number who should desert the enterprise; and, in addition to this, they dropped into the sea a lump of iron, and swore never to return to Phocaea till this iron should reappear' (Herod. l.l.).

19. patrios: suggesting, like fana, the most hallowed associations. — habitanda, etc.: a typical picture of utter desolation; cf. vs. 10 and C. III. 3. 40.

21. pedes, etc.: i.e. by land, in contrast with per undas; cf. C. III. 11, 49 n.

22. vocabit, shall invite us. Cf. Cat. 4. 19 laeva sive dextera | vocaret aura. — protervus: cf. C. I. 26. 2, and praecipitem Africum, I. 3. 12 n.

23. sic placet, is such your pleasure? keeping up the figure of a deliberative assembly. — suaudere: Intr. 94 n. — secunda alite: cf. 10. 1 n.

- 25 Sed iuremus in haec : ' Simul imis saxa renarint

neu conversa domum pigeat dare lintea quando

35 Haec et quae poterunt reditus abscindere dulcis aut pars indocili melior grege ; mollis et exspes inominata perprimat cubilia.

25. in haec (sc. verba): cf. 15. 4 n.
— saxa: for the mass of iron in the oath of the Phocaeans, which Horace evidently had in mind, as renarint shows. Setting out with this, the poet proposes a series of impossible contingencies to bind them more firmly to their hard resolve. For other examples of the use of this favorite figure (σχῆμα ἀδυνάτου), cf. C. I. 29. 10 sqq., 33. 7 sq.; Il. I. 234 sqq.; Verg. E. 1. 59 sqq., 8. 27 sqq.

26. vadis: Intr. 70.

28. Matina: see C. I. 28. 3 n.

29. procurrerit: cf. Ov. F. IV.

419 terra tribus scopulis vastum procurrit in aequor. The Apennines are an interior range. The figure is the converse of the preceding. For the metre, see Intr. 132.

30. monstra, unnatural creatures; proleptic: the mirus amor turns them into monstra.

31. tigris, etc.: the picture of these monstrous unions is heightened by the reversal of the natures of the animals: the tiger becomes submissive, the deer bold. The dove, moreover, was a type of conjugal fidelity; cf. Prop. III. 7. 27 exemplo iunctae tibi sint in amore columbae; Plin. N. H. X. 104.

32. et: Intr. 114. — miluo: dativ. Intr. 56.

33. credula, confiding, trustful; proleptic. — ramos: cf. III. 27. 3.

34. lêvis: like a sea animal; proleptic.

35. haec: cognate object of exsecrata. — quae, whatever else; cf. quisquis, C. II. 1. 25 n; I. 19. 12. — reditus: see C. III. 5. 52 n; Intr. 128.

36. exsecrata civitas: repeated from 18. For the construction of civitas, cf. aetas, 9 n.

37. pars melior: cf. vs. 15. — indocili grege: the kind of people who are too dull or too deep in their ruts to take new ideas; with too little energy (mollis) for action and enterprise, and too little spirit to hope (exspes).

38. inominata, ill-starred; found here only.

39. muliebrem : in contrast (Intr. 116 a) with virtus, for which see 15. 11 n. — tollite : cf. C. I. 27. 2 n.

40. Etrusca, etc. : the usual route of voyagers to the West. — praeter : Intr. 115 b. — et : Intr. 114.

41. nos : the change of person (cf. vos, 39) implies that his appeal has been successful ; they are now with him, and he turns from exhortation to consolation, pointing to the greater recompense in store for those who make the sacrifice he demands. — circumvagus : a word probably of Horace's own coining, expressing the ever-changing movements of the sea, and a happy variation' on the Homeric ἀψόρροος, which Ovid (M. I. 30) more literally renders circumfluus, an epithet properly applicable to a river, which the ocean was in Homeric geography (cf. Il. XX. 7). That the ocean, however, surrounded the habitable lands was also taught by Roman geographers ; see Plin. N. H. II. 166 sq.

42. arva : repeated to form the connection with divites insulas, etc. ; cf. 'aere, 65 ; amore 11. 3 ; Intr. 116 h. The epithet beata is not repeated, and is unnecessary in such close connection with divites insulas, with which arva is joined in hendiadys. — et : Intr. 114. — insulas : the 'Isles of the Blest' (μακάρων νῆσοι) of Hesiod (Op. 170 sqq.), — the Elysian plain of Homer (Odys. IV. 563 sqq.) — were the mythical abode, situated in the ocean towards the setting sun, of departed heroes. Later mythology transferred Elysium to the underworld, while the 'Insulae Fortunatae' came to be recognized in ancient geography and were placed off the coast of Africa, on the basis of reports of traders, who claimed to have seen islands in those seas (probably the Madeiras) ; see Plin. N. H. IV. 119, VI. 202. It is said that Sertorius at one time thought of abandoning the contest with the aristocracy and setting sail with his followers in search of the 'Happy Isles' (Plutarch, Sert. 8) ; and it is not unlikely that the same scheme actually suggested itself to Horace and his friends after Philippi.

43. Cererem : Intr. 130.

45. numquam fallentis : cf. fundus mendax, C. III. 1. 30. It implies exemption from care, as inarata and imputata, above, from toil.

46. suam : emphatic (Intr. 116 b) ; the finer varieties of the fig, as of the pear (cf. 2. 19 n) can be propagated only by grafting. Cf. Verg. G. II. 81 sq. (of the grafted tree) construction of this and the next verse see Intr. 131.—montibus:

 Intr. 70.

48. levis, etc.: the beauty of this verse, which has caught up some of the music of the brook itself, was remarked by Porphyrio.
 It is not, however, a merely ornamental addition to the description.
 A natural supply of water for parched country like Apulia, or circum gemit: Intr. 115 c.

52. intumescit: the action of the vipers is attributed to the ground, as where we say 'the place was swarming with ants' or the like.—alta: proleptic, with intu- mescit.

61, 62. This couplet is found in all the MSS. after vs. 60, where it is obviously out of place and interrupts the course of thought, which (from vs. 57 to the close of the poem) is of the immunity of the Happy Isles from corrupting human and moral influences. It must have stood originally somewhere before vs. 57, and has been misplaced in copying (see Crit. App.).

 of it, III. 29. 18 sq.

53. ut, how, after mirabimur, as in C. III. 4. 17 after mirum foret.
 —neque, etc.: the climate is temperate, free from extremes of storm and drouth.

54. aquosus: cf. ude Noto, 16.

55. siccis: proleptic.—glaebis: Intr. 69.

56. utrumque : i.e. both excess of rain and drouth.—rege : Jupiter ; see C. I. 1. 25n.

57. non huc, etc. : no man, not even the boldest navigator, has ever trodden the shores of this paradise ; it has remained uncontaminated by the degeneracy which (largely through the corrupting influence of commerce) has spread over the rest of the world,—a bit of the Golden Age, set apart by Jove for his elect.—Argoo : cf. Etrusca, 4, and see 10. 12 n.—remige: used collectively (Intr. 127) and impersonally, like a body of troops, in the instrumental ablative (Madv. 254 Obs. 3).—pinus: for the ship ; cf. C. I. 14. 11 Pontica pinus ; Cat. 64. 1 Peliaco quondam prognatae vertice pinus | dicuntur liquidas Neptuni nasse per undas.

58. Colchis : Medea.

59. Sidonii : for the Phoenician traders in general. Intr. 117 b.—

torserunt cornua : i.e. directed their course ; a paraphrase for the commonplace vela dare. The action expressed is that of swinging the yards into position.

60. laboriosa : the epithet belonging properly to Ulysses (πολύτλας, πολυτλήμων), is here transferred to his men. Cf. 17. 16, and see Intr. 124.

63. piae genti, for a righteous people, meaning the nation which the poet and his companions should found ; cf. piis, 66.

64. inquinavit, alloyed.

65. aere : with duravit ; for the anaphora, cf. arva 42 n.—quorum, from which ; objective genitive. The present is then with Horace, as with Hesiod, the age of iron. In Hesiod, however (Op. 109 sqq.), the iron age is the fifth, there being a silver age between the gold and the bronze, and a fourth,—the age of the heroes, not named after any metal,—preceding that of iron. The legend appears in various forms in other poets ; see Mayor on Juv. 13. 30.

66. vate me, according to my prophecy.

XVII.

Iam iam efficaci do manus scientiae, per et Dianae non movenda numina, per atque libros carminum valentium

 5 refixa caelo devocare sidera, Canidia, parce vocibus tandem sacris citumque retro solve, solve turbinem.

XVII. Horace's muse fairly runs riot in this burlesque, in which he makes his final attack on Canidia. He represents himself as one of her victims, reduced to submission at last by her powerful art; and in his humble recantation and piteous appeal for mercy, as well as in Canidia's stern reply, he manages to reiterate, with telling irony, all his old charges against her. Our poet tempted fate in thus giving loose rein to his fancy; for this poem, sifted through learned brains, has come out a confession that he had been a veritable lover of the witch. See intr. note to Epode 5. — Metre, 158.

1. iam iam: Intr. 116 d. — do manus, surrender, as a vanquished soldier who throws down his arms and holds out his hands to be bound.

2. et, et, atque: Intr. 114. — per: Intr. 115 a.

3. Dianae: see 5. 51 n. She is here more distinctly identified with Hecate; cf. S. I. 8. 33. — non movenda: equivalent, according to Porphyrio, who is followed by modern editors, to non lacessenda, 'not to be provoked' (cf. III. 20. 1); but there is reason to think that Horace uses the phrase in the sense of inexorable, a standing attribute of the powers of the lower world; cf. C. II. 3. 24, 14. 6, 18. 34 sqq., etc. This use of moveo is common in such connection; cf. vs. 8, C. I. 21. 16, Verg. G. IV. 505 quo fletu manis, quae numina voce moveret? — numina: Intr. 128.

4. libros: conjuring books, containing instructions and magic formulas. — carminum: cf. 5. 72 n.

5. refixa: proleptic, — dislodge and. Cf. Verg. A. V. 527 caelo ceu saepe refixa | transcurrunt crinemque volentia sidera ducunt. — devocare: Intr. 94 n.

6. parce: cf. III. 14. 12 n. — vocibus sacris: a respectful expression, in accordance with the claims of sorcery, for the gibberish that accompanied the whirling of the turbo; see Lucian (quoted below).

7. citum: best taken as a participle (proleptic) with retro, whirl backward and untwist; cf. 9. 20. — solve, solve (Intr. 116 d): in reference to the binding constraint which the whirling of the turbo was supposed to exert on the heart of the person sought to be influenced. Cf. Prop. IV. 6. 26 staminea rhombi ducitur ille rota; Ov. Am. I. 8. 7. — turbinem: the Latin name for the magic rhomb (ῥόμβος), which was not, it seems, a real wheel but a small lozenge-shaped board (hence the name) attached by one end to a cord and whirled round to make a loud buzzing sound. It is so defined by Hesychius: ξυλή-ριον, οὗ ἐξήπται σχοινίον, καὶ ἐν ταῖς τελεταῖς δινεῖται ἵνα ροιζῇ. The use of it to charm back a lover is described by Lucian, Dial. Meretr. 4. 5. εἶτα (ἡ γραῦς) ἐκ τοῦ κόλπου προκομίσασα ῥόμβον ἐπιστρέφει, ἐπώδῃν τινα λέγουσα ἐπιτρέψω τῇ γλώττῃ, βαρβαρικὰ καὶ φρικώδη ὀνόματα. It is used in mystic rites among uncivilized peoples at the present day, and in Greece was no doubt a survival from ancestral barbarism. See Andrew Lang's Custom and Myth, pp. 29 sqq.

8. nepotem: Achilles, whose mother Thetis was the daughter of Nereus.—Telephus: king of Mysia and son-in-law of Priam. He resisted the Greeks in their invasion of the Troad, and was wounded by Achilles. Having been told by an oracle that he could be healed only by the rust of the spear which had made the wound, he was obliged to throw himself on the compassion of his enemy.

11. luxere, etc.: i.e. Achilles was moved by pity to grant even his bitterest enemy honorable burial. Lugere is the term for formal mourning; cf. Liv. II. 7. 4 matronae annum ut parentem eum luxerunt. The reference is to the affecting scene in the Iliad, XXIV. 719 sqq., on Priam's return from the Greek camp with Hector's body.—Iliae: Intr. 65.—addictum, etc.: by Achilles, as a consolation to Patroclus; cf. Il. XXIII. 179 χαῖρέ μοι, ὦ Πάτροκλε, καὶ εἰν Ἀλδαιο δόμοισιν, . . . Ἔκτορα δ' οὐ τι | δώσω Πριαμίδην πυρὶ δαπτέμεν, ἀλλὰ κύνεσσιν.

12. homicidam: cf. Ἔκτορος ἀνδροφόνου, Il. XXIV. 724, and Andromache's proud words, ib. 737 sqq.

14. heu: the pathos lies in the humiliation of the powerful monarch, who placed himself at the mercy of his enemy (relictis moenibus; cf. Ilio relicto, C. I. 10. 14 n) and threw himself at his feet.—pervicacis: implying that the appeal might well have seemed hopeless.—Achillei: see C. I. 6. 7 n.

15. saetosa: when they were changed into swine. The story is told Odys. X. 135 sqq.—pellibus: ablative; see Gr. 225 d.

16. laboriosi, much afflicted; better taken here (in spite of 16. 60) with Vlixei, being the Latin equivalent of the Homeric πολύ-τλας, πολυτλήμων.

17. sonus : i.e. voice.

18. honor, grace, in contrast with the brutish form from which they emerged ; cf. II. 6, C. II. 11. 9.

20. amata, etc. : a mock compliment, in which the poet's irony for the first time breaks through its disguise. — multum : Intr. 49. — institoribus : see C. III. 6. 30 n.

21. fūgit : see Intr. 77 ; both iuventas and color here combine to form one idea, — the sensitive complexion of healthy youth.

22. reliquit, has left behind. — ossa, etc. : cf. our 'nothing but skin and bones,' and Plaut. Capt. 135 ossa atque pellis sum miser macritudine.

23. albus, bleached. — odoribus : i.e. magic ointments ; cf. 5. 59.

24. a labore reclinat : cf. the opposite expression, in aliquid incumbere. — labore, distress — otium : cf. C. II. 16. 1 n.

25. urget, etc. : cf. truditur dies die, C. II. 18. 15. — neque, but . . . not. — est levare ; Intr. 94 n.

26. tenta spiritu, heaving. — praecordia : here used for the lungs ; translate breast.

27. negatum (sc. a me) : Intr. 103. The clauses in the next two verses are in apposition with it.

28. Sabella : cf. S. I. 9. 29 sqq. The Sabines, like the Marsi and Paeligni (vs. 60), were noted for their practice of magic. — pectus : cf. C. I. 3. 10 n. — increpare, do assail.

29. Marsa : cf. 5. 76 n. — dissilire, splits (with pain). This effect was believed to be produced, in a literal sense, on snakes ; cf. Verg. E. 8. 71, Lucil. 512 Marsus colubras disruptit cantu. — nenia : i.e. an incantation. The name suggests a slow crooning chant ; cf. C. III. 28. 16 n.

30. o mare et terra : a common exclamation in every-day life, either in distress or in joy. Cf. Ter. Ad. 790 o caelum, o terra, o maria Nepituni ! Plaut. Trin. 1070 mare terra caelum, di vostram fidem !

32. Nessi cruore: see 3. 17 n.
—Sicana: better taken with flamma; fervidā, with Aetnā.

33. virens, that burns undimmed. — cinis, cinder.

34. iniuriosis, ruthless; cf. C.

I. 35. 13 n. — ventis: dative, the winds being personified; Intr. 55.

35. cales, are hot; cf. calet uno scribendi studio, Ep. II. 1. 108. Here a humorous turn is given to the figure by the extravagance of officina, a very laboratory. Cf. Plaut. Truc. 586 tun . . . quae sis stabulum flagiti? — Colchicis: see C. II. 13. 8 n.

36. quae finis: see C. II. 18. 30 n.
— me manet: i.e. will be exacted of me, as your vanquished enemy.

37. poenas luam, will do penance.

38. seu, etc.: for the construction, cf. I. 4. 12 n.

39. centum iuvenicis: a hecatomb. — mendaci: another touch of irony, lurking in the intentional ambiguity of the epithet, which can be applied to what follows, as well as to what he has previously said of her in his verse.

40. sonare: cf. C. II. 13. 26 n.
— tu pudica, etc.: cf. Cat. 42. 24.

41. perambulabis, you will stroll among; a word in humorous contrast with the dignity of the splendid destiny promised; cf. C. IV. 5. 17. — aureum: cf. Verg. A. II. 488 aurea sidera.

42. infamis, etc.: the poet appeals once more to precedent, the famous case of Stesichorus (see C. IV. 9. 8 n), who, having become suddenly blind, was made aware that it was a penalty, inflicted (according to the version which Horace follows) by Castor and Pollux, for the aspersions (in his Ἰλίου πέρις) on the character of their sister Helen; whereupon he promptly recanted (Fr. 44): Οὐκ ἔστ' ἔτυμος λόγος οὗτος· | οὐδ' ἔβας ἐν νηυσὶν εὐσσελμοῖς, | οὐδ' ἔκεο πέργαμα Τροίας and his sight was restored. — Helenae vicem: cf. *Plaut. 44. vati: Intr. 76.

45. potes nam: a form of appeal, at once flattering and persuasive, often inserted in prayers; cf. C. III. 11. 1 sq., S. II. 3. 283, 284, Odys. V. 25. For the position of nam, see Intr. 114.

46. o nec, etc.: in imitation of Stesichorus he boldly proclaims false what all the world knows to be true, and true what all know to be false. — paternis, etc.: i.e. a low-born creature, brought up in squalid poverty. Cf. C. II. 10. 6 n.

47. sepulcris pauperum: e.g. on the Esquiline, where she is represented as performing her magic rites in S. I. 8. The bodies of the poor were often buried (not burnt), and would usually be unprotected; cf. S. I. 8. 8 sq.

48. novendialis: i.e. just buried, the last rites at the tomb being completed on the ninth day after death. — dissipare: Intr. 101 c. — pulveres: Intr. 128.

49. hospitale, etc.: probably referring to the story told in Epode 5.

50. tuus . . . tuo: Intr. 116 g — venter, own child; cf. Liv. I. 34. 3. — Pactumeius: apparently a child Canidia tried to palm off on her lover as her own.

51. lavit: see C. II. 3. 18 n.

52. fortis exsilis: another mock compliment, implying that the whole performance was a sham. Cf. 5. 5 sq.

53–81. Canidia's reply.

54. non saxa, etc.: i.e. they are not more deaf, when Neptune, etc. — nudis: i.e. stripped of all they possessed, implying that they have been shipwrecked. — surdiora: cf. C. III. 7. 21.

55. Neptunus: cf. Ep. I. 11. 10, where, as here, the personality of the god is not entirely merged in his element (Intr. 130), as it is e.g. in 7. 3. — hibernus: cf. 2. 29; Stat. Theb. III. 26 hiberni Iovis.

56. inultus ut tu, etc., What, let you go unwhipped for having divulged and ridiculed; for the construction see Lane's Gr. 1566, 1568. — Cotyttia: properly the grossly sensual orgies of the Thracian goddess Cotytto, which had been introduced into Athens and so became known at Rome, though they had not become prevalent there at this time. Canidia is represented as pursuing her questionable practices under this high-sounding but unsavory name. Where Horace had exposed these orgies does not appear; there can be no allusion to any of his extant poems.

58. Esquilini: i.e. such as is practiced there; cf. venenis Colchicis, 35. — pontifex: the meaning is obscure; either she taunts him with being an adept in sorcery himself, or with assuming authority over a matter in which he had no right to meddle; cf. curiosus, 77. The latter is substantially the explanation of Porphyrio.

59. ut urbem, etc.: referring to S. I. 8.

60. quid proderit, etc.: i.e. what was the use of my learning sorcery, at great expense, and surpassing my teachers in skill, if I fail to apply it at a time like this, when you have so wronged and insulted me? — Paelignas: see vs. 28 n.

61. velocius: i.e. in its effects. We speak of a 'slow poison,' 'a rapid fever,' 'galloping consumption.'

62. sed tardiora, etc., but (no velox toxicum is in store for you) a more lingering, etc. — fata: cf. C. III. 11. 28; Intr. 128. — votis (sc. tuis): cf. 70 sqq.; Intr. 75.

63. in hoc (acc.): directing attention emphatically to her savage purpose in prolonging his life; cf. ad hoc, S. II. 1. 36.

64. novis: i.e. new kinds of. Cf. C. II. 15. 20. — ut usque suppetas, that you may be always on hand as a subject for.

65. optat quietem: cf. otium rogat, C. II. 16. 1, and note the different form of anaphora (Intr. 116 g) in the two places. — infidi: as having cheated his charioteer, Myrtilus, by whose aid he had won Hippodamia, out of his promised reward, and thrown him into the sea; cf. periuri Pelopis, Cat. 64. 346. — pater: see C. I. 28. 7 n.

66. benignae, generous; spread in profusion before him. Cf. benignius C. I. 9. 6 n. — dapis: Intr. 66 c.

67. obligatus: in a literal sense, bound upon (so as to be exposed to).

68. supremo : poetical for summo. Cf. clamore supremos | implerunt montis, Verg. G. IV. 460. — Sisyphus : see C. II. 14. 20 n.

70. turribus : Intr. 70.

71. ense Norico : cf. C. I. 16. 9 n. — pectus recludere : cf. Verg. A. X. 601 pectus mucrone recludit; Juv. 4. 110 iugulos aperire.

72. vincla, a rope. Intr. 128, 183. — gutturi nectes : cf. C. I. 29. 5; Ep. I. 19. 31 nec sponsae laqueum nectit.

73. fastidiosa : in an active sense, as in C. III. 29. 9.

74. vectabor, etc. : she will finally compel him to acknowledge her mastery in the most humiliating manner. Cf. the scene in Plaut. Asin. 698 sqq. — inimicis, of my foe, i.e. the poet; Intr. 124.

75. meae insolentiae : in prose, mihi insolenti; cf. tuae superbiae, C. IV. 10. 2 n. — cedet : i.e. will give way under my feet (as I rise into the air).

76. an, etc. : cf. 6. 15 sq. — movere, make move (as if they were alive). — cereas imagines : cf. S. I. 8. 30 sqq., Verg. E. 8. 80 sq.

77. ut ipse, etc. : alluding to his account in S. I. 8. In this charge of eavesdropping he puts into her own mouth an unconscious indirect confession of the accuracy of his report.

78. deripere lunam : cf. vs. 5 and 5. 46 n. — vocibus : cf. vs. 6 n.

79. possim : Intr. 116 h. — excitare (to call up) mortuos : cf. S. I. 8. 29, 41.

80. desideri pocula : cf. amoris poculum, 5. 38, and the description of one there given. — temperare, brew; cf. C. I. 20. 11 n.

81. te : better taken as ablative, in your case, in contrast with all others. — nil agentis : proleptic : (proving) ineffective. — exitus : here (with plorem) virtually equivalent to 'failure.'

CRITICAL APPENDIX.

FOR a detailed account of the manuscripts, and a copious apparatus criticus of the Odes and Epodes, the student is referred to the first volume (by Otto Keller; 2d ed., 1899) of the larger edition of Keller and Holder, with Keller's Epilegomena. For the convenience of those to whom these works are not readily accessible a selection of the more important and interesting variants from the text of this edition is here given. Sources are indicated as follows:

M^o denotes the unanimous testimony of the MSS.

M, clear preponderance of manuscript testimony.

m, good manuscript support.

m, slight " "

B, the four Blandinian MSS.

B^v, the Blandinius vetustissimus.

(Where B or B^v is added, M^o, M, etc. refer to existing manuscripts only.)

In addition to the MS. tradition of the poems themselves, reference is sometimes made to evidence found in the commentary of Porphyrio (Porph.), or in other Latin grammarians and commentators (gr.).

In citing these various authorities discrepancies of spelling are disregarded.

Conjectures are usually credited to their authors.

The text of this ode is suspected for several reasons: (1) It is the only ode in which the number of verses is not a multiple of four (see Intr. 157). (2) Verse 17 is open to suspicion, (a) because caesura is neglected; (b) because Carthage was not burned by the Scipio who defeated Hannibal and whose praises were sung by Ennius, but by the younger Africanus (Scipio Aemilianus), many years after Ennius' death. The first of the two objections to vs. 17 is not conclusive; for Horace sometimes neglects caesura, though nowhere else in Asclepiad verse. The historical difficulty is more serious; for although it is possible to understand the words in a sense consistent with the historical fact (see note on vs. 15), their more obvious and natural meaning would expose Horace to the imputation of gross ignorance. There is no sufficient ground for rejecting any other verse, and no just ground for suspicion except in the case of vs. 33, which is a repetition, with only a necessary change in the first word, of III. 25. 20. The attempt has been made, however, to bring the ode into conformity with Meineke's canon in various ways. Vss. 17 and 33 are bracketed by Kiessling; 17 and 28 by Nauck; 15 non—19 rediit, 28, and 33 by Meineke, etc.
